BLOODHOUNDS ON THE TRAIL OF THE HUSBAND

Are Hunting For Man From Midland, Ont., Who is Accused of Murdering His Wife---He Left a Note Saying That He Killed Her.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 9.—The Provincial Police offer a reward of $500 for the arrest of George Reid, wanted on a charge of murdering his wife in a farmhouse near Clayburn on Tuesday. At the inquest yesterday before Coroner Dr. Stewart a verdict of murder was returned, the jury naming George Reid as the suspected murderer. Tuesday was the murdered woman's birthday and the day of the murder. She was 25 years old.

Reid left a letter declaring that he killed his wife because he believed she paid attention to other men and he was insanely jealous of her.

The couple were married thirteen months ago near Midland, Ont., where Reid worked in a sawmill. They then came West, stopping for several months in Moose Jaw.

The tragedy took place at a farmhouse belonging to a man named Hemphill, who leased it to the couple a few weeks ago. A gang of British Columbia telephone linemen were boarders. These men, returning to the house, found the doors locked. They entered a window, and, going upstairs, found the mangled body of the woman, evidently beaten to death with a hammer, and her throat cut with a razor.

WAS PROBABLY CRAZY.

The parents and other relatives of the murdered woman reside at Vancouver. They suggest as a possible solution of the tragedy that the husband was brooding over the death of their baby, which died in Vancouver on August 9, and had gone out of his mind.

The murdered woman was one of a large family of attractive girls, originally belonging to Midland, Ont. On the body was found a blood-spattered badge, "Faith Defenders' Lodge No. 95, Loyal True Blues, Midland, Ont."

ACROSS THE BORDER

Very little is known locally about the husband, who is said to have been a respectable, hard working man. A laborer on a ranch in the vicinity of the tragedy says he saw Reid about 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, making his way towards Abbotsford. He is believed to be on the American side, where a search with bloodhounds has been taken up by the authorities.

WAS IN SALVATION ARMY

Midland, Ont., Sept. 9.—George Reid of New Westminster, accused of wife murder, is about 35 years old. He came to Midland from Saurin some years ago, and for two seasons worked in the saw mill of Chew Bros. About a year ago he married Miss Agnes Houden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Houden, who lived on the corner of Mary and First Streets. Shortly after the marriage the Houden family and Mr. and Mrs. Reid moved to British Columbia. Very little has been heard of them since, until the startling news of the crime reached town.

Reid, it is said, was a quiet, inoffensive, industrious young man, and at one time was a member of the Salvation Army here, and the crime of which he is charged is a great surprise to those who knew him while in Midland.

Reid's father and mother live on the farm at Saurin, near Wyevale.

CUPID USES A ROPE TO CINCH THIS MATCH

Father Tied in House While Daughter Married Suitor to Whom He Objected---New Form of Love-knot---Magistrate Takes a Hand.

BUFFALO, Sept. 9.—Cupid found a way via a rope in the marriage of the daughter of John Droves of 115 Peter Street, to a suitor to whom the father had strong objections.

The couple were married yesterday regardless of his wishes at the outcome was the arraigning of John Droves before Judge Nash in City Court this morning, charged with disorderly conduct. After he told his story the judge thought that Droves had decidedly the worst of the trouble and Droves was let go on suspended sentence.

The beginning of the affair was the difference of opinion between the father and daughter as to whether a certain young man was close to protect her in the game of life. The suitor with some of his friends, it is charged, made an unheralded call upon Mr. Droves and tied him with a heavy rope. Then the party went directly to the church. When they returns of John Droves had a son-in-law.

When he was made aware of the fact he became enraged and started trouble. Then insult to injury! The bridal party had the old man arrested for disorderly conduct.

When Droves left the court room this morning his views of the affair were somewhat changed and he was finally persuaded it would be the right thing to bestow his blessing on the newlyweds.

GOOD EXAMPLE SHOWN BY TOMMY BURNS

Ex-Heavyweight Champion Declined to Retaliate When Opponent on Lacrosse Field Struck Him---"I Try to be a Gentleman" He Says.

More particulars of the lacrosse game at Vancouver on Monday when Tommy Burns, the ex-champion pugilist, played outside home against New Westminster, the Minto Cup holders, reached here today. Tommy did not shine as a lacrosse player, failing to score one of the seven goals, although the Vancouver boy did their best to give him a chance. He, however, gave a remarkable exhibition of self-control when a New Westminster man, George Renn[illegible] struck at him with his stick without cause. Burns coolly put up his hand and held and caught the threatening stick, but used no violence. "I always try to be a gentleman," said Burns after the game, addressing the crowd. "That is why I did not hit that Westminster fellow." Again, during a mix-up in which nearly all the players on both sides were involved, Burns coolly walked away and let them have it out. That's the spirit that might help the N.L.U. to rehabilitate itself.

DIES AFTER SAVING THE LIFE OF HER CHILD

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Ignoring her own peril to save the life of her son, 2 years old, Mrs. Edward Chapman, wife of a man connected with a Douglaston realty company, was burned, to death in her home in Broadway, Little Neck, L. I., yesterday.

The child was burned severely, but it is thought he will recover.

The accident was due to the explosion of an oil stove used by Mrs. Chapman in preparing a midday meal. The child was in her arms at the moment of the explosion and a burst of flame ignited the clothing of mother and baby.

"Save my child!" she cried, as her brother-in-law, Albert Chapman, who was in an adjoining room, appeared. Although her own dress was ablaze, Mrs. Chapman thought only of the flames that were burning the boy. She beat out the fire threatening the child with the assistance of Mr. Chapman. Even as she fought to save the life of the little fellow the flames were biting and searing her own flesh.

Mr. Chapman obtained a blanket and threw it over his sister-in-law. It was found after the blaze had been subdued that the woman had inhaled fire and that death was certain. After six hours of agony she passed away.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN STEEL

To those whose avocation necessitates the use of steel tools, probably the most unique and interesting exhibit at the Toronto International Exhibition was that made by the Canadian Malleable Iron and Steel Company in the Machinery Building. It consisted of a large variety of wood-working steel tools, from a small chisel to the huge planer knife, made from the new Henderson process steel. The exhibit was daily thronged by tool-workers, metal experts and others interested in scientific progress, and wonderment at the marvellous achievement and the possibilities of the process was fully expressed.

All previous processes for the production of steel from mined ore are of an indirect nature, requiring a vast amount of time, labour and money expenditure, and by the Henderson New Method the iron is treated intact and transformed into the finest grade of steel in about four hours. This is not a case-hardening process, as some who have not tested the tools made might suppose, but the genuine elimination of impurities and the impregnation of the necessary carbon to the highest degree of perfection.

The users of high-grade steels, whether carbon or alloy, are almost innumerable, comprising hundreds of different wood-working tools, taps, dies, drills, etc. The steel from which they are made is refined from pig iron at a great expense of labour and fuel. The makers of fine steels begin with the pig, smelted from the best ore obtainable, which costs about 50 per cent. more than coke pig. This is melted in a reverberatory furnace and puddled, that is stirred up by puddlers while molten, in order to expose the metal to the oxygen of the blast. This puddling is continued until the metal becomes pasty, then tough, and finally pulverulent. The air is then shut off and the furnace raised to a sufficient temperature to render the metal pasty. It is then taken out on the end of rods, called blooms, and rolled into muck bars. These bars are re-heated in a reverberatory furnace and rolled into longer, thinner bars. These again are cut up, re-heated and forged, and the operation is repeated as often as three or four times, when it is assumed that the metal is sufficiently free from sulphur and phosporus to be cut into small sections, placed in crucibles, with a definite quantity of carbon, or alloy, melted and poured into ingots for forging into the required forms. The cost of this operation, including as it does the value of the pig, the puddling fuel, the fuel for the several re-heatings, the crucible melting, and the labour that the process requires, is excessive, but only adequate to the means necessarily employed in the production. Is it any wonder then that the price of high-grade steels, including carbon and alloy, ranges from 25 cents to 75 cents per pound and even higher, when adapted to special uses.

With the Henderson Method the iron is purified and recarbonized with one process in about four hours' time. "What does this mean?" It will revolutionize the steel manufacture of the world.

Since the days of Tubal Cain it has been the dream of metallurgists and scientists to evolve a more simple and less expensive method of steel production than has hitherto been known. Millions have been spent on experiments and chemical laboratory resources have been exhausted without attaining the desired result, until the Henderson Process, so recently discovered, has brought realization to the dream of centuries in the time-saving simplicity of manufacture and the superiority of the product.

The initial experiments with this new method were commenced less than one year ago, but with almost the first trial perfection was reached. Exhaustive and crucial tests have since been made with the tools manufactured from the new steel and the result has been of the most satisfactory nature, the achievements showing a greater degree of perfection than was even conceived by the discoverer of the process. There is practically no limit to the uses to which the new steel can be put and the genral reduction which this process will make in the cost will introduce steel into many operations where other material is now used.

For wood-working tools and machinery it is specially adaptable and the tests made in this direction have fully demonstrated to those who at first were skeptical that the tools produced will perform all that is claimed for them, out-lasting and requiring less frequent sharpening than those made from any other steel. Plane-knives made from this steel have been in use for several months in some of the largest wood-working establishments of Toronto and have not shown the slightest degree of impairment, a fact fully substantiated by the testimonials of the users. These facts are rapidly becoming known and since the opening of the Toronto Exhibition orders have been taken to equip upwards of one hundred Canadian wood-working establishments with planer-knives.

All other wood-working tools down to the finest chisel are just as efficient. Interesting tests were made during the Exhibition. Chisels made from ordinary railway spikes were driven into hemlock and hardwood knots, and when withdrawn the edge was keen enough to shave hairs from the back of the hand with the same ease as a freshly honed razor. Tools made from this steel can be so finely tempered that they will cut glass with the facility of a diamond, yet, despite their great hardness, they are in no wise brittle.

The same satisfactory result has been reached with iron-working tools of all descriptions, and, in fact, any edged tool, no matter what material it may be required for, has been found to be equally efficient when treated with the Henderson Process.

The works and laboratories of the Company are at 32 Humberside avenue, Toronto, where demonstrations are made daily. Those interested are cordially invited to visit the establishment. If they will bring their own iron, and have time to wait for four hours, they can take away the piece of steel into which it has been converted and subject it to any reasonable test they may choose. Everything that has been claimed for these goods has been accomplished and a thorough examination and investigation by tool-users and machinery workers is invited.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

LETTERS FROM A SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS WOMAN TO HER NIECE.

DEAR NIECE JOAN:—

Of course I'm glad it's to be stenography and typewriting, both because I started that way, and because I believe there will always be a great call for first class stenographers. What you say you have heard about the field being crowded is all very true. The field is crowded—most fields are—but remember this, niece—the hill isn't. And that's where I expect you to be.

I don't happen to be acquainted with either of the two schools you speak of, but when you say that one of them offers to make you a good stenographer in three months, that settles it. I don't want any introduction to that one.

Never lose sight, niece, of the fact that you can't get something for nothing in this world, and you'll have an axiom that will fit in, in love, and business, and a good many other relations of life.

Your specific training is to be your stock in trade, and if you pay little in time and money for it, you must expect it to be inferior, just as a shopkeeper's would if he didn't pay standard prices.

I had a stenographer once who came from one of those schools and after a few weeks, instead of dismissing her on some pretext as her four previous employers had, I told her the truth and said that I would lend her a hundred dollars and give her a position when she was ready for it, if she would start in all over again and really learn the business. She is one of my best stenographers to-day, but she wasted a year making haste too fast.

Of course I know you are anxious to get to work and earn money, but it's the race to the tortoise every time when preparation is the race track.

You think I'm lucky, niece, because I make better money than most of the men who started out when I did, but it doesn't sound too much like self glorification your aunt would like to tell you that it wasn't all luck.

When I started in to be a stenographer I was in as tight a place financially as anyone could be and then a bit tighter. I had to borrow the money to take the course, and I can tell you it took a good deal of courage to borrow one hundred dollars and spend eight months, when some schools were offering to do it for fifty dollars in three months.

One of my girl friends took a shorter course and tried to persuade me, and I don't think I'll ever forget how I felt when she began earning her eight dollars a week while I was still paying out money.

How I used to envy her the pretty new clothes she kept buying. The only new thing I had that winter was a five dollar coat, the buying of which was such an event in my life that the whole family went in to help me select it.

I can tell you her eight dollars a week looked like a fortune to me then.

But somehow, the twelve dollars a week she is earning to-day doesn't.

You see, niece, you are getting just what you asked for—my honest opinion.

I wonder if you are like most people who only ask your advice in the hope that you will take the responsibility off their shoulders by advising them to do what they want, but know isn't best.

How about it?

Your plain speaking, but affectionate Old Aunt,

Ruth Cameron

A PLEA FOR SUPPORT FOR MISS GLADYS SEWARD

It may not be generally known that last year, through the kindness of interested citizens of Peterborough and Toronto, a fund was raised by which Gladys Seward, a talented child of Peterborough, was sent to study music in Dresden, Germany, under the noted pianist and teacher, Mr. Harry M. Field, he having promised to give her tuition free of charge.

Those interested will be glad to know that she is working most diligently, and that Mr. Field predicts a great future for her, provided she can stay in Dresden as long as necessary, the time required being three years.

Though she only left Canada last November, Gladys Seward has already astonished the musical public of Dresden, but owing to lack of funds it may be necessary to recall her before she has been even one year away. After reading the criticisms and comments below, who is there who will not admit that it would be an actual crime to bring her back and mar such a career as hers should be.

The money comes in very slowly, and it has just lately occurred to those who are taking most interest in the affair, that if more people knew of the good work this child of Peterborough is doing they would heartily respond to the call for money, without which the plans cannot be carried out. We know that there are public spirited citizens who will help in this good work, and we ask all who can help even by small donations, to give what they can at the earliest possible date.

Gladys Seward is a Peterborough child, and her gifted father was for years a resident of Peterborough, and we hope that as Peterborough is one day to be proud of "a pianist of first rank" her people will now do everything in their power to give this great talent a chance.

All information re the fund can be obtained at the Review Office or from Messrs. W. H. Hill and Harry Rush. Below are given a few of the press notices and extracts from Mr. Field's letters:

Donations of any amount will be gladly received, and if only ten of Peterborough's wealthy citizens would each give $100 the entire amount required for the remaining two years would be raised.

Below are several press notices taken from German and New York papers of recent dates, referring to Miss Seward's public a appearances:

The Dresden Daily Record, May, 1910—"Something like a sensation was caused by the playing of Miss Gladys Seward, and only the lack of time induced the audience to refrain from demanding an encore. The 'Chant-Polonais' of Chopin-Liast, and the Troika Fahrt' of Tschaikowsky, both call for no mean standard of technical skill, but the young artist rose to the occasion magnificently. Her finger work was strikingly fine, her tempo good, while the insouciance of youth imparted an additional charm to her performance."

Guide To Dresden, May 28, 1910—"Mention should also be made of a talented young pianist, Miss Gladys Seward, of Canada, who contributed selections from Chopin and Tschaikowsky. Young as she is, she evinces strong musical endowments, intelligence and feeling—as well as natural sense of technical brilliancy—or is it the "fault" of her esteemed teacher, Mr. Harry M. Field, to whose pedagogic powers she certainly does full justice.

The New York Musical Courier, Wednesday, June 8th, 1910—"Perhaps the most pleasing talent of these good pupils is that of Gladys Seward, who gave with great maturity and much musical feeling, as well as with surprising repose and security, the "Chant Polonais" of Chopin-Liszt, and the Troika Fahrt of Tschaikowsky."

The Dresden Daily Record, May 15th, 1910—"Miss Gladys Seward again exhibited her marked talent at the piano, once in solo and on the second occasion with Frl. Korman."

The New York Musical Courier, August 10th, 1910—"Another young talent also deserves notice, and it is that of Miss Gladys Seward, the youthful pianist, who assisted at this concert, and who is a pupil, in piano, of H. M. Field. This is such a marked pianistic talent that it is easy to predict a successful career for her. At the second recital, given in May, she was easily, with Gordon Langlois, the star of the occasion.

In keeping her friends on this side of the ocean apprised of Miss Seward's welfare and progress, Mr. H. M. Field, her teacher, pardons very highly the work she is doing. Following are several extracts from Mr. Field's letters:

January 20th, 1910—"She has an extraordinary talent and with every day I see however a pianist of the first rank. She is showing herself a great girl, and she is working very faithfully. She has astonished me and everyone in the class by her playing of Beethoven's Variations of a Russian dance theme (Bulow-Ausgabe.) She played them almost faultlessly. I am working very hard with her and taking the greatest of pains. I do hope she can stay for at least three years to accomplish what she is capable of doing, as you know this cannot be rushed in a few months; she should have a course just the same as a university student. I am willing to do everything for her in her music in order that Canada may be proud of her. I trust that those who have already helped her so kindly will still do so. This child has a God-given talent, and I consider it a sin not to give her every chance."

(Signed.)

HARRY FIELD.

H. M. Field, May 30th, 1910—"She had great success at Fraulein Gliemann's concert, and she quite astonished many musicians who were there. I have given her the Chopin F. Minor Concerto, which I hope she will have up to play by the fall, and then I want to arrange for her to play it at one of the Symphony concerts next winter. I am sure Gladys will make her name and I am working hard with her."

July 27th, 1910—"Gladys is creating quite a sensation with her playing. She is the greatest talent I ever had."

August 7th, 1910—"She is working well and is making great strides, and I have no doubt but that she will be a first-class pianist. The best player in the Conservatory here played here with Gladys, and Gladys played all around her. I expect Gladys to do wonders."

Marks Bros. No. A-1 Company a Strong Drawing Card

The Marks Bros., No. A-1 Dramatic Company opened a four nights' engagement at the Lowville opera house last evening. With the opening of the doors the S. R. O. sign was displayed, and as an only alternative many remained standing throughout the performance. The only disappointment of the opening night was borne by nearly two hundred persons who were unable to gain admission. This is the first appearance in Lowville of the Marks Bros. No. A-1 Company, and that they will do a capacity business throughout the engagement goes without saying. The company is strong, exceptionally strong, and well-balanced. Last evening "Two Nights in Rome" was presented, and the play afforded an opportunity for the display of elegant costumes and strong acting, both of which was taken advantage of. Passie Mae Lester, the leading lady, portrayed the character of "Stephenie De Mouravart" in a highly praiseworthy manner, and she was admirably supported by Kittie Mark and Lida Gardner. Add J. Shapeley, the leading man, in his stage presence and adaptability reminds one somewhat of Drew and his support, also, is strong. In keeping with the play the specialty acts were A-1 last evening and there will be an entire change of bill each night. The vocal solo work deserves special mention and high commendation.—Lowville Democrat, Lenville, N.Y.

At Grand Opera House, Peterborough, Sept. 15th, 16th, 17th, opening with the refined Southern drama, "Down Where the Orange Blossoms Grow."

SUMMER TIME A TIME OF DANGER

Summer time is a time of danger to all babies—but more especially to those living in the towns and cities where the heat is so excessive as to make it almost impossible to keep baby's food in proper condition. It is then that the little one suffers from those stomach and bowel troubles that carry off so many precious little lives. During the summer the mother must be especially careful to keep baby's stomach sweet and pure and his bowels moving regularly. No other medicine will be of such great aid to mothers in summer as Baby's Own Tablets. These little Tablets never fail to regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and make baby well and happy. Mrs. D. Devlin, St. Sylvester East, Que., says: "I think Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine for little ones for stomach and bowel troubles and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Enthusiasm At Y. M. C. A. Over The Membership Campaign

There is no doubt left in the minds of the officers of the Y.M.C.A. that the membership campaign will be a success. One of the most enthusiastic meetings yet held in connection with the big event, was that of last evening. Mr. C. E. Sisson and his lieutenants have their plans well laid and are all hard at work in all sections of the city. Gradually the names of men are being collected from every possible source until it looks as if every young man, middle aged man, and boy will be approached to become a member of this live organization. They are after 500, and nothing but that number will satisfy them. The building is a hive of industry in the evenings, and young men cannot wait till the campaign opens, but are joining now.

The Social Committee intends to put on a good banquet on the 20th, the evening preceding the opening day. The speakers will be the best to be secured, both local and from outside the city. An admission fee will be charged, so that men may come without feeling embarrassed. Another big popular banquet will be held just at the close of the campaign for all the new members, and this will be one of the best ever held in Peterborough. Remember that this effort is for Peterborough. Every man who has any town pride ought to join in this great effort of the Y. M. C. A.

THE WRONG COAT

Whisky intervened again, and after an absence of many years from the use of liquor, a young man fell, and while in an intoxicated condition he stole or rather by mistake he took, a coat from the hotel which he otherwise wouldn't have done. The young man appeared before his Worship Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning, and pleaded guilty to the charge of taking the coat. His Worship allowed the man to go on suspended sentence, he having to report to the chief of police every three months, after imposing a fine of five dollars and eighty-five cents.

Local Insurance Association Wins The President's Cup

The delegates from the local association to the Dominion Life Underwriters' Association, which met in Toronto this week, have returned home and brought with them the silverware, in the form of a cup, presented by Past President John R. Reid to the association showing the greatest percentage of increase in membership during the past year. As the Central Ontario Association increased 650 per cent. they won the cup. They were closely followed by the eastern township at Sherbrooke Que., by 600 per cent., and they, too, were awarded another cup for their exceptionally good increase.

The meeting just closed was largely attended and an important one to Life Underwriters. A notice of motion was made to have the association incorporated, which if carried out will have a far-reaching effect on the standing of the life assurance man of the future. The association is determined to rid the field of the undesirable men who, through ignorance or intention, misrepresent life insurance.

The cup can be seen in the window of Mr. R. J. Soden's store.

Dinner To Be Tendered By Members Of Local Clubs

The Peterborough Board of Trade and the Peterborough Canadian Club will tender a complimentary dinner to Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, on Tuesday evening next, on the occasion of his leaving the city for Montreal. The event will take place in the Hotel National, at 8 o'clock, and promises to be a most successful event. Mr. Hughes-Charles is a past president of the Board of Trade, and past secretary of the Canadian Club. As his energetic and faithful attention to both bodies is responsible for their present flourishing condition, it is impossible to personally request all the members of the two bodies to whom they are asked to accept this notice as an invitation. Tickets may be secured from Dr. Cameron, E. L. Goswell, W. R. Morris, or the Secretary of the Board of Trade.

EDSON A PLACE OF GOLDEN OPPORTUNITIES

The Edmonton Town Topics says: That Edson must develop into a town of considerable importance is the decision that anyone must come to who has studied the matter of locality and natural resources of the country contiguous thereto.

Here is to be located the first divisional point of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway system west of the City of Edmonton. This in itself means much to any town as with roundhouses, shops, yards and every other contingency appertaining to a divisional point of a great transcontinental railway system considerable population necessarily follows:

As already mapped out branch lines of railway will reach out from Edson to the Brazeau coal fields, and other mineral districts. The enormous deposits of some of the finest coal ever discovered are being opened up in this field, the owners of which are putting several millions of dollars into the development thereof, thus insuring the carrying out of a gigantic industry. Edson is, moreover, the natural junction for a much-needed line of railway into the Peace River and Grande Prairie country, wherein there lie in hundreds of thousands of acres of the finest agricultural land obtainable in the Dominion of Canada, the possibilities of which it would be difficult to estimate.

That the mountains of the Yellowhead district contain immense mineral wealth is past conjecture, large deposits of graphite, mica and other valuable minerals having already been discovered, which, as soon as the transportation facilities of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway are consummated will be immediately developed.

Edson is also contiguous to the vast timber resources of Western Alberta and presents the finest location upon any transcontinental railway line in Canada for the opening up of large wood pulp manufacturing enterprises, where hundreds of the greatest wealth-producing enterprises which Canada possesses, one which is capable of giving employment to thousands of men.

Anyone who will take a map of Western Canada showing the route to be traversed by the great transcontinental railway lines now in course of construction cannot come to any other conclusion than the location of the divisional point of Edson opens up possibilities that are unique and that the township of Edson offers to investors to-day one of the grandest opportunities for investment that any town or city in Canada has ever possessed. Where there are timber, coal and other mineral resources in abundance as exist in the country contiguous to the district referred to with unsurpassed railway facilities, a factory city must of natural consequence arise, and this is always a source of the foundation of wealth.

Take any of the divisional points of the Canadian Pacific trancontinental system and you have an illustration of what may be expected in growth of the divisional points of such an important transcontinental system as the Grand Trunk Pacific, and in Edson in particular you have such a combination of natural resources awaiting development that we venture to say no other divisional point on the whole system possesses.

ENTRIES ARE POURING IN

"I never saw such a crowd of farmers as there were down town here today, trying to climb over each other to get their entries in," remarked Mr. R. H. Leary, president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition when asked this afternoon as to prospects for Peterborough's exhibition. There will certainly be a record number of exhibits and President Leary's statement is not exaggerated. Entries poured in to-day and all records will go by the boards if the rush for entry blanks is kept up next week.

STOMACH DISTRESS IS ENDED FOREVER

Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas or Indigestion Vanish in Five Minutes

Take your sour, out-of-order stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if, within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fulness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in your mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness or many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas, or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself in five minutes that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear or discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Peterborough Players Made Fine Showing In Game At Belleville On Monday Last

Sporting Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The Toronto Star gives a very one-sided account of the final game in the Belleville city league on Labour Day, which was published in your columns last evening. From the write-up given it would appear that the Toronto players participating in the game were about the whole works. As a matter of fact, the two Peterborough players more than held their own with the hand picked bunch, which were gathered together from points all the way from Kingston to Toronto. The Star says that Quinlan was batted all over the lot for 14 hits. This is not right. As a matter of fact the local man outpitched Macdonald for six innings, having the score at one time 6-0 in his favour and at the end of the sixth 6-4 in his favour. At this point, the manager of the Grand Trunks, hoping to outgeneral the Park Nine magnates decided to put in a fresh pitcher. Saunders, of Kingston, who finished the game, allowing the Park Nines to make 3 runs and win the game. The Toronto bunch certainly played good ball, but they were not the only players on the field. O'Brien, who played first for the Grand Trunks, played a grand game and came in for considerable aplause from the fans on account of his good all round work. Both local men made good at the bat. Quinlan smashing out a three bagger in the third, resulting in two runs.

As an interested spectator of this game, I thought it only right that a fair account of facts on both sides should be clearly given.

(Signed.)
SPECTATOR.

MOST REVOLTING CRIME IN ITALIAN VILLAGE

Examiner Special.

REGGIO DI CALABRIA, ITALY, SEPT. 5.—To the vengeance of the Black Hand society is ascribed the revolting murder early to-day of Policeman Rovolino and his wife and six children in the little village of Pellaro, which lies eight miles north of Reggio on the straits of Messina. At two o'clock this morning some of the townspeople of Pellaro were awakened by the shrieks of a child, running out of the cottage occupied by the Rovolino family. They found the three-year-old daughter of the policeman lying dead terribly mutilated by blows from an axe.

The Rovolinos suddenly returned from the United States a short time ago and since then, it is said, two attempts were made to poison them. Rovolino himself spoke of the possibility of vengeance being directed against him. The crime was revolting in its barbarity. Beside the mother lay her four-months-old baby with its skull crushed in. Despite the efforts of surgeons to save the life of the little girl whose cries aroused the neighbourhood, she died. None of the townspeople saw or heard the murderers who escaped from the village without leaving a clue as to their identity.

JUDGMENT AWARDED IN FAVOUR OF THE REAL ESTATE AGENT

The first Division Court since the holidays, was held yesterday before his Honour Judge Huycke. There were about twenty-four cases on the docket. Mr. C. Blewett, real estate agent, sued David Kerr, of Otonabee, for one hundred dollars commission on the sale of a farm owned by the latter. It appears from the evidence that Mr. Kerr met Mr. Blewett on the street and told him he had a farm for sale. Mr. Blewett found a purchaser and sent him out to Mr. Kerr. The man bought the farm, paying $6,800 for it. The commission on farms over $4,000 is $100. The farm was sold through the instrumentality of Mr. Blewett and he claimed his commission. Judgment was awarded in Mr. Blewett's favour for the amount sued for.

PROVINCIAL OPTICAL CONVENTION.

Mr. Browett, of the Optical Institute in our city, has returned from the Provincial Optical Convention held in Toronto and reports two interesting sessions. Representatives were present from London, Toronto, Hamilton, Belleville, Oshawa and Kingston, Ottawa, and many other places. Mr. Wm. Madill and Mr. Browett represented Peterborough optometrists. In addition to election of officers for the ensuing year, considerable business was put through with a view to legislation on optometry requiring a certain government standard of education and the passing of certain examinations under government supervision from all who hereafter practise optometry. This act will not disqualify those who are now in business nor will it prevent the sale of spectacles and eye glasses by those who offer them for sale, when such selection is made by the purchaser without the aid, advice or selection of the seller, but will prohibit the peddling of spectacles from door to door, or house to house through the country. The aim of the convention is to elevate optometry and safeguard the public from incompetent and unqualified men.

ALWAYS ONE PRICE

Mr. M. Pappas, proprietor of the Royal Theatre, states that there will be but one price of admission at the Royal, no matter how large the show or how high the expense of the acts, the price will not change. It will be 10 cents for the evening performance and five cents during the afternoon. He will have the best show in Canada for the price.

HISTORY OF EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS FROM BEGINNING

The gathering of Roman Catholic prelates, priests and laymen in Montreal this week is one of those historical events in a nation's annals, which come but seldom, and when they come are worthy of record.

It is the twenty-first assemblage of the Eucharistic Congress, and from all accounts promises to exceed in brilliance and usefulness any of its predecessors. Many of our readers, may not know of the origin and significance of this great annual event, now in its thirty-first year.

The story of the birth of the Congress is an interesting one, and is told with effect in an article in the Catholic World of New York by Mr. P. W. Browne. The Congress originated in France, but it was really born in Belgium, owing to the disturbed condition of the relations between the church and the French Republic. In 1879 a saintly woman confided to Monsignor de Segur (who is justly termed the apostle of devotion to the Eucharist) the idea of extending devotion to the Eucharistic Christ by means of gatherings, to be convened successively in different countries, in which, for several days, in prayer and study, matters pertaining to the Blessed Sacrament should be discussed. The Bishop at once decided to take up the work, but France was a much disturbed country and it was unwise, he deemed, to hazard the inauguration of such a momentous movement within its borders. He turned to Belgium as a possible cradle land, and the movement soon received the endorsement of the Belgian bishops. But, here again political troubles intervened, and for a while it appeared as if the excited condition of public opinion on the school question would prevent the holding of the congress. Providence, however, willed otherwise. All difficulties were overcome, and the approval of the Holy See having been secured the first Congress assembled at Lille on June 21, 1881.

Since then the Congress has met at Avignon in 1882; at Liege in 1883; at Fribourg in 1885; at Toulouse in 1886; in Paris in 1888; at Antwerp in 1890; at Jerusalem in 1893; at Rheims at 1894; at Paray-le-Monial in 1895; at Brussels in 1897; at Lourdes in 1899; at Angers in 1901; at Angouleme in 1904; at Rome in 1905; at Tournai in 1906; at Metz in 1907; in London in 1908; and at Cologne last year.

It is interesting to note, in passing, that although a great to do was made in certain quarters by the action of the British Government in requesting that the Host should not be carried in procession through the streets of London, when the Congress met in that city, nothing has been said of the fact that the French Government took exactly similar action in 1904 when the Congress was held at Angouleme.

This year the Congress meets under happy auspices. It has gathered in a land with the greatest religious freedom under the sun. Its leaders have been welcomed by the State, and have received kindly courtesies from Protestants of high distinction, while the faithful sons of daughters of the Roman Church are sparing neither time, money nor enthusiasm to make the Congress the success which its importance deserves. As Mr. Browne rightly says:

"This never-to-be-forgotten demonstration is held under the protection of the flag of Protestant England, whose armies vanquished the forces of 'the eldest daughter of the Church' two and a half centuries ago on the Plains of Abraham. France no longer permits public homage to the Eucharistic Christ. England lends protection to the worshipper."

The loyalty of the Canadian children of the Church to the British throne has been strikingly illustrated by the events of the Congress, and that loyalty has been acknowledged in a kindly message from the King himself.

Montreal is rightly proud of the Congress and though many have been the international gatherings which have met within its walls, none of them will be remembered with so much of age meeting of the Eucharistic affection and regard as this coming Congress.

SASKATOON

According to statistics obtained tby he Winnipeg Free Press the average increase in land values alone in eight Western Canadian cit es during the past five years is 562 per cent. and profits of over $100,000,000 (one hundred million dollars) was the result of last year. HAVE YOUR POFITED BY THIS INCREASE ?

The opportunities for profitable investment are greater now than ever. The population of the West is small, but is increasing by leaps and bounds, and soon we shall have cities in the West, almost, if not quite, as large as those in the East. The population now is less than two millions, many of us will live to see a population of forty or fifty millions in this vast country known as Western Canada.

You have undoubtedly many friends who have benefited or will benefit by these increasing values. HAVE YOU, IF NOT, WILL YOU ?

The chance of loss in purchasing real estate in or near a good Western city is eliminated, and, was as certain as anything can be that lots bought "right" adjoining a growing Western city will in a few years make the buyer much money.

Calgary less than three years ago boasted a population of about fifteen thousand, to-day Calgary claims fifty thousand.

The leading wholesale hardware merchant of Canada, having warehouses in the most important western centres, is quoted as saying, when purchasing his site for his Saskatoon warehouse, that he "considered SASKATOON would in a very few years be the largest Canadian city west of Winnipeg." Do you realize what this means ? Will you share in the resulting profit ?

——SASKATOON is the livest City in the West to-day, its citizens are the most energetic and progressive.

——SASKATOON is now a Divisional Point for the :

Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

Canadian Pacific Railway.

Canadian Northern Railway, and will be the terminal for the Hudson Bay Railway.

——SASKATOON has an ideal location from a scenic point of view, and is traversed by the South Saskatchewan River.

——SASKATOON is the centre of the most fertile agricultural portion of Western Canada.

——SASKATOON has already ninety wholesale warehouses & factories.

——SASKATOON is the natural distributing centre for 45,000 square miles of territory on car-loads shipped in, embracing already 155 towns and villages, and :

——SASKATOON is the natural distributing centre for 70,000 square miles on goods manufactured localiy already embracing 213 towns and villages.

——SASKATOON has unlimited electric power obtained from damming the Big South Saskatchewan River. Electricity quickly makesa city in the East and will do so much more quickly in the West where it is not plentiful.

——SASKATOON Census figures tell of the wonderful strides made in the past few years.

| Population in 1903 was..... | 113 |
| Population in 1906 was..... | 3,011 |
| Population in 1909 was..... | 12,100 |

Percentage of increase 10608 per cent., which is equal to the combined percentage of increase of the other largest eleven Western Cities

The population for 1910 is estimated to be 16,000.

——SASKATOON is the EducationalCentre of Western Canada.

——SASKATOON is now having built the Provincial University for which ($2,500,000) two million five hundred thousand dollars has been set aside by the Saskatchewan Government.

——SASKATOON has at present four Public Schools and a Collegiate Institute, each one fo which would compare favorably with any school building in Toronto.

——SASKATOON is the best real estate proposition in Canada to-day.

The Financial Post, in a recent issue, says prices seem to be reasonable at this time.

The property of the Saskatoon-Saskatchewan Land Corporation, Limited, is well located, high, dry and level, within easy reach of the centre of the City. Lots range in price from $125.00 to $250.00 each, according to location.

Payment 25 per cent. cash, balance ten dollars a month on each lot.

WITHIN THREE YEARS EACH ONE OF THESE LOTS SHOULD BE WORTH SEVERAL TIMES THE PRICE PAID.

Inside lots sold a few years ago at these prices are now worth from ten to a hundred times the prices then paid.

The best locations will naturally be taken up first, but every lot, we believe, is a good purchase at the price and terms offered.

Crowds Are Gathering

Twelve Thousand Persons Get Into Notre Dame at Great Mass Gathering—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Gets an Ovation From Canadians—Children Have a Big Parade to Service in St. James' Cathedral.

Montreal, Sept. 10.—It now looks as if a quarter of a million strangers would be in the city on Sunday next. Whole parishes are buying tickets at the railway stations along the line of the C.P.R and the G.T.R., and it may be that when the great procession starts there will be at least a million people in the city or thereabouts.

Father Vaughan is still whacking the non-Catholic, and in fact leading Canadian members of the congress to say that the learned Jesuit did not show good taste in attacking those who have done so much to help along the demonstration.

In the midst of it all comes the announcement that an ex-Italian ecclesiastic, Miraglia Guillotti, will preach here in the Italian Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, the sermon to be preached on "The True Religion of the Eucharist: Destroy the Vatican or Destroy Italy."

Indeed; the history of the congress is a history of crowds. Last night the great temple of Notre Dame, which seats 15,000, was turned for the nonce into a vast amphitheatre, given over to the speech of the laity equally with that of the clergy.

Fully an hour was taken up in seating the assemblage, and at the close ground floor, gallery and side aisles were packed. The speakers addressed their audience from within the space railed off by a brass railing, and rows of chairs within the sanctuary accommodated the principals in the action of this long-to-be-remembered night.

A triumphal peal from the organ announced the coming of the long chain of bishops and archbishops who preceded the cardinal legate, who, as he moved along continually waved his hands, partly in blessing, partly in greeting.

His appearance was the signal for clapping and cheers, renewed again and again as other prominent figures, such as Cardinal Logue and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, came into view. For some time the feelings of the assembly refused to be subdued, and handkerchiefs waved from the standing audience and cheers and clapping continued until the dignitaries were seated.

Bishop Heluyn of Belgium also spoke and declared that Canada had given an example for Christian tolerance the world over, after which Mgr. Bruchesi introduced the Prime Minister of the Dominion, saying that although many congresses had been held, this was the first one addressed by the Premier of the country, which was certainly a good omen for the future of Canada and her citizens.

Sir Wilfrid, who was received with continued applause, appeared to be at his best and nothing indicated that he was tired. The Prime Minister proclaimed himself, not only a Catholic, but a fervent Catholic, and he said the eucharist was the fundamental basis of the Catholic faith, consequently it was right that the faithful of his country should strive for the triumph of that faith.

This has been a day of clouds and sunshine. Beginning with the disappointment occasioned by the inability of having the grand mass at the foot of the mountain, to which so many had looked forward, the day developed, as the morning wore on, with buoyancy and brightness. Though so unpropitious as far as the weather was concerned, the early hours found pedestrians making for Fletcher's Field, where the altar, majestic in its beauty, is erected. By 8.30 a.m., the hour appointed for the mass, thousands covered the field adjacent. Nine hundred singers, members of thirty-nine choirs, had joined for the singing of the plain chant mass of the 2nd tone, but their services were not required that day. An hour after the time appointed word went round that the mass was postponed until the following morning, weather permitting.

By noon the clouds had dispersed, and the sun showed its face. Meantime, on all the streets leading into St. James' square, the children of the city schools were deploying into line to attend the cardinal legate in a special reception given for their benefit.

By two o'clock the congestion about St. James' Cathedral was something wonderful.

As day succeeds day the wonder of the transpiring events becomes more marked, and the children's opportunity of showing their fealty to the Pope's representative, is, in some respects, the most marvelous yet. Thirty thousand is perhaps a conservative estimate of the number of boys and girls in line.

On they came in schools, the boys carrying banners, and the girls in white, many wearing white veils, and carrying small flags and flowers. The youth of Canada's commercial metropolis filled the streets for miles, the last of the children being far away when the first lines received greetings from the cardinal.

To attempt to get into the cathedral would have been folly. So the scarlet canopy was placed outside, before the door, and here the legate smilingly received the little ones. Probably nothing since his coming has pleased him more than the magnificent showing made by the schools of Montreal. From the outskirts of the crowd the voices of the children sounded sweetly in the open air, and the numberless spectators looked with justifiable pride upon the children who form so large a percentage of the future important citizens of Canada.

Liberal Convention

Hon. A. G. MacKay Favors the Adoption of Temperance Plank In the Party Platform — Enthusiastic Gathering of Delegates Is Held In Toronto—The Old Leaders Are Retained by Liberals.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—There will be no provincial Liberal convention for some time, but meanwhile Hon. A. G. MacKay is willing to do all that he can to put life into the party in this province.

"We can't win in the elections unless we have our candidates in the field in reasonably good time," he told the Ontario General Reform Association, in annual meeting yesterday. "And I will personally agree, if necessary, to attend conventions in every one of the 106 ridings before the next election. My time will be at the disposal of the party. But above all things, the party, in or out of power, should take solid and emphatic ground upon every question, and it will be inevitable that good results will accrue to its members and adherents, and to the province at large.

"I should like to see every Liberal candidate in the field before we meet next year. Indeed all ought to be on hand before the printing of the lists in June."

Mr. MacKay, referring to matters of policy, favored standing by local option as against a campaign for prohibition of the liquor traffic.

"The local option movement," said he, "which is a Liberal measure, is admitted by temperance men to be the best thing that the province has ever had. It insures a union of all temperance factors. There has been a slight demand in Ontario for the provincial convention to create a provincial issue on the question of temperance, and on the local option side of the case the candidate can stand on solid ground."

Tried to Import Aliens.

Niagara Falls, Sept. 10—Morris Landenski, Hamilton, was given the alternative of paying a $300 fine or spending three months in jail at hard labor by Magistrate Fraser yesterday, upon conviction on a charge of aiding immigrants to enter Canada illegally. Three men he attempted to bring in, Sam Greenburk, Henry Handelsmann and William Schmittmann, were dismissed. Later they were charged with attempting to gain an entrance to the country after having been rejected by the immigration official Thursday.

Landenski swore that he had been sent from Hamilton Thursday to bring men into the country to act as strike-breakers for the Copley Co. of Hamilton, whose employes are now out on strike with the garment workers.

Halifax Congress Ends.

Annapolis, N.S., Sept. 10.—Here, on the very spot where the lilies of France and the leopards of Britain contended two hundred years ago for the sovereignty of the western world, on the spot where the English history and the civilization of Canada began, were celebrated yesterday the culminating ceremonies of the magnificent bicentenary celebration, that has made the present week an historical landmark not less important, if less outwardly spectacular, than the gorgeous and ever-memorable tercentenary of Quebec.

An Amorous Magistrate.

New York, Sept. 10.—On charges that he caressed 18-year-old May Hickey, who visited his chambers in connection with a case on trial, Police Magistrate E. Gaston Higginbotham was yesterday held for trial in $1,000 bail.

Higginbotham denied the girl's accusations, and when the district attorney began to cross-examine, refused to answer, claiming that he was exempt under the law.

As a Memorial to King Edward.

London, Sept. 10.—The Earl of Plymouth proposes that the Crystal Palace should be made an empire centre at a cost of $3,750,000, as a memorial to King Edward. Amongst suggestions was one that the overseas dominions should erect permanent pavilions there for exhibition purposes.

Crippen Case Adjourned.

London, Sept. 10.—The trial of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, for the murder of his wife, has been adjourned until Sept. 14.—The defence wishes its experts to view the remains before the medical testimony is gone into.

A New Pacific Service.

Semi-Steel Fire-Pot—Not Gray Iron

A FIRE-POT of a furnace should be able to endure tremendous heat and to repel the attacks of sulphur fumes.

The material commonly used for a fire-pot is gray iron. The Sunshine fire-pot is Semi-Steel.

Now, avoiding technical terms, gray iron has what may be called "open" pores. Through these "open" pores the destructive sulphur fumes attack the iron and hasten disintegration.

On the other hand, Semi-Steel is a close-grained material, with a smooth-as-glass surface which practically seals or "closes" up the pores. Semi-Steel easily repels the attacks of gas fumes and thus greatly prolongs the life of the fire-pot.

A Semi-Steel fire-pot weighs 20 per cent. heavier than the same size and pattern in gray iron. It is therefore better able to endure tremendous heat.

Semi-Steel is made by an exclusive McClary process. You can only get a Semi-Steel fire-pot with a McClary furnace. That is one strong reason why you should have the Sunshine installed in your home. Our agent in your locality will tell you many other reasons. Ask him.

Remember, the Sunshine is guaranteed by the largest makers of furnaces in British Empire, to heat your home to your entire satisfaction. 45

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Tex Rickard Says He Will Promote No More

Nevada Plunger Says He Will Confine His Energies in the Future to Mining.

HAS HAD ENOUGH

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 6.—"Tex" Rickard is in town, but the Nevadan, who was the "Man of the Hour" this time two months ago, when he was followed by an army of war correspondents in search of the latest news regarding the big "battle," has lost his magnetism. He no longer is bothered with questions, and his actions do not interest the public, except with reference to the moving pictures of the Fourth of July "foozler." "Tex" has plenty of time to sleep nowadays, and his telephone doesn't ring at all hours of the night, while there are no crowds hovering near him as he wends his way through the lobby of the hotel. The promoter of the "fight of the century" is in eclipse.

Rickard says there is no truth in the statements that he has purchased the picture rights in California, although he acknowledges that he negotiated with the moving picture people for a syndicate of men in the southern portion of the state, A. W. Scott, a mining man, being at the head of the concern.

TO SHOW FILMS

"Tex" says $13,440 was the price paid for the state rights and two films, and that an attempt will be made to show them in the various cities. Rickard declined to make any definite statement regarding the rumor that is afloat to the effect that an injunction will be asked for in San Francisco to prevent interference on the part of the police when the pictures are ready to be exhibited to the people. It is the general opinion, however, that this is the real object of Rickard's visit at this time, and that he will sound the officials before making any arrangements to throw the pictures on the canvas. With San Francisco and Los Angeles cut out of the tour, it wouldn't be a very profitable proposition, even if the officials of the smaller cities in the state saw fit to permit them to go ahead and exhibit the pictures.

If the legality of the law is to be tested, San Francisco will undoubtedly be the battleground. Mayor McCarthy has gone on record on the question. He is opposed to the pictures being shown, and with the officials making a determined effort to stop the promoters it doesn't look very rosy for "Tex" and his syndicate.

Rickard claims that the trust is doing well with the pictures in the east, and that the state rights are rapidly being disposed of, Illinois alone bringing $60,000. "Tex" still has a one-twelfth interest in the pictures, out of which, he says, a profit of $12,000 has been received.

Two of the principal figures in the Reno bloomer will not bother the fight public in the future, unless they emulate Patti, the songbird. "Tex" says that he s through with the game and that Jeffries is also out of it for all time.

The promoter saw quite a lot of Jeffries in the south, and although he says Jeffries is regaining his good spirits and is once more in perfect health, he has no intention of trying to wrest the title from Johnson.

STILL CRIES "DOPE"

"Jeffries has a lot of money and isn't worrying about the championship title," said Rickard. "He has no desire to go through the siege of another training spell, and when I asked him about a return match he told me that there was nothing doing. Jeff still is of the opinion that an Oakland man who wagered heavily on Johnson doped him before the fight, although I don't think he was tampered with, but that his poor showing was due to a nervous collapse. Personally I'm through with the promotion of fistic enterprises, and in the future will devote my time and attention to the mining business."

Pitchers Should Be Given A Much Heavier Penalty

Several Heavy Swatters Have Lost All Courage After Having Been Hit by a Pitched Ball.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

Is not the penalty imposed upon pitchers for hitting batsmen altogether too trivial? Should not these boxmen, who already have all the best of it on opposing batsmen, be made to suffer more severely for their wildness and something more than the granting of one base be made the consequence of their erratic aim?

This is a question that has already caused considerable discussion in big league circles. The frequency with which batsmen have been hit and the temporary loss to some clubs in the race through injury to valuable players have already urged the managers of the clubs in both leagues to suggest that some change be made in the rules that may have a tendency to counteract the wildness of certain pitchers.

MANY PLAYERS INJURED

Through being hit by fast pitched balls some of the greatest batsmen and players in the game have been permanently disabled or slowed up in their work. In the old days John Burdock, always a .300 hitter, fell away off in his hitting and just before he retired from the game was the weakest batsman on his team. Freddie Parent was never seen as good as before he was hit by a pitched ball.

Dannie Hoffman was wiped by Jesse Tannehill, almost killed, and has never again been able to face a left-handed pitcher with any confidence. Birde Cree of the Highlanders has put on the injured list for a long time through the same cause. Lord had his finger smashed last season and was laid off, and a few weeks ago Johnson smashed the Boston captain's fingers with one of his fast inshoots.

Inasmuch as this seeming wildness is something ntentional it is about time that the pitcher be made to suffer a requisite penalty for his poor aim.

Not that the pitcher intentionally tries to hit or cripple a batsman, for no one imagines that a twirler would be so foolish or brutal as to injure an opponent. It is simply that desire to "put the fear of the Lord" in the batsman that has so much to do with a pitcher's erratic aim.

Oftentimes when a batsman assumes the position to hit the pitcher sends the first ball in just as fast and as close to the batsman as it is possible to deliver it. His intention is to shake the confidence of the hitter and make him back away. He figures that the next ball he can curve over and thereby get the batsman in the hole.

Wagner, Cobb, Mike Kelly Three Best, Says Mack

Manager of Athletics Says These Three Are the Greatest Players —Kelly the Best of All.

KNEW GAME THOROUGHLY

PHILADELPHIA, SEPT. 7. — Who are or were the three greatest players in the world?

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics and acknowledged one of the shrewdest and most observing of all baseball students, picks King Kelly to represent the silent majority, Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers for the American league and Honus Wagner of the Pittsburg Pirates for the National.

Manager Mack favours Kelly for all the honours, but admits that Wagner and Cobb give the former star a hard race for the title. Connie was asked point blank, "Who is the greatest ball player in the world?" "Mike Kelly," came the prompt reply from the attenuated manager.

"I've seen them come and I've seen them go in my baseball service, and the three greatest of all are Mike Kelly, Ty Cobb and Hans Wagner. And of these three Mike was the greatest.

"Kelly knew everything. He could catch, play first, get into the coacher's box, and pitch in a pinch—and do anything in the individual rules as well as the stars. He knew more baseball than any man who lived, and he had more brains than any other player. Talk about base stealers! Why, you could put the ball in front of Kelly by 20 or 30 feet, but he would make that bag with his peculiar twisting style. The baseman could not touch him, and when he straightened up there was Mike perched on the base.

"Trick plays were his specialty, and he was always pulling off something that puzzled even the umpires, and they had to allow the play to go Kelly's way because they did not know what else to do.

"Plays that are pulled off to-day as wonderful were invented by Mike and used by him. He was a slow runner and still a better base stealer never lived. His head was filled with brains and he knew how to use them.

"Of the present day players, Wagner and Cobb excel in their two leagues. Wagner is a general all-around man, a strong hitter, though down a little now. Cobb is a star and can play almost any position in the in or out field. Wagner can do the same.

"Cobb is quick in thinking and pulls off brainy plays. The Dutchman Wagner looks slow and ponderous, but let me tell you that Honus possesses plenty of brains and uses them, while his natural ability stands him in stead, both on the field and at the bat.

"Of the three players I take Kelly first, and the partisan of either league can pick either Cobb or Wagner and have a great player in each."

DUST FROM THE DIAMOND

New York (American): Since Ear Garnder has returned to the game he has played that bag at second as good as any in the business. He made some plays in the Athletic series that were wonders.

The Yanks, fighting for second place and playing the soon-to-be champions of the league, drew between 5,000 and 6,000 at New York, while the Giants, almost counted out of third position, and meetng the tailenders, got less than 500.

The census reports, as near as they can be footed up at present, show that the Eastern League is the real whale among the minors, and that it completely overshadows its one rival, the American Association.

At the recent drafting of players at Cincinnati the eNw York and Brooklyn aNtionals and the St. Louis, Boston, Cleveland, New York and Detroit Americans all tried to cop Manush, the New Orleans player. The New York Nationals won out in the drawing.

Guess Connie Mack didn't know what he was doing when he traded off a couple of bench warmers for Briscoe Lord this summer. Lord has improved the Athletics' outfield fully 25 per cent., Cleveland fans tear their hair every time they look at a box score of a Philadelpha game.

New York Globe: Dick Rudolph, drafted from Toronto, is a New York boy, and it was on recommendation of Joe Kelly that he was grabbed. Rudolph has been with the Maple Leafs four seasons. He will get a thorough trial, and if he doesn't stick, Kelly probably will get him again.

After the vitrolic Baltimore days when they did everything to an umpire but flay him alive, the new regime was inaugurated, and when Joe Kelley came dashing in from the outfield the umpire majestically waved him to the club house on the run. Nowadays Joe doesn't even get started before they can him.

A New York scribe went to sleep the other afternoon and dreamt that Fred Mitchell of the Highlanders is a born politician, and that he is the political boss of th eTwenty-fifth Ward in Boston. Fine bull stuff. But the scribe evidently made aimstake. He probably means the "Forty-fifth Ward," which is located about eight miles off Cape Cod, in the Atlantic ocean.

In the rain on Tuesday Right Felder Goode of Baltimore hit the hull sign in right field with a line drive and earned $50. Ernest Courtney of Providence was the only other Eastern League played to succeed in driving the ball far enough to hit the hull on the fly previous to Goode's terrific drive. Last year Myron Grimshaw hit the post that supports the sign, but didn't get the money.

Detroit Journal: Cobb has been the leading batsman of the major leagues for several seasons. In all that time he has used but one eye—his left—in batting. The left eye is only normal; the right eye is normal horizontally, but near-sighted vertically. He does not use the right eye in hitting. If Cobb can lead both leagues batting with one normal eye, what could he do if both eyes were gifted with keen sight?

Catcher Heine Peits, manager of Louisville last year and a part of the present season, starred in a new role Tuesday. Portsmouth, having taken three straight from Lancaster, Peits, manager of the latter team, decided to pitch the last game himself. He held Portsmouth to three hits in eleven innings, the game being a tie, 2 to 2. Peitz allowed one hit in nine innings. He gave four passes, but had two th

In the prime of his powers, Rube Waddell, the greatest left-hander who ever lived, was pitching to Monroe, the peerless negro player, in a semi-pro game. Rube sent the ball whizzing over the plate with blinding speed. Monroe never moved as the leathern bullet passed him, but turned to the umpire and humourously remarked, "Did the ball pass, Mr. Umpire?" To wash the cobwebs from the arbitrator's confused brain the colored athlete added: "Ah thought Ah heard it by, but Ah didn't see it."

CRICKET

An international cricket match which was to be played at Philadelphia on Monday and Tuesday next has been called off as it was impossible to get a representative team to play for this country against the United States. Dr. Dean, President of the Canadian Cricket Association, and the Philadelphia Club last night took the action taken.

Despatches past Dr. Dean and Mr. G. [illegible], the President of the Eastern Canada Cricket Association, have been trying to get a team together, their efforts did not meet with success. The Zingari trip to England and the recent visit of Dr. Dean [illegible] to Chicago is given as the possible reason for the inability of numbers of the players wanted to [illegible] Philadelphia.

The international match was played in 1844. The regular annual fixtures began in 1879 and with the exception of two years, 1887 and 1889, it has been played over since. Of the 41 matches played the United States has won 13 and Canada 13, while two were drawn.

Dr. [illegible] said last night that it was to be greatly regretted that Canada was unable to send a team and that this year's match had to be called off. "I have no reason to believe," he said, "that the match will not be played next year."

TOOK CONNIE MACK FIVE YEARS TO MOULD HIS TEAM

It takes five years to build up a contender for the baseball supremacy of the world. Connie Mack, than whom there is none wiser in the baseball business, was manager of the team that represented the American League in the world's series of 1905. He is at the head of the team that will endeavour to prove to the world next month that the class of the American League is superior to that of the National. Connie appears to have the team this year to make good where the Detroit Tigers failed so ignominiously three years in succession.

Mack has ever been on the alert to bag new and promising players, but the records prove that it took him just five years to build up the greatest machine that has ever represented a city in the American League. The Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and Detroit teams that have won flags in the days gone by in Ban Johnson's organization do not compare with the wonderful outfit of McGillicuddy.

The Athletics of 1903 batted at a 253 clip. The Mackmen of to-day are hitting almost 40 points better. The defensive play of the league leaders is even better than in the days when the wonderful Crosses, Lave and Monte, dared the opposing batters to drive a ball anywhere between third and second, and notwithstanding that Danny Murphy was at second and Harry Davis at first. Hartsel, Lord, Hoffman and Seybold were the outfielders, Waddell, Bender, Henley, Plank, Coakley and Dygert the pitchers, and the late Mike Powers, Shreck and Barton the catchers.

OLD PITCHERS STANDBYS OF TO-DAY

A number of these players are still in harness, but who is there that dare say that the Bender of to-day is not a better pitcher than he was five years ago, that Eddie Plank has deteriorated in the least, that Jack Coombs does not stand out as a superior pitcher to any other on the Mack staff of 1905, and that Cy Morgan is not a closer runner-up to the other three?

The one big thing in favor of the Athletics this year is that they have no pitcher of the Rube Waddell stamp, whom five years back Connie Mack could not trust in the series with the Giants.

Frank Baker has it head over heels over Lave Cross at third base. Jack Barry may not possess the same amount of gray matter as Monte Cross, but he is his superior in mechanical ability. Eddie Collins is a better second sacker than Danny Murphy ever was, even in the palmiest days of his career, and Connie Mack thought well enough to keep Danny on second year after year, after he lost Lajoie. Davis has gone back a little, but he is the ideal man to steady the kid infield.

Bristol Lord is better to-day than he was five years back, else Connie Mack would not have broken his ironclad rule not to take back a player he has once disposed of. Murphy is a much better fielder than Socks Seybold, has more nerve and is hitting the ball as hard as ever. No one will dispute the claim that Rube Oldring looks classier than Danny Hoffman or Topsy Hartsel.

Ira Thomas, Paddy Livingston and Jack Lapp are surely an improvement over the 1905 catching staff. Doc Powers was a brainy catcher, probably excelling any man on Connie's staff to-day, but he could not hit. Shreck was a fair man, but not as good as Thomas and Paddy.

SAM LANGFORD TO CAMP ON JOHNSON'S TRAIL

(BY UNITED PRESS)

BOSTON, Sept. 9.—Flushed with his decisive victory over Joe Jeannette, Sam Langford, through his manager, Joe Woodman, said to-day that he will at once get after Jack Johnson. He will camp on the trail of the champion and endeavor to self. This message, which was received assurances from the National Sporting Club officials in London that it would offer a substantial purse for a match between Johnson and himself. This message, which wa areceived just before the men came together last night, had a good deal to do with Sam's aggressiveness.

Langford was in fine fettle to-day, but Jeannette showed the effects of the heavy punishment he received. Jeannette was not a punching bag by any means. In the main, Joe confined himself to straight lefts to the body and kidneys, with short right-hand jolts mixed in from time to time.

Joe showed to advantage when they were holding in close quarters. Sam used both hands to good advantage and shot many a blow into Joe's midsection that stung. Neither man was knocked down, but several times during the last five rounds Joe showed signs of weakening. Joe was a head taller than Sam and weighed 176 pounds to Langford's 170, and it was this fact that saved the former from a knock-out. He took punishment surprisingly well.

After the third round, however, there was never any question of Langford's superiority. When Charlie W. White lifted Sam's glove at the end of the fifteenth round as evidence that he had won, the crowd applauded strenuously. It was a popular decision.

SOME BASEBALL YARNS

Joe Corbett, Jim's younger brother, was the coolest ball player that ever lived. They tell this story of him during the game between Baltimore and Cleveland in the Temple Cup series some years ago:

Corbett was pitching for Baltimore and in the eighth inning the score was 3 to 2 in Baltimore's favor. Cleveland had only one man out, and, with two men on bases, Jesse Burkett, who was then the National League champion hitter, came to bat. Every one expected him to drive in at least one of the runs and possibly two. It was a scene of the wildest excitement—every one was insane except Corbett. He went on chewing gum as nonchalantly as ever.

Burkett hit the first ball that came along for a slow little bunt along the first base line. Corbett and the catcher both went after it until it ran just over the line and was declared a foul.

Corbett picked up the ball, and as he was turning to walk back to the box the catcher took him by the arm and began to talk to him in a reassuring manner.

"It's all right, Joe. You've got 'em all going. Those men on the bags are afraid to move, and that big stiff at bat couldn't hit you in a month. You've got him winged for fair. Now, keep cool. Don't get nervous and we've got the game."

"I'm not nervous," said Joe, as he started away. "The only thing that's worrying me is whether I ought to wear a blue tie or a brown one with my new suit."

By De Wolf Hopper

Young Delehanty's retort to an umpire is a baseball classic. Delehanty came from one of the small leagues and was being tried out on a big league team.

It's not an uncommon trick for a new player who can't hit the high class pitchers to pretend that he's being robbed by the umpire. Delehanty was scared and couldn't hit the moon this day if it had walked by. The first ball pitched went right over the plate.

"Strike," called the umpire. Delehanty merely looked at him reproachfully, smiled sadly and waited for the next.

"Strike," again called the umpire. Delehanty laid down his bat, stepped away from the plate and looked at the crowd in the grand stand as if to say, "You see, he's robbing me."

Then the umpire got mad. He knew the young player was trying to put him in bad with the crowd.

"Say, young feller," he cried, turning to Delehanty, "you can't work that gag with me; it's been tried on every player from the tall timber for the last ten years. That last was a strike, see? S-t-r-i-k-e. Strike! Understand? It cut that corner of the plate right there, and all there is to it, see? A plate's got corners, you know, and that ball went right over the corner—the corner of the plate—see?"

"Sure, I see," muttered Delehanty. "It's all right about a plate having corners, Mr. Umpire, but I ain't never seen one with bay windows."

NOW HAS STRONGER HITTING TEAM

The New York Giants of five years back were the equals of the Chicago Cubs of the present day. They had two pitchers in Mathewson and McGinnity, with whom no pair of 1910 Cub twirlers compare. The Giants won the championship series, four games to one, chiefly because of Mathewson's great pitching. Big Six shut out the Mackites three times, while McGinnity shut them out in the game he won. Bender beat McGinnity in the second game of the series 3 to 0.

The Athletics with a stronger hitting team in 1910 than in 1905, will not be called upon to stack up against pitching in the coming world's series that compares with that which the poorer team faced five years back. That is one of the reasons why Connie Mack's boys should land the world's banner for old Uncle Ben Shibe.

NOTES FROM THE GRIDIRON

Ottawa Citizen: Take it for granted that Ben Simpson, the greatest punting half back in the Big Four, will again play wth the Tigers this season, notwithstanding reports to the contrary.

Simpson was one of the Tiger delegates to the annual meeting of the Interprovincial Union.

"Going to play this year, Ben?" was shot across the table while Billy Johnston and Joe Wright were discussing dates.

"Not if I can avoid doing so," replied the Tiger star. "I will not play unless the Tigers cannot possibly do without me."

At the same time Ben added that he never felt in better condition in all his life. And from other remarks dropped by Dave Tope it seems altogether likely that Ben will be on the job when the Ottawas go to Hamilton on October 8.

It is likely that oDn Cameron, a former officer of the Tigers and one of the men behind the Hamilton Rowing Club, will be president of the new terHamilton Rugby Club, with R. H. Foster, secretary-treasurer and Gordon Nelson as manager. Nelson is taking a great interest in the proposition and a practice has been called for this afternoon at the cricket grounds, with Nelson in charge.

Ottawas did not appoint Alf. Smith coach last night, as was expected. "Pud" aHmilton is talked of, but Hamilton Tigers want him, too.

The organzation meeting of the new Hamilton senior team, called Thursday night, was postponed to allow the Hamilton Rowing Club to take the matter up.

Hamilton rumor still says Binkley and Craig will play with Tigers.

In Hamilton they have the U.S. "poundage" idea of junior rugby leagues. The juniors play in 110 or 125-pound leagues, as the case may be. It is a good idea for Toronto to take up.

The members of teams that will play in the O.R.F.U. this fall constitute a record for the Ontario union, as well as any other recognized organization in the Dominion. Never since its inception will so many clubs have been members of the O.R.F.U. In fact, the junior series will be so large that the schedules in many of the groups may have to start on Sept. 24 to enable the championship to be determined before winter sets in.

Stratford is talking of an O.R.F.U. junior team. They have lots of old country players.

T.A.A.C. will held their first practice of the season either Monday or Tuesday afternoon, at Bayside Park. As there will be keen competition for places this fall, intendng players should turn out right at the start.

Gall at right half, Dixon at full and Foulds at quarter will be the nucleus of the Varsity back division this fall.

Kingston Limestones want to join the Big Four Intermediate series with Tgers II. and Dundas.

Varsity rugby practices have been called for Sept. 19th.

WEDDING BELLS

GIBSON—PARRINGTON.

The wedding was solemnized in Toronto on Wednesday, Sept. 7, of Miss Alice M. Parrington, Aylmer street, to Mr. Ernest Gibson, son of Mr. John Gibson, Parnell. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Dixon, of Trinity church, Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson will reside in Toronto.

BALDRY—HALES.

The marriage took place very quietly this morning at the Charlotte St. Methodist parsonage, of Miss Edith Maud Hales to Mr. Ernest Baldry, both of this city. The young couple were unattended, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. Langford. Mr. and Mrs. Baldry will reside at 183 Romaine street.

SHAW—THOMASON.

Peterborough citizens generally will be interested in the following account of the marriage of Captain Shaw, formerly of the 3rd Dragoons, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shaw, of Otonabee. The Winnipeg Free Press says:

A quiet wedding took place in All Saints' church early yesterday morning, when Emily Katherine, daughter of the late George Thomason, of Brogboro manor, Bedfordshire, Eng., and Mrs. Thomason, now of Winnipeg, was married to Captain Alfred Ernest Shaw, of Strathcona's Horse, Royal Canadians. The Rev. F. C. C. Heathcote performed the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by Captain Ketchen, wore a smart, tailor made suit of cream serge, the coat opening over a white lingerie waist with a cloche turban of red Paisley silk, faced with deep red velvet and wreathed with a feather in the dull red shades. The groom was attended by Captain Conger.

Mrs. Thomason wore a handsome gown of black rajah silk, trimmed with black lace, with a yoke of cream lace, and a black and white hat. Captain and Mrs. Shaw left on the eight o'clock train for a short visit at the Lake of the Woods, and on their return will reside at 363 Broadway.

Many beautiful gifts were received; among them a silver tray, from the officers of Strathcona's Horse.

ELLIOTT—HOWSON.

On Wednesday, Sept. 7th, at 12.30, the Norwood Methodist Church was the scene of a pretty and interesting wedding, when Mary Elizabeth Howson, was married to Mr. Laurie Benjamin Elliot, C.E., of Calgary, Alta. Rev. W. Benj. Tucker, B.A., B.D., pastor of the church, was the officiating clergyman. The floral decorations were beautifully arranged. The altar presented a picturesque appearance, with its wreath of asparagus fern brightened by a wealth of white asters and other autumn blooms. Various ferns, potted plants and stately palms formed a suitable background. To the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, charmingly played by Miss Pleda Howson, the bridal party entered the church, and proceeded to the altar.

The bride was given away by her father. She looked lovely in a very handsome costume of cream liberty satin en traine—embroidered in seed pearls with yoke and sleeves of carrickmacross lace with a surplus bodice effect, pleated girdle, with a cabochon of pearls and falling in directoire line with a fashionable over dress of embroidered chiffon. The bridal veil was caught with a chaplet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of cream in France roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Edith Elliott, of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, and Miss Anna Howson. Miss Elliot wore a perfectly fitting gown of cream silk, finished with rich trimmings of embroideries and laces. Miss Anna Howson was dressed in Nattier blue satin with baby Irish lace yoke and sleeves edged with same. Black hats and ostrich [illegible] of the Bank of Montreal at Stirling, attended the groom. Dr. O. C. Howson of Kalamazoo, Michigan, and Mr. George A. Howson, manager of the Union Bank at Carleton Place, were the ushers. At the conclusion of the ceremony Miss Howson played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. During the signing of the register Miss Jean Robson sang "O Perfect Love" in a pleasing voice.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Queen street.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Alfred Elliot, of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, mother of the groom, and by Mrs. W. R. Howson, mother of the bride. Mrs. Elliot wore a very rich costume of black silk with net yoke, sleeves and black hat to correspond. Mrs. Howson wore a pearl gray messaline satin gown, and black sequin hat.

After congratulations had been received a dainty dejeuner was served. The bride's table was inviting with the prettiest of wedding cakes as a centre and place bouquets of white and green. Exquisite tendrils of Alabama smilax were gracefully twined around wide satin streamers, which descended from the electrolier and ended in rosettes at the corners of the snow white cloth. The color scheme of green and white was artistically carried out throughout.

Several miniature tables similarly arranged with clusters of autumn blooms and southern greenery were arranged.

When the guests were partaking of the dainty refreshments Miss Pleda Howson and Miss Eva Martin played some pleasing instrumentals and Miss Eileen and Miss Gertrude Howson contributed some enjoyable vocal selections which were much appreciated.

At the conclusion of the wedding breakfast Rev. W. B. Tucker proposed a toast to the bridal party. The groom responded in a very able manner. Brief and appropriate addresses were given by Mr. J. B. Pearce, J. Thompson, M.P.P., and Mr. W. E. Hawton.

A NOVEL EXCUSE

Man Charged With Stealing Dress Pleads Mistaken Identity

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—A prisoner at one of the police courts charged with theft has just put forward a novel excuse for his action. It was alleged that he had attempted to steal a dummy and the dress shown upon it from a linen drapers' shop.

The prisoner, by name Francois Brigaux, an electrician, tried to induce the magistrate to believe that it was all a mistake. He had had a glass or two, he said, and as it was past eight at night, his sight got a bit blurred with the darkness.

"Strolling along," he added, "I saw a smart girl, and when I got nearer, I recognized her. 'Hello,' I said to myself, 'there's Fifine, and got up no end.' Fifine, I should explain, is my best girl. 'Hello, Fifine,' I said, 'what swells we are,' and got my arm round her waist. I lifted her off her feet, and was going to kiss her. Then I found it was not Fifine at all, but a lay figure to show off a dress.

"Just at that moment the shopman happened to look round, and thought I was making off with the dummy. He shouted 'Stop thief,' and I was run in."

Unfortunately for Francois, the magistrate pointed out that the lay figure had no head, and Fifine, he trusted had. His mistake was, therefore, discourteous to that lady, if for no other reason, and he must undergo three months' imprisonment.

A Horrible Death.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Two women and a man were burned to death in South Chicago Thursday night when the automobile in which they were riding, and which was speeding at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, collided with a train of three moving caldrons of molten metal and slag on 104th street, near an entrance to the Illinois Steel Co.'s plant. A third woman was seriously, but not fatally burned.

Committed for Trial.

St. Catharines, Sept. 10.—John R. Shea was committed for trial yesterday afternoon on a charge of making false entry with the Williams Sewing Machine Co., regarding the sale of a sewing machine, made by Shea, when in the company's employ. It is alleged that Shea sold the machine for $20, and filed a lease with the company for $40, in order to obtain a larger commission.

Fear Tug Was Lost.

Ashtabula, Ohio, Sept. 10.—Fear prevailed here yesterday that the fishing tug Ciscoe of Cleveland was lost in the northwester which swept Lake Erie Thursday and Thursday night. The Ciscoe left Ashtabula harbor at ten a.m. Thursday to pull nets sixteen miles out in Lake Erie, and was expected back in the afternoon, but has not been heard from.

Hold Up Automobile and Relieve Inmates of Their Cash, Jewellery and Valuable Papers.

USED DANGER SIGNAL

Examiner Special.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., SEPT. 12.—In broad daylight on a much travelled river road just a few miles out of here and less than fifty miles from New York three prominent residents of this city were held up in touring car by masked bandits and robbed of $175 in cash, all their rings, watches and any jewellery they possessed also valuable papers. They were bowling along merrily when three men stepped out and signalled danger with red lanterns. The owner of the car slammed on brakes and they were all relieved of their cash. There have been several such robberies around here lately and these gentlemanly masked highway men have been getting lots of loot.

G. T. R. FLAGMAN STRUCK BY ENGINE AND KILLED

Had Had a Long Shift on Duty Without Getting Relief — Was Warning Driver of Milk Waggon When Light Engine Ran Into Him—Was Sixty-eight Years of Age.

DANGERS OF THE RAIL

Examiner Special.

TORONTO, SEPT. 12.—Edward T. Crane, aged 68, a watchman on the Dunn avenue level crossing, Grand Trunk Railway, was instantly killed at 6.15 this morning, when he was struck by a light engine when flagging an approaching milkman, warning him of the train. Crane had been on a long shift of duty, since nine o'clock yesterday morning. The crossing is on the main line of the Grand Trunk going west, and is a very busy locality. There are no gates. The only relief the aged man had in that time was for a short time yesterday afternoon, when his wife came over and did the flagging for him.

THOUSANDS WALKED STREETS ALL NIGHT

Special Wire to the Examiner.

MONTREAL, SEPT. 12.—Tens of thousands of people who came here to see the great Eucharistic Congress procession yesterday, had to walk the streets last night, without a place to lay their heads and in many cases without food to eat. The trains which left all stations at intervals of few minutes could not get the crowds away, and in some cases excursionists scheduled to leave here before midnight were still here at daylight this morning.

PRESENTIMENT OF DEATH WAS SOON REALIZED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, SEPT. 12.—Telling relatives he had a strong presentiment of his approaching death before he left for the Eucharistic Congress, Rev. Father Verrett, of Saint Sylvestre, Quebec, was run down by a fast horse and had his skull fractured and died in Hotel Dieu this morning. So far, this is the only fatality of many accidents during the Congress celebration.

SITUATION IN ENGLAND ALARMINGLY CRITICAL

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., SEPT. 12.—With the opening this morning of the British Labour Congress the industrial situation becomes tenser. One hundred and fifty-five organizations, including nearly two million men are represented. The chie ftopic of inaugural speeches to-day was the decision of the Privy Council which adjudged it illegal for union tax members to support local members of the House of Commons. Open defence and contempt of court order was advocated to-day, and this afternoon it looked as if Congress would adopt a resolution along these lines, and unless the government revised them, they would call out the entire two million men, tying up industries and commerce of nations. The situation is most alarmingly critical.

Recover $17,000 Stolen Gold Two Men Are Arrested

TORONTO, SEPT. 12.—Word reached here to-day that the police have recovered seventeen thousand dollars in silver bars stolen from the Nova Scotia mine at Cobalt. Jas. Connelly, hotel keeper, Cobalt, and Patrick Ryan, an employee, are under arrest. The ore was found buried in a waterditch, and some of the silver bars had apparently been pounded into the mud with clubs. A man named Willery, who claims the heavy-weight championship of Canada, is the Crown witness.

PLANNING FOR NEXT YEAR IMPROVING T. A. S. PARK

Work on the new T.A.S. park, down the Otonabee, is progressing rapidly. Space for baseball, lacrosse, and all kinds of field sports, has been cleared, and will be seeded down this fall, in preparation for next season. The site of the T. A. S. park is one of the prettiest on the river, and already applications have been made from several parties for sites, upon which they propose to build summer cottages.

Sermon By Rev. Canon Davidson Spoke On Church Relations

At St. John's church yesterday Rev. Canon Davidson incidentally referred to certain utterances of some of the speakers at the Eucharistic Congress in Montreal. He pointed out what seemed to Anglicans, the unfortunate attitude of Roman Catholics. But it gave Anglicans and Protestants in general an opportunity to show a kindly spirit to them, and a desire for pleasant and Christian relations. In regard to such utterances a strong distinction should be made between what was Catholic and what was Roman Catholic, two very different things. The Communion of the Anglican Church was part and parcel of the great Catholic Church of all ages. "We hold the Catholic creed," Canon Davidson said, "and every time we meet for worship we express our belief in the Holy Catholic Church. The river of Catholicism, with all its richness had flowed directly to us, enriched, however, by Protestantism, which was a tributary stream. Protestantism had given ruggedness and purity to our religion. We were thankful both for it and the rich heritage that had come from the Catholic faith. We should learn to bring out and make the most of these contributions which had distinctive values of their own, and which harmonized well with the religion which is our privilege to hold."

MAY GO TO OTTAWA

TWO SCORES FOR EXAMINER ADS

The advertising columns of the Examiner continue to give daily proof of their efficiency.

Last Tuesday a lady lost a valuable gold chain on the street. On Saturday she decided to advertize it and accordingly placed a want ad. in the Examiner. Less than an hour after the paper was off the press the owner had recovered her property through the medium of the Examiner.

A gentleman wanted to rent a room and accordingly advertised in the Examiner want columns. The result was a rush of letters in reply, that surprised the advertiser. Twenty-one replies came in one morning.

These two examples are picked from among the daily triumphs of the Examiner advertizing to show what the Examiner want adds. are accomplishing.

The Cause

of Eye Troubles is usually not disease, but defect in the structure or muscles of the Eye.

Consider the incessant work of the Eye, the instantaneous and exact adjustment demanded that sight may be always equal, single and ready to every change in position, distance and light. The nerves compel and control the mechanism in these instant adjustments. The mechanism may be defective, that is—

There may be defects in the structure, or focus of one or both Eyes;

The Muscles may be imperfectly balanced, so that both Eyes do not work in harmony;

There may be inability to focus for close work;

There may be strain through overwork, abuse, poor lights, bright reflections, etc.

An examination will tell you just what condition your Eyes are in.

A GREAT REVENUE.

The prosperity of Canada as indicated by the customs returns is almost uncanny. It has been with us for the past fifteen years without cessation, except a slight dullness in 1907-08. It was predicted or suggested by the Examiner several years ago that owing to peculiar conditions, chiefly the development of our vast natural resources, the flow of national prosperity would be continuous. The prospective revenue of 120 millions at the end of the fiscal year is nearly six times in excess of the total revenue in 1896. A rate of growth that corresponds pretty closely with the advancements of all the interests of Canada.

GOOD ANYWAY.

The turning of the first sod of, practically, the Hudson Bay Railway, by Hon. G. P. Graham, minister of Railways and Canals, is an important event. It marks the beginning of another enterprise on the part of Canada to provide the transportation facilities necessary to the development of the great agricultural and other resources of the West. There is difference of opinion as to the navigability of Hudson Bay for a long enough period to be used to any practical extent for moving western grain to Europe. Apart from this, however, the railway will be justified in other ways, though Earl Grey's visit convinces him that Hudson Bay will be open for a long enough period in the year to be of the greatest service. Hudson Bay abounds in whales and edible fish, to an extent to make their accessibility a matter of the greatest moment. If the Newfoundland fisheries were worth an international squabble, lasting a hundred years, there is reason to believe that the Hudson Bay fisheries are of equal value. By the building of the Hudson Bay Railway these fisheries will become overwhelmingly Canadian in development and attendant advantages. The United States journals are claiming that the Hudson Bay is not a closed sea, that it is not exclusively Canadian. But it will be, to a very large degree, if not exclusively, Canadian, for all practical purposes. By the operation of the railway Canadians will be in a position to reap the lion's share of the advantages represented by the commercial working of the fisheries of Hudson Bay, as well as of the coal and other mineral deposits said to abound in the vicinity of its coasts. If the theory of the limited period of navigation should prove to be well founded, the limited accessibility will tend to the Canadian monopoly of exploitation and profit. Either way Canada will derive compensating advantages from the building of the Hudson Bay Railway. If the navigation of Hudson Bay should prove to be practicable so much the better. Anyway the railway seems to be a good thing.

THE EMPIRE IS SOUND.

The enemies of Great Britain are addicted to asserting its decedence and predicting its downfall. But the signs are all the other way. The strength of the Empire is the daughter nations and possessions grouped around and united to the great central head. Never before in imperial history has the empire been more united. Evidence is abundant of the strength of the unity bonds. And they are daily being strengthened. The British preference which Canada, through Sir Wilfrid aLurier, voluntarily offered Great Britain and whose permanence is assured is a most potent unifying factor. One of the greatest British generals has just been in Canada, preaching the unity which his splendid military services so greatly promoted. The visit of the Queen's Own regiment of Britain, where they were welcomed as comrades and brothers, indicates, while it promotes, the indivisibility of the empire. The inauguration of the South African Dominion, was attended by prominent statesmen of Great Britain and of the self-governing members of the empire. The keynote of all the speakers was the oneness of the empire, for the uniting bond common to all is the spirit of liberty, right and justice that brings the best conditions of government that in turn bring content and identity of interest.

There is evidence also that the head of the empire is not degenerating. When one considers the density of population in Great Britain, the low death rate and the high birth rate are a pleasant surprise. In the whole country the deaths are only 12.8 per thousand, and in the swarming area of London, the death rate is only 11.6 per thousand. Thus the most populous city in the world with the millions of people swarming in a small area, is the healthiest in the world. This seems to be the very strongest proof that Britain is not degenerating. The most ominous sign of national decay is a decreasing birth rate. And so long as the Mother country, maintains its marked predominance, over the rate of death this sign of decay is lacking. The race will increase, to be distributed throughout the empire to carry to and maintain in the Dominions the political and social principles that have made Britain the greatest civilizing force in the life of the world. With soundness in the centre, the whole empire is sound, and will remain so long as the genius of the Mothel Land radiates its influence.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

(London Advertiser)

For the first time in centuries the investiture of a Prince of Wales will take place in Wales. Cardiff and Carnarvon have been contending for the honour. The King has decided on Carnarvon, probably on historical grounds. Tradition has it that the first Prince of Wales, afterwards Edward the Second, was born in Carnarvan Castle, but research has proved that the castle was not then built. The prince, however, was actually born in Carnarvon in 1284, the year in which Wales was formally annexed to England by Edward the First. His first title was Earl of Carnarvon, and he was created Earl of Chester and Prince of Wales in his 17th year, the investiture taking place at Lincoln.

Since the reign of Edward the Third, the eldest sons of kings and queens of England have been always Dukes of Cornwall by birth, and, with few exceptions, Princes of Wales by creation. When a Prince of Wales succeeds to the throne the principality in all cases merges at once in the crown, and can have no separate existence again, except under a fresh creation, while the dukedom of Cornwall immediately descends to his son, or remains in abeyance until he has a son if one is not already born. If, however, a Prince of Wales and Duke of Cornwall should die in the lifetime of the sovereign, and leave a son and heir, both dignitaries are extinguished because his son, although he is heir, is neither a king of England, nor the first begotten son of a king of England. If instead of a son, the prince should leave a brother his heir, the dukedom would pass to the brother as the eldest living son of the king, but the principality would become merged in the crown. This was decided upon in the reign of James the First on the death of Henry, Prince of Wales, whose heir was his brother, Charles, Duke of York.

It is an illustration of the continuity of the English monarchy, and the English liking and reverence for precedent, that the future Edward the Eighth will be created Prince of Wales at the same age at which the first Prince of Wales—also an Edward—was invested with that dignity 610 years ago, and at the town where the first prince was born. The decision of King George to hold the ceremony in Wales is a compliment to the little principality which will be keenly appreciated by the Welsh people.

POLICE COURT

The first case at police court this morning was that of a young man named Quinlan, from East City. He pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk and disorderly in a public place. It was his first offence and Police Magistrate Dumble allowed him to depart in peace, after giving him warning and advice for the future. He sailed slowly out from the dock, with the common remark, "I'll try and watch myself from this out, your Honour."

The next was a man charged with non-support of his wife and six children. He pleaded not guilty, and after his wife had given evidence, he was given a chance to speak. He admitted that he had been there twice before on the same charge, and his evidence was very weak. His wife stated that she had been getting all the supplies for the house on credit for the past three weeks and could not get any more. He admitted what his wife said, but as he intended going to work to-day, his case was enlarged for a while to see how he would act.

Y.M.C.A. RUNNER INJURED AT LINDSAY

LINDSAY, SEPT. 12.—The success of Friday evening's run of the Y.M.C.A. Harriers received a severe check in the shape of a flying bottle, which dropped one of the runners, Mr. W. Fallis, of the Bank of Commerce staff, in his tracks.

The route chosen by the Harriers was along Kent street to the hospital and back to the association. Shortly after nine o'clock as the runners passed the Grand Union Hotel some drunken idiot in a moment of inspiration bawled out:

"Do you want this bottle?"

Upon receiving an answer in the negative he hurled the flask into the roadway with sufficient force to smash it against Mr. Fallis' head, causing the Harrier to fall forward on his face.

He was carried back to the Y.M.C.A. room in an unconscious condition and about forty-five minutes elapsed before he recovered his senses. Meanwhile the unknown assailant and a boon companion who was with him had made good their escape. The "wet goods" did not seem to have affected his legs as badly as his head for it is said that after seeing his victim fall he made a run of it up Cambridge street that would reflect credit on the Harriers themselves.

When Mr. Fallis recovered consciousness it was his first request that the affair be given no publicity. The matter, accordingly, has not been placed in the hands of the police. The miscreant can thank his comet that he struck a person of as mild and retiring a disposition as Mr. Fallis.

The young man was struck over the left temple. It is remarkable that, in spite of the fact that the bottle broke into a thousand pieces the flesh was not cut. He received a bad bruising and his arms and legs were cut by his lifeless fall on the road. This morning Mr. Fallis was able to be around, but his head still feels very sore as a result of the blow.

End of War in Nicaragua.

Managua, Nicaragua, Sept. 12.—The last armed opposition to the new regime under Gen. Estrada, the provisional President, has ceased with the surrender of Gen. Fernando Maria Blanco with [illegible] men and 14 cannon.

Ready Was a Guard.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 12.—Coming Saturday to the scene of the street car strike riots, which kept Columbus in a state of disorder for weeks, former President Roosevelt, in a speech here, denounced in strongest terms acts of lawlessness and men who committed them. The state capitol is still being guarded by militia, and Col. Roosevelt himself was escorted by United States troops from the Columbus barracks.

As the strike is still on, J. A. Metcalfe, chairman of the Roosevelt reception committee, asked President Taft to assign the regular troops, to guard the former President, and the President consented.

It has been announced that after today Governor Harmon will withdraw his control of the situation here, and the municipal government, under Mayor Marshall, will have full [illegible].

Tobacco Goes Up.

Leamington, Sept. 12—Farmers within the Essex country tobacco belt will reap a rich harvest this year from a war between two rival companies, which are trying to buy in the crop and have forced prices up to the highest mark known in years. The price has gone up to 17 and 18 cents, while some of the growers believe in will eventually go as high as 20 cents.

Last year the growers sold their crops at the rate of 15 cents, and this was considered unusually high. In former years the price has been as low as 6 cents. The crop this year is considered quite as good as last. Growers will receive more than half a million dollars for it.

Authorized Demonstrations.

Madrid, Sept. 12.—The Spanish Government has authorized the holding of Catholic demonstrations in the principal cities of Spain on Oct. 2, against the "prevailing impiety." Cardinal Aguirre, primate of Spain, has sent his blessing to the juntas, inviting them to maintain order, and recommending the invocation of Christ and of the Virgin.

Then he approached the Captain.

"Say, skipper," he cried, "how long do you give the remains of her to hold out?"

"It is not high-water yet," was the answer. "Perhaps half an hour. Forty minutes at the utmost."

"Then you'll have to boost this thing along a good deal faster," said the cheerful one. "They're going up now at the rate of one every two minutes. That's a thirty in half an hour. Fifty of us will travel a heap quicker at the end of that time if your calculations hold good."

The Captain, who appeared to be in a stupor of grief, roused himself.

A few sharp and short orders changed the aspect of affairs. Frightened and protesting ladies were securely tied together, and hoisted, four at a time, like so many bags of wheat. When it came to the men's turn even less ceremony and greater expedition were used.

Indeed, already there were emphatic warnings that much valuable time had been lost in the early stage of the rescue. Though the wind was now blowing a stiff gale, the sea, lashed to frenzy by the hurricane, was heavier than ever. The ship was vanishing visibly. A funnel fell with a hideous crash and carried away a life-boat. The rest of the spar deck and nearly the whole of the forward cabins were torn out bodily. By repeated thumping on the reef the vessel had settled back almost onto an even keel, and the fore-mast, which had so providentially neared the summit of the lighthouse, was now removed far beyond the possibility of a rope being thrown.

The survivors on deck worked with feverish energy. The time was drawing short. They did not know the second that some unusually tempestuous wave would devour them utterly.

"Now, M. Pyne, you next," cried the chief officer, addressing the young Philadelphian, who, mirabile dictu, had found and lighted a cigar.

"Guess I'll swing up along with the Captain," was the answer.

"Up with him," shouted the captain, fiercely, himself helping to loop Pyne to the fourth officer.

All others had gone. The officers were leaving the ship in order of seniority, the juniors first. Just as the quartette were about to swing clear of the ship the Captain grasped Pyne's hand.

"Thank you, lad," he said, and away they went.

There were left on the vessel the third, second, and first officers, the purser, and the captain. The others wanted the captain to come with them He resisted, held out for his right to be the last to quit a ship he had commanded for more than twenty years, and hoarsely forbade any further argument.

Very unwillingly they left him hauling alone at the rope, though their predecessors, knowing the need of it, helped vigorously from the gallery. Indeed, it was with difficulty that one was held back from returning with the descending rope. They told him he was mad to dream of such a piece of folly, and perforce he desisted.

But when the Captain deliberately cast off the deck-pulley from which the rope had been manipulated they knew that the boy had read his soul: the now useless cordage dangling from the gallery was caught by the wind and sea and sent whipping off leeward.

Then, brought from the lantern by the hubbub of shouting, came out, followed by Constance. He suggested, as a last resource, that they should endeavour to fire a line across the vessel by means of a rocket.

They agreed to try, for the spectators of the captain, standing bareheaded on all that was left of the deck, moved them to a pitch of frenzy not often seen in an assemblage of Anglo-Saxons, and especially of sailors.

Brand turned to procure the rocket, but a loud cry caused him delay. The expected wave had come, the vessel was smothered in a vortex of foam, the tall fore-mast tottered and fell, and when the water subsided again all that was visible of the great steamer was some portion of her hull, and the keel-plate until another hour had passed.

The agonized cry of a strong man is a woeful thing. Constance, by reason of the gathering at the side of the gallery, was unable to see all that was taking place. But the yell which went up from the onlookers told her that something out of the common, even on this night of thrills had occurred.

"What is it, dad?" she asked, as her father came to her.

"The end of the ship," he said. "The Captain has gone with her."

"Oh, dear, why wasn't he saved?"

"I think he refused to desert his ship. His heart was broken, I expect. Now, Connie, duty first."

Indeed, she required no telling. As each of the ship-wrecked men entered the lantern, she handed him a glass of spirits, asked if he were injured, and told him exactly how many many flights of stairs he had to descend. But cocoa and biscuits will be brought soon," she explained greatly amazed, but speechless for the most part, the men obeyed her directions.

One of the last to claim her attention was the young American, Mr. Pyne. Her face lit up pleasurably when she saw him.

"I was wondering what had become of you," she said. "My sister has asked me several times if you had arrived, and I imagined that I must have missed you by some chance."

Now all this was Greek to him, or nearly so. Indeed, had it been intelligible Greek, he might have guessed its purport more easily.

Holding the glass in his hand he looked at her in frank, open-eyed wonder. To be hailed so gleefully by a good-looking girl, whom he had never to his knowledge set eyes on, was somewhat of a mystery, and the puzzle was made all the more difficult by the fact that she had discarded the weather-proof accoutrements needed when she first ventured forth on the gallery.

"I'm glad you're pleased. My name is Charles A. Pyne," he said, slowly.

It was now Constance's turn to be bewildered. Then the exact situation dawned on her.

"How stupid of me," she cried. "Of course you don't, recognise me again. My sister and I happen to be alone with my father on the rock to-night. We were with him on the balcony when you acted so bravely. You see, the light shone clear on your face."

"I'm glad it's shining on yours now," he said.

"You must go two floors below this" said she severely. "I will bring you some cocoa and a biscuit as quickly as possible."

"I am not a bit tired," he commented, still looking at her.

"That is more than I can say," she answered, "but I am so delighted that we managed to save so many poor people."

"How many?"

"Seventy-eight. But I dare not ask you now how many are lost. It would make me cry, and I have no time for tears. Will you really help to carry a tray?"

"Just try me."

At the top of the stairs Constance called to her father:

"Anything you want, dad?"

"Yes, dear. Find out the chief officer, and send him to me. He can eat and drink here whilst we talk."

CHAPTER VIII.

AN INTERLUDE.

"Please be careful; these stairs are very steep," said Constance, swinging the lantern close to her companion's feet as they climbed down the topmost flight.

"If I fall," he assured her, "you will be the chief sufferer."

"All the more reason why you should not fall. Wait here a moment. I must have a look at the hospital."

The visiting officer's room, which also served the purposes of a library and recreation room in normal times, now held fourteen injured persons, including two women, one of them a stewardess, and a little girl.

Most of the sufferers had received their wounds either in the saloon or by collision with the cornice of the lighthouse. The worst accident was a broken arm, the most alarming a case of cerebral concussion. Other injuries consisted, for the most part, of cuts and bruises.

Unfortunately when the ship struck the surgeon had gone aft to attend to an engineer whose hand was crushed as the result of some frantic lurch caused by the hurricane; hence the doctor was lost with the first batch of victims. Enid discovered that among the few steerage passengers saved was a man who had gained some experience in a field-hospital during the campaign in Cuba. Aided by the plain directions supplied with the medicine chest of the lighthouse, the ex-hospital orderly had done wonders already.

"All I want, miss," he explained, in answer to Constance's question, "is some water and some linen for bandages. The first aid in the chest is not half sufficient."

She vanished, to return quickly with a sheet and a pair of scissors.

"Now," she said to Mr. Pyne, "if you come with me I will show you back with a pail of water."

THE WONDERFUL SOOTHING, HEALING INFLUENCE OF

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

The one thing you can depend on in Dr. Chase's Ointment to do every time is to cure eczema. There is no more severe test to which an ointment can be put, and because Dr. Chase's Ointment triumphs over eczema it has become the standard cure.

When other ointment is praised it is said to be as good as Dr. Chase's. And this demonstrates the high position held by this preparation.

Mrs. [illegible] Vancott, St. Auburn, Sask., writes: "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure for eczema and other skin diseases. My son while nursing broke out with [illegible], watery sores all over his body, around the ears. Many salves were prescribed to no effect. The child, [illegible] a mass of sores, suffered untold agony. He became weak and frail, would not eat and we thought we would lose him.

"Previous to [illegible] we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now, strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment and we hope more people will learn about it so that their poor little ones may be saved from suffering."

Do not be satisfied with the experiments of others but put Dr. Chase's Ointment to the test when occasion arises. Try it for chafing and irritation of the skin, for chapped and crusted hands, chilblains and frost bites, for sore lips, for burns. It is delightfully soothing and healing. 60c. a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free sample of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

The Methodists of the community gave up their service in the evening in order that everyone might attend the Harvest Thanksgiving service at the Anglican church. An eloquent sermon, appropriate to the occasion was preached by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, and music of a special nature was conducted.

CHEMONG EXCURSION LAST WEEK GREAT SUCCESS

The excursion under the auspices of the Chemong Athletic Club on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week to Lake Simcoe, was a great success in every way and the committee in charge are to be congratulated upon the happy result of their efforts. The steamer "Stoney Lake" had been chartered for the occasion, and carried about one hundred residents of the Indian Village on the annual visit to their brethren in the north. The beautiful sail was greatly enjoyed. Orillia and Rama were reached on Thursday afternoon. On Friday the Chemong Baseball team played two games and showed their prowess by winning both in handy fashion. In the morning they defeated the Rama team by 5 to 0, and in the evening the Longford team had to yield the palm of victory to the visitors, who won by 15 to 9. It had been intended to pay a visit to Georgina Island, but there was a heavy gale blowing Friday afternoon, and the steamer could not make a landing. On Friday night the excursionists had a trip to Orillia, where a couple of hours were very pleasantly spent. The return to Chemong was made on Saturday, with no untoward incident to mar the pleasure of the outing.

The Alderville Brass Band was to have accompanied the Chemong excursionists, but it was so windy on Wednesday that they could not cross Rice Lake. However, the services of the Rama Nightingale Band were secured and provided splendid music.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

That great advances are being made every year in the science of child training is an undeniable fact, but there is one change in method that I regret. And that is the decrease of things to be learned by heart.

How much poetry does your child learn by heart at school to-day?

How much of the Bible is he asked to learn at Sunday School?

Very little, I fancy, if his teacher has the modern point of view. He studies and reads, and listens to explanations and stories of illustrations, but he seldom learns by heart.

And I think it's a big mistake.

Of all our childhood's educational advantages that we didn't appreciate and maybe fought against at the time, I think most of us of the older generation—the generation that emphatically learned by heart — will admit that one of the greatest advantages was being forced to incorporate into our mental system so much of the beautiful things in our literature.

Much of what we learned we didn't understand at the time, of course. It was just a string of words and phrases. Or if we did understand it mentally, we didn't spiritually. And then we lived, and every phase of life translated some of that poetry for us.

Every great experience, every sorrow or suffering or joy illumined some line to us. Who hasn't had the experience of recalling some piece of poetry that he learned years and years ago, and for the first time really understanding it?

And I think it's a shame that our children aren't carrying away from their schooling, a similar fund of unrecognized treasure.

Seems to me when the school fails to give them this it's up to us to try to make up the lack.

In our neighbourhood there is one mother who believes as I do about this, and who dedicates a part of every Sunday afternoon to filling in this gap for her four youngsters.

She doesn't try to teach them much—not more than ten or twelve lines of poetry or half a dozen verses of the Bible every week. But she spends much time in making the selection from the whole range of literature and the best in the Bible.

She explains the selection and then turns the children loose to learn it. Some dainty or some especial privilege is the reward of the one who is first ready to recite it.

In order to fix the selections more firmly in their minds, she frequently reviews them from Sunday to Sunday, or calls on the children to recite them at the supper table or just before bedtime. And it is a matter of great pride with them to be able to recite correctly.

Of course twelve lines isn't much, but twelve lines a week is 624 a year, and 624 lines from the very refined gold of our literature is a mental treasure not to be despised.

Does the plan appeal to you as worth supporting?

I hope so.

"Mirth is God's medicine, everybody ought to bathe in it. Grim care, moroseness, anxiety—all the rust of life—ought to be scoured off by the oil of mirth."—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

SAID FAREWELL TO CONGREGATION AFTER PASTORATE OF 14 YEARS

Rev. J. G. Potter, B.A., Preached His Last Sermon as Pastor of St. Andrew's Church Last Evening—Expressed His Appreciation to His People of Their Earnest Co-operation.

REFERS TO HIS WORK

After a pastorate of fourteen years, Rev. J. G. Potter, B.A., preached his farewell sermon at St. Andrew's church last evening to a large congregation, among whom were many of other denominations, who, during Mr. Potter's long stay in Peterborough, had learned to esteem him as a valued citizen and a warm friend. During the course of Mr. Potter's farewell remarks, he expressed his appreciation of the congregation's ever earnest and ready assistance that they had always extended him. He hoped they would continue to work in conjunction with their new minister as they had with him. St. Andrew's would continue to grow and prosper in the future as it has done in the past. Every available seat in St. Andrew's was taken last evening and chairs had to be placed in the aisles to accommodate all those who wished to attend.

Speaking from the 11th to the 18th verses of the fourth chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Ephesians:

"And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers.

For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ;

Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.

In beginning his remarks, Mr. Potter stated that he realized his inefficiency to find words to express his appreciation to the congregation of St. Andrew's and to the many friends of other denominations, for the interest they had shown in his ministry and in his work in Peterborough. It was, he said, a high privilege to be a minister of God. Jesus Christ had called rough and rugged men from the humble walks of life to come and learn of Him that they might go forward to make known a Saviour's love. There was no other way to spread the gospel, but by the calling of men. Men of every day life who realized the power of sin in the world, were best fitted to carry on His work. Fourteen years ago he had responded to the call of St. Andrew's church. He at once set to work to foster an interest in them. It began among the young people, and he was sure that his work with them had been an inspiration, a delight and a joy to him. In the Christian Endeavour Society he had felt the pulsations of new Christian life. The Young Men's Guild had been a source of strength both to him and the congregation. In the Mission Societies and the Boys' Brigade he had been surrounded by Christian people, and he appreciated to the fullest, the help that had been given him. It was an evidence of what everyone could do when consecrated his or her life to Christ. He referred in appreciative terms to the interest that had always been shown him by his seniors in the church. Young men, he assured them, had always been delivered with the best intentions, and he departed in his duty, he trusted, and he departed in his duty, he said, at this time, to serve neither in word, or deed, or thought, in such a manner as to cause hurtfulness, if his words had at any time wounded any person.

The minister's life was one of great service. He had been with them through their hours of bitterness and sorrow, in their trials and suffering. It was his duty to be ready at all times to go where required, pointing others to the way of Christ. Another essential duty of the minister, he believed, was the edifying of the body of Jesus Christ. The body of Jesus Christ was not any particular denomination. It was those who had been saved by the blood of Jesus Christ. His name was above all others. Such was the Christian view he had always taken. If one was loyal to his own church, he was loyal to Jesus Christ. The glory of St. Andrew's would alway be that she stood by her church and minister. He urged them to abandon anything of narrow or sectional nature. He hoped that everyone would prove that no change in the pastorate would interfere with the progress of St. Andrew's. A strong foundation was necessary and faithfulness to the church they belonged.

In conclusion, Mr. Potter stated that no minister could ever have been used better than he had been. He deemed it was more than he had deserved. He had given them the best fourteen years of his life, and he hoped that they would be led aright by the choice of a successor. His earnest prayers went with them, and though he was preaching for the last time as pastor, he hoped to have the privilege of visiting them on some future occasion.

The musical service was of special character. During the offertory, Mr. Asa Huyeke sang in excellent voice, "Beyond the Gates of Paradise." The choir was also heard in a well rendered anthem, and a trio consisting of Mrs. Dormer and Misses Potter and Winslow, sang sweetly. The service was closed with the singing of the hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds."

VOICE FROM COAST

Rev. W. H. Redman, of Vancouver, Preached at Park Street Church

The Rev. W. H. Redman, of Santa Hill Baptist Church, Vancouver, preached a most acceptable and instructive sermon at the evening service of the Park Street Baptist church yesterday.

Mr. Redman took his text from Rev. 21, 10, his subject being the great city. Having spoken of the ness of ancient Babylon and other cities, and referring in glowing terms to Vancouver, which he thought, in the near future, would rival New York, he called his hearers' attention to the Great City of God:

Great because of its foundations,
Great because of its pure population;
Great because it was ruled over by the greatest of kings.

The message was much enjoyed by many of Mr. Redman's friends. He is a native of Peterborough.

YOU CAN SEE IT WORK

TWELVE NEW MEMBERS AT YESTERDAYS T. A. S. MEETING

St. Peter's Society is Flourishing—Rev. Father Toner, Who Has Been Appointed Vice-Spiritual Adviser, Addressed the Meeting.

GYMNASIUM TO OPEN

At the meeting of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society yesterday afternoon, twelve new members were added to the rolls, an indication the progress that is being made by this flourishing society.

Rev. Father Toner of the Cathedral staff, addressed the meeting, telling of a meeting held in Dundalk, Ireland, at which 25,000 total abstainers were in line, and which was addressed by Cardinal Logue, who spoke of the great revival in the cause in Ireland, and remarked that "Ireland temperate meant Ireland free."

Rev. Father Toner has been appointed vice-spiritual advisor of the Society.

Rev. Father Casey of the Cathedral staff, will be in charge of the Literary section, while the gymnasium will be under the supervision of Rev. Father O'Brien.

The gymnasium is to be opened shortly for the fall classes, and everything points to a successful season.

A social club has been formed to look after the different social events during the coming winter.

At dinner, especially—as at any "meat meal"—Regal Lager proves a great help to weak digestions. It tones the stomach, and does the nerves good. Yet it is no mere stimulant, and certainly not an intoxicant.

REPORT WRONG

Driver Was Not At All to Blame For Saturday's Accident

The report of the accident to Hugh Robertson, as given in the Examiner on Saturday, was hardly a correct statement of how the unfortunate affair occurred, the Examiner's informant having been mistaken in the facts. The driver of the waggon was not in the least to blame for the accident, and was not in the rig when it happened. It appears that the horse has learned the route so thoroughly that it is accustomed to walk on while the driver is delivering bread to the houses. The driver has had occasion to warn boys to keep off his waggon. On Saturday, however, young Robertson climbed up while the driver was off the waggon, and the latter did not see the accident or know anything about it until the boy had been picked up.

Samuel Oliver Pleaded Guilty to a Terrible Offence—Appeared before Magistrate Edmison Afternoon—Was Arrested Saturday Night

SUMMARY TRIAL

Samuel Oliver, of Smith, was arrested on Saturday night at his home by High County Constable Cook on a very serious charge. He was lodged in the county gaol until this afternoon, when he will appear before County Magistrate Edmison charged with incest.

When Oliver came up before Magistrate Edmison this afternoon he elected to be tried summarily. He pleaded guilty. His Worship reserved judgment until one week hence to-morrow, at 3 o'clock.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

OLE OLSON.

The theatrical season of 1910 was inaugurated in Peterborough on Saturday with two performances at the Grand of "Ole Olson," a comedy drama laid on new lines that proved meritorious and enjoyable. There was a big house at the evening performance and the hearty laughter that swept through the theatre indicated in no uncertain manner the enjoyment of the audience. "Ole Olson" is a new type of comedy character—one that provides plenty of opportunity for clean-cut humour, and this role was most capably handled by Mr. Ben Holmes, whose songs "Strawberries" and "Memories of My Swedish Home" were well received. The supporting Company was an excellent one.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

"WHICH IS THE TRUE GOSPEL?"

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ" (Romans I, 16).

Portland, Me., Sept. 11.—The International Bible Students Convention is in session here with an excellent attendance and deep interest manifested. Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle delivered two addresses to-day, one being in Jefferson Theatre. We report one of them from the text foregoing:

Three weeks ago to-day Christendom was startled by a communication which announced that the Christian Alliance had lifted a collection of $60,000 in a few minutes—$300 in cash, the balance in promises. Then followed the startling announcement of Brother Simpson, its president, that the collection lifted would probably be the last at Old Orchard, because the Camp Grounds' Directors had rented its Auditorium for three days for the use of our Association. He declared that he disagrees with our theology. This, of course, was a veiled threat that the directors of the camp ground must break their contract with the Bible Students. This they promptly did, and we accepted back the money paid in advance, rather than go to law. It is for this reason, dear friends, that we are having our Convention "outside the camp." We are glad that its fence does not separate us from our great Redeemer and Teacher, the joy of whose blessing I see in your faces.

Secular editors were astonished! They had been congratulating Christian people that the days of the rack, the thumb screw and the stake were past and that from every quarter were coming appeals for Christian Union which, it was hoped, might even ultimately include all denominations of Catholics and Protestants. Yet here they had to listen to the contrary—a suggestion that Christian people in alliance were so opposed to Bible Students that even a year would not be sufficient to purify the air of Old Orchard and to permit them to meet here next year to take up another collection. It seemed funny, too, to these editors that anything could drive a Christian Alliance meeting away from a $60,000 collection!

Since Brother Simpson may not care to tell the whole truth about the matter and since the Christian public is interested and ought to know the facts, I must tell them. The unpleasant duty, however, will not necessitate my saying an unkind word concerning Mr. Simpson and the Christian friends who are in alliance with him.

There are two reasons why Brother Simpson thought it doubtful if he could come next year following our three days of this year.

(1) He knew instinctively that his collection would be smaller, hardly worth coming for, if the people should begin to get the eyes of their understanding more widely opened respecting what really constitutes the Gospel of Christ.

(2) The $60,000 "raised" was not cash and a large proportion of it never will be. Some of it is promised over and over, as was the case with the young woman who in the spectacular manner offered her jewels from time to time and had it mentioned in the papers. Such repetitions of charitable work are considered entirely proper by many in connection with religious work in various denominations, "for the good of the cause." Subscriptions are given publicly without hope of payment, to influence others who are more sincere—some of whom in the excitement give more than they can afford.

This same method is illustrated in the Chicago Stock Yards. A fine, large, trained bull gallops out to meet the cattle designed for slaughter. He waltzes before them and becomes their leader. Following him in a grand rush for a narrow passage they crowd one another to the executioner, who knocks them senseless. A special place just large enough for himself is provided for the decoy bull, who, later, goes out to lead on another herd for the slaughter.

We do not mean to say that those who give their money are slaughtered or otherwise injured. We believe that they are blessed—that everyone is blessed who sacrifices anything heartily unto the Lord, or to what they suppose to be his service, whether it is or not. It is the method of getting the money from the people and the deception practiced which we deplore. However, the Alliance has plenty of company in this method in larger Christian denominations. It is part of the "business" method of recent years. Some who did not understand this "business" method wondered where all the money apparently contributed to the "Christian Alliance" work was spent. An investigation of its financial accounts was made, which revealed the fact that they were chaotic, and other "business" methods were advised.

Some one may inquire why the Christian Alliance should fear us whether or not we have ever done them harm. We reply, Never have we injured them in the slightest degree, nor ever even publicly mentioned their name before. Their opposition to us is on the lines of general principles mentioned by the Apostle Teacher, "The darkness hateth the light;". "All things that are reproved are made manifest by the light" (Ephesians v, 13). Our work is to proclaim the true Gospel—to present Christian people to Bible study in the light of the Bible's own testimony and without sectarian spectacles which, in the past, have so distorted the Word of God and cast it in false colors.

Christian people come to see the errors of the errors by which they have been blinded, the light (the only [illegible] upon their minds, but it influences their pocketbooks also. They no longer appreciate the "business" methods of the Alliance nor the brand of Gospel which it sets forth. The more God's people come to a correct understanding of the teachings of his Word, the smaller will be the collections of the Christian Alliance. That is the real secret of their opposition. I would that it were true that they would never take up another collection at Old Orchard! The heathen have already had too much of their Gospel of damnation. God's name has already been slandered and blasphemed enough by the false Gospel message—that nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand of humanity ever born are to suffer eternal roasting because of Father Adam's sin and the ignorance, stupidity and meanness which have resulted.

If the intelligent men connected with the Alliance really believe the horrible nightmare of the Dark Ages which they are proclaiming as the Gospel of Christ, then, of course, they are excusable for preaching it. It is not for others to judge of their honesty in this matter, but it is for others to decide that they will no longer assist or co-operate in the spread of such horrible travesties upon the Divine character— no longer assist financially or otherwise in binding upon the poor heathen at home and abroad increased ignorance and superstition.

Everybody knows that the word Gospel signifies "good tidings." And everybody ought to know that, as Christian people, we have for centuries misused the word, applying it to the bad tidings of great misery to all people, except the mere handful of the elect. We did this because it was handed down to us by our forefathers. What Jesus said to the Jews has been true of us as Christians, "Ye do make void the Law of God through your traditions." Thank God that, as in the natural world he is sending us now the electric light instead of the tallow candle, so through Bible study helps, concordances, etc., his Word (the Lamp to his people's footsteps until the day dawn), is now shining brighter than ever before.

Catholic and Protestant orthodoxy have set forth for centuries two general views of the Gospel of Christ. To whatever extent they now disagree with these they should publicly disown and abandon them. Until then they are besmirched with whatever odium attaches.

The Catholic Gospel (Good Tidings) is that all the heathen, all Catholics and all Protestants, except a mere handful, go to a Purgatory of awful suffering, terrible anguish, lasting for decades, centuries and thousands of years, roasting, boiling, agonizing, and thus purging away their sins and dross that they may ultimately attain to heavenly bliss for the remainder of eternity. If that is good tidings it can be considered such only in contrast with something more horrible, if that be imaginable.

Our Protestant Gospel, of which we are so proud that we want to thrust it upon Jews and Catholics and heathens everywhere, we should thoroughly understand, enjoy and appreciate before we waste good time and money giving it to others. Here it is: Four centuries ago our forefathers were not Protestants but Catholics and believed in Purgatory, etc., as above. Then what was known as Reformation Movement set in. Catholics, Jews and infidels will admit with Protestants that a great blessing of enlightenment and civilization has come to the world in the train of the Reformation Movement. But none of us is prepared to admit that the Reformers were perfect, nor their work perfect.

The Reformers criticized the Catholic teachings which they had formerly believed. They examined their Bibles and found nothing there to the effect that Mary was the mother of God, nor that we should pray to saints, nor that we should use pictures or images in our worship, nor that their sacrifice of Christ in the mass was proper, nor that there was a Purgatory anywhere. The Reformers threw out these things as unscriptural. They completely demolished Purgatory in their minds, declaring that it had never been anything more than imagination. Then came another thought, viz: What must we do with the thousands of millions of mankind that we and our fathers for centuries supposed were in Purgatory roasting, stewing, tortured, but hoping for heaven. They looked at one another in consternation. They had hearts and sympathies and felt that as it had devolved upon them to smash Purgatory, it must also devolve upon them to re-locate all those thousands of millions whom they had in their hands. They felt the weight of the responsibility. Could they demand of God that they should be put into heaven? Surely not! Surely only the saintly few are fit for heaven! They, as well as all, recognised that fact. Then, with blank consternation, they determined that they must crowd the entire mass into a hell of eternal torture and shut the gates upon them forever and write upon the gates, "Who enters here abandons hope."

Taking from practically all humanity all future hope made the Reformers for the time heartsick. It would be awful to do that for one person, but to thus "do" all humanity seemed terrible. And then to be obliged to label that gospel "Good Tidings" must certainly have been a trying [illegible] for the Reformers.

But Brother John Calvin helped them amazingly and took from them their burden. He told them that they should not worry, because it was all God's fault and not theirs. God had predestinated them to that awful future long before he created man. Now they should merely try to think of themselves as the "elect" and try to forget everybody else. Of course, it seemed horrible to charge all these things against the God of all Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power. But it was the only solution which occurred to them. John Calvin's theories were afterwards embodied in the "Westminster Confession of Faith." And that confession of faith became the foundation of nearly all Protestant creeds. Brother John Wesley afterward objected, but admitted that only the saintly went to heaven and everybody else went to eternal torment. His protest was that, instead of this being by Divine foreordination and intention, it was, on the contrary, because of Divine unwisdom and incompetency.

Surely no sane person can any longer defend any of the above "Gospels" as the true one, of which St. Paul was not ashamed! Surely St. Paul never preached any of those Gospels, nor did any of the Apostles—nor does the Bible support such theories, except by the turning and twisting of language, mistranslations of the original and misinterpretations of some parables. The plain statements of the Scriptures are all directly to the opposite.

The Bible teaches that "the wages of sin is death," not Purgatory nor eternal torment. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Adam, the perfect, was placed on trial for life eternal or death eternal. He sinned and the sentence against him was, "Cursed is the earth for thy sake; thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread until thou return unto the ground from whence thou wast taken" (Genesis iii, 17-19). St. Paul declares the same: "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world; and thus death passed upon all men, because all are sinners" (Romans v, 12).

Looking about us we find this true. Everybody who is not dead is dying. As the Bible says, we are living under a reign of Sin and Death. Nothing that man can do can either eradicate sin or lift us out of our dead and dying condition. God alone can help us! He proposes to help us and the message respecting that help is, in the Scriptures, called the Gospel. Its announcement by the angels on the night of Jesus' birth is full, complete, satisfactory, viz: "Behold, we bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people; for unto you is born this day in the City of David a Saviour (life-giver) which is Christ the Lord" (Luke ii, 10).

Ah, now we have the Truth! The penalty of sin is death. And the "good tidings" is that God has provided for our recovery from sin and death. The Saviour gave his life for the cancellation of our sin, for the satisfaction of Justice, that in due time Adam and all his condemned and imperfect race might be released from the condemnation and be lifted out of the sin and death conditions which now prevail. That uplifting is Scripturally called the resurrection of the dead. Hence the preaching of the early Church was, "Jesus and the Resurrection"—the Redeemer and his work.

The good tidings for the race in general is that the Redeemer in God's due time will become King of kings and Lord of lords—the Messiah of glory, God's glorious Representative. For a thousand years the regenerating work for Adam's race will progress (Matthew xix, 28; Acts iii, 19-23). God's Chosen People, Israel, will be the earthly agents of the heavenly and invisible King of glory. By the close of his reign the whole earth will have been transformed into the Paradise of God. "He will make the place of his feet glorious." And mankind will all be perfect again, in God's image. There will be no more sin, no more sickness, no more dying, because all the things of sin and death will have passed away and he who sits upon the Throne will have renewed all things (Revelation xxi, 5). All who, after coming to a full knowledge of the Truth of God's love and gracious provision, still love sin and hate righteousness, will be destroyed in the Second Death, from which there will be no redemption, no resurrection, no recovery; as St. Peter says, "They shall perish like brute beasts."

CONNIE MURPHY IS IN TOWN

Connie Murphy, who played with the champion Peterborough Midland Baseball League team a couple of seasons ago, is in the city renewing old acquaintances. Connie played shortstop with the St. Mary's team, champions of the City Amateur League, Toronto, this season, and in August went to the Osceola team of the Pennsylvania League. Murphy was one of the leading hitters and base runners of the Toronto League this season. An Osceola exchange says: "Connie Murphy, who has received enough hard bumps to kill an ordinary man, was unable to get into the game, and will probably not be able to play for some time yet. Connie's record for one week was a crack in the mouth by a thrown ball, which cut his lip; a badly bruised arm, hit by a pitched ball; a torn tendon in the leg; a smash back of the ear in practice, and several minor accidents too numerous to keep track of. It is a wonder this popular star is not in the hospital, instead of jumping around on the coaching lines."

50,000 Were In Parade

The Congress Will Return to America Again In 1914—Hundreds of Thousands Witness Magnificent Ceremonial In Montreal When Four Hour Stream of Dignitaries Accompany the Host.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—The cardinal legate was seen at night by your correspondent and stated that the Montreal Eucharistic Congress has been the greatest gathering of the kind ever seen in the world, and that not only was the congress the most important event in the history of the Catholic Church in Canada, but perhaps throughout the world. His eminence will go to Ottawa on Thursday, calling on Mgr. Emard en route, after which he will be received at the capital by the Ministers, and then the legate will go to St. Paul, and thence to New York, sailing for Europe early in October. Owing to the brief time at his disposition, it is not the legate's present intention to visit Toronto.

It was announced here yesterday that the congress will meet in Seville, Spain, next year; in Vienna in 1912, in Lyons in 1913 and four years hence it will probably come back to America, New York or Baltimore being the prospective place of gathering.

Never has such a spectacle been witnessed in Montreal as the procession of the Blessed Sacrament yesterday. It is estimated that over 50,000 people took part in the procession, and that fully half a million witnessed it. People poured into the city from all parts of the Dominion and United States, and Montreal yesterday had within its gates more people than it ever had before.

Some idea of the size of the procession may be got from the fact that it took nearly four hours to pass a given point. In the procession walked cardinals, archbishops, bishops, thousands of priests and sisters, besides members of the religious institutions, judges, members of Parliament, mayor and aldermen, and thousands of others. The route of the procession, which was over the three principle streets of the east end of the city, was three miles long. The principal figure in the procession was the papal legate, Cardinal Vannutelli, who carried the Host, the 65th Regiment of Montreal forming the escort.

As the Host passed through the crowded streets thousands of people knelt in adoration. The procession passed off without accident or hitch, the weather being ideal.

From early dawn contingents and parishes were arriving from many parts of the United States and Canada. And during the morning hours thee great churches of Notre Dame, St. James and St. Patrick's, as well as the many minor churches, were filled several times over with citizens and visitors.

At 12.15 p.m. the societies began to muster. On came the hosts, gathering in the streets and avenues, until miles of massed men who had as their centre the Cathedral of Notre Dame, stretched out and covered the City of Montreal. Everything had been outlined previously, and so it was in an orderly and systematic way that the different bodies deployed, every one to its allotted place.

At 2.30, the hour appointed for the body to begin to move, people stood lining the entire route from Notre Dame to Fletcher's Field. Grand stands, twenty-five in number, were arranged at intervals, and ten choirs were stationed ready to play their part in the final setting of the marvelous event. Above, miles of roofs, steps and windows were filled with thousands of faces.

Societies were there from New York, New Jersey, Brooklyn, Toronto, Ottawa, Quebec, and all the surrounding parishes of Montreal, and from the city itself. Italians, Poles Chinese, Indians, Japanese, French, Irish, English, the church, the bar, sailors, soldiers, the Government, none were lacking. As the societies marched to the field they deployed and covered the great area, until acres of living humanity covered the green sward.

The sun sank to rest in the blue heavens and the moon has risen above the mountain, that now showed darkly against the sky, before the first rocket announced that the great concourse of ecclesiastics, having in their midst the papal legate, carrying carrying the sacred Host under the golden canopy and guarded by officers with drawn swords and the 65th Rifle Regiment of the Canadian militia, and accompanied by the highest church dignitaries, had arrived.

At the moment the country around presented the appearance of the historic field of gold, the numerous silken flags and standards giving a wealth of coloring indescribable.

The fair white altar was now outlined with electric bulbs, the cross of light towering above all. A thousand singers sung the chants and thousands joined in the salutations and hymns.

The solemn benediction given by the cardinal legate was heralded by a blare of trumpets, the peal of bells and flights of rockets, then the procession reformed for its final goal, the adjacent Hotel Dieu.

Tons of flowers, sent from all over Canada, were scattered along the route, and the close found many carrying one or more blossoms as souvenirs to preserve forever.

The last scene was one of inspiration and majesty. Mounted police preceded the 65th Regiment, then came dozens of acolytes in red cassocks and white surplices. Then the canopy, covering Cardinal Vannutelli in vestments of gold and walking, despite his years and the length he had already traveled, as straight and commanding as a general at the head of an army. Lastly, one hundred and forty bishops and archbishops in cope and mitra marching, and singing—these were the last pictures that the dispersing thousands carried with them, pictures to live in memory throughout even the longest life time.

Young Men Parade.

Another of the mammoth processions took place in the afternoon, when the young men's societies, massed in formation and brigades, and to the accompaniment of bands and waving flags, paraded and deployed through the streets. Their rendezvous was in the Arena, on St. Catharine street, where their special reception by Cardinal Vannutelli took place.

In his address to the women in Stanley Hall, Archbishop Bourne of Westminster dwelt on the systematization of work amongst women, as helpers in the needs and carrying on of church energies. The local press, commenting on the address, said the remarks of his grace were full of good pointers, irrespective of creed or sect.

His grace told of the work of the women of London amongst the poor. "Thanks be to God," he said, "you do not know here the depth of poverty which obtains in England."

Referring to the many ways by which the church provides avenues for women's activities, Archbishop Bourne said: "I think perhaps you will agree with me that the Catholic Church is able to fit women for any circumstances in which they may have to live in the future. God forbid that circumstances should ever be such as to take away from them the gentleness and the charm of every womanly character, for women who are devout are the very salt of the earth; they can go in and out in paths which others may find difficult, and go unscathed."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

A plan for a railway from the boundary to Peace River is now before the Alberta Government.

Loraine, the actor who has taken to flying, flew almost across the Irish Sea in his aeroplane yesterday.

The new Grand Trunk Pacific elevator at Fort William, said to be the largest in the world, is open for business.

Two attempts to wreck trains on the London and Port Stanley Railway took place on Saturday night. The police are investigating.

The C.P.R. night operator at Indian Head was held up by an armed man and robbed of ten dollars. Twenty dollars was also taken from the till.

John F. Ehrgott of Yarmouth, N.S., was arrested at Boston and taken to New York to face a charge of defrauding the U. S. customs eight years ago.

An Italian Government agent has been inspecting land in the west, and says the Italian Government is about to encourage the emigration of a good class of farmers.

The Michigan State Railroad Commission may order that the G.T.R immediately dismiss all green hands, the inquest having shown that the Durand disaster was due to the negligence of inexperienced trainmen.

Noted Authoress Going Blind.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 12.—That Mrs. Reinehart, the noted authoress and dramatist, of this city, who is now at her country home near Chautuqua, N.Y., for the summer, is going blind, and that specialists extend very little hope, is the statement made by a friend of Mrs. Reinehart here yesterday, following the receipt of a letter from the noted woman.

In Mimic Conflict

War Minister's Scheme For the Reorganization of the British Forces Is Proving Its Worth In Giant Scale Manoeuvres, Which Are Now In Progress — Seventy Thousand Men Under Arms.

London, Sept. 12.—The autumn army manoeuvres now in progress are Mr. Haldane's convincing defence of the efficiency of his system of reorganization. These have opened with the operations of two divisions and a cavalry brigade massed in two camps and numbering 20,000 men, in mimic warfare. The theatre of war will be enlarged this week until it comprises an area of 100 by 50 miles in four counties — Hants, Wilts, Dorset and Somerset—with 70,000 troops under arms. These manoeuvres, while rivaling annually in Germany and France, have never been approached in England in time of peace.

The reserves have rejoined their battalions in order to make up one division to its absolute war strength, and four divisions with cavalry brigades will be commanded by veteran officers. Three brigades of the territorial army will be mustered with the regulars, and all branches of the service will be brought into the field as if an actual campaign were going on.

It is a thorough training for the regulars and home guards, and it is costly. Not less than $1,250,000 will be the extra expense of these manoeuvres. Full use will be made of the resources of invention and science. Aeroplanes will be employed for carrying despatches, and airships will be tested, medical and general stores will be moved by motor transport and field telegraphs will be filled out with wireless messages.

The general staff has been allowed full play for proving that it is not behind the times. The Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto, Can., after a fortnight of training at Aldershot, will take an active part in the manoeuvres, and will represent with fine mettle the quality of the soldiers of the Empire beyond the seas.

Alberta Bye-Elections.

Edmonton, Sept. 12.—At a meeting of the Provincial Cabinet on Saturday, the issuing of writs for bye-elections in Macleod and Gleichen were authorized. Election will be held in both constituencies on Monday, Oct. 3. The date of the next session of the Legislature is practically settled for Nov. 3. It was also decided by the council that the report of the Great Waterways Royal Commission would be laid before the Legislature without previous publication.

Labour Is In Revolt

Lack of Harmony Between the Men and Their Leaders Is Cause of Lockouts and Strikes Involving Many Thousands—Three-Quarters of a Million Workmen May Be Affected by the Troubles.

London, Sept. 12.—The labor crisis impending in the shipyards, railways, mines and cotton factories affects the relations of the workingmen and the trade union officials rather than the relations of the employers and employed. It is civil war within the unions and not an aggressive campaign against capital.

The locked-out boilermakers, by a vote of 2 to 1, have thrown over their leaders and have declined to empower them to make peace with the Employers' Federation by offering guarantees that breaches of the agreement shall not be repeated.

The employers, not having any responsible trade union leaders to treat with will be forced to lock out 17,000 men in addition to the 38,000 already suspended. About twenty-five other unions are involved in the federated shipbuilding industry, and if there are fresh lockouts or strikes vast congeries of trades will be paralyzed, from the inability of the labor leaders to enforce discipline and carry out their engagements with the employers.

There are signs of a similar revolt against the conciliation scheme adopted by the railway corporations and the Amalgamated Society of Railway servants. Something like a deadlock has arisen on the Great Northern Railway, and there are other indications that the railway grants dislike an agreement which binds them to keep the peace for a term of years, according to David Lloyd-George's arrangement.

The Welsh miners are also agitating for a labor rally in defiance of the agreement made with the federation of employers, as the Lancashire cotton mill owner emboldened by the decisive action of the employers in the shipbuilding trade, are also threatening to order general lockout unless a small lot of Oldham strikers accept arbitration.

These various revolts, if the worst comes to the worst, will involve about three-quarters of a million workmen and cause a general prostration of industrial activities. The most obvious moral to be drawn from these labor conflicts is that the trade union officials have got out of touch with organized labor. They are overwhelmed with route work and are not allowed to enjoy an adequate staff of secretaries, and their duties have multiplied until they are unable to keep themselves informed respecting the real feeling of the unions on important questions.

Shot His Lodge Brother.

Philadelphia, Sept. 12.—Declaring that his victim was a member of the blackhand, who had been following him around this country for two years, Francesco Scaglio, aged 21 years, yesterday shot and fatally wounded Guiseppe Ceraclo. The shooting occurred in the heart of the Italian district and was witnessed. Scaglio was captured after a chase of several squares. Ceraclo was taken to a hospital and died shortly after being admitted.

Scaglio, in his statement to the police, said that Ceraclo and he had been members of the same secret society in Italy. He failed to obey the command of the order, and came to this country to escape punishment. He was followed by Ceraclo, who, he says, dogged him through several towns in the mining regions of this state, and followed him to this city.

Determined to end the suspense, Scaglio yesterday sought Ceraclo, and saying, "I'll get you first," shot him.

Was Drunk on the Job.

Winnipeg, Sept. 12.—Because Towerman Leland at Woods' Siding on the C.P.R., seven miles east, was drunk on duty, the Kenora local was derailed, the engine, baggage car and three passenger coaches leaving the rails, and Fireman S. Pattison of Winnipeg was killed, while Engineer T. Elliott of Winnipeg was injured in the back and leg. Both men jumped. The passengers escaped with a severe shaking up. Pattison, who leaves a wife and child, had only moved here a month from Fort William. Leland is under arrest in the city jail, pending an inquiry.

No Creed, No Confinement.

St. Catharines, Sept. 12.—What is to become of George Cook, the young Indian lad convicted of the theft of a bicycle and sentenced to two years in St. John's Industrial School at East Toronto by County Judge Carman. He has been refused there because he is not a Catholic, and previously Victoria Industrial School would not have him because he is not a Protestant.

Will Meet In Detroit.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 12.—The annual convention of the International Photograph Engravers Union ended here Saturday with the election of officers. Matthew Woll, Chicago, was elected president, and Lewis A. Schwartz, Philadelphia, secretary-treasurer. The next convention will be held in Detroit.

S.O.E. Protest.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—The Montreal District Council of the Sons of England, representing 2,700 Englishmen, members of fourteen lodges in the city, meeting in Westmount lodge rooms in Victoria Hall, entered a formal protest against the statements of Father Bernard Vaughan, made in the Monument Nationale on Tuesday evening last. The protest was embodied in a motion.

THE COMING CITY OF WESTERN CANADA

One of the Most Important Divisional Points on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway

The Coming Railway, Manufacturing, Mining, Agricultural, Coal and Commercial Centre of Western Canada.

A FEW FACTS WHY "EDSON"

is a very important divisional point on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. All railway lines are divided into divisions. The C.P.R. has among many others, its Central Division, Prairie Division, Mountain Division and Pacific Division, and has created such cities as Fort William, Winnipeg, Calgary, Revelstoke and Vancouver. The Prairie Division of the C. P. R. begins at Winnipeg and ends at Calgary.

The Prairie Division of the Grand Trunk Pacific Ry. begins at Winnipeg and ends at EDSON. Calgary to-day is a large and prosperous city of some forty thousand (40,000) population. Ten years ago Calgary was rarely heard of. EDSON being equally situated on the railway lines to Calgary, is destined to become as great a city as Calgary.

Unequalled Farm Lands North of EDSON

is situated the grand "prairie country" of the PEACE RIVER, which is known far and wide as the last available stretches of unbroken prairie farm lands. The railroad will be built into this country from EDSON at an early date. This alone will necessitate EDSON becoming one of the important manufacturing and distributing points of the West and will add untold thousands of property values.

Extensive Coal Fields near Edson

South of EDSON about 30 miles are situated very valuable and extensive coal deposits. Mining corporations are investing large sums in developing this wonderful district, and the railroad will be built from EDSON to the mines if possible this year. The Yellowhead Coal Company are investing large sums just south of the city in developing their mines and hold contracts from the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, for their general supply of coal for that district.

Wonderful Timber Belt

West and northwest of EDSON are to be found timber areas, and as the facilities for transportation and power are unexcelled, EDSON will become the chief lumbering city of that part of the West. A saw mill is now being built just north of the city.

EDSON Has Great Asse

Which will make it one of the Greatest Cities in Western Canada

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway

are now building round houses, shops, etc., at EDSON, and besides being a western terminus of the prairie division, it is also the eastern terminus of the mountain division, and eventually will be a great, if not the greater, divisional point than Calgary.

Business Houses, Banks, Manufacturers, Etc.

have locations already purchased in EDSON and considerable building is now going on. Capitalists are evincing keen interest in this new coming western city of EDSON.

EDSON'S RAPID GROWTH

We predict that EDSON with its natural resources and advantages, will become a city of thousands within a very short time and lots bought to-day in EDSON will be selling at several times the present price in a short time. The time to buy lots in EDSON is now.

Ten years ago business and residential lots could be bought in Calgary at prices ranging from $50 to $200, and the selfsame lots have sold since for $5,000 and up to $20,000. Now if EDSON'S location is equal to that of Calgary, what better assurance would you want for a safe investment of your money? A few years will see EDSON property values equal to those of Calgary.

What Does This Mean To You ?

It means nothing, unless you participate in the profits, and you can do this only by buying real estate in this young and vigorous western Canadian city. The time to buy is when the new city has passed through a seasoning stage, where it is in a formative period with its natural resources and where strategical position assures the building up of a big city.

These few facts are sufficient to convince the most sceptical of the immense possibilities of the great future growth of EDSON and it will only be the matter of a few weeks until the choice lots and locations will be bought up by the men who not only thought but acted quickly.

Our Lots Are Nicely Located

adjoining the business section, and are all high, dry and level, and the city is rapidly growing towards this direction. The present prices for a limited time are:

FOR LOTS IN INDUSTRIAL EDSON $60 TO $125

TENNIS MATCHES SATURDAY WERE MOST EXCITING

Peterborough Won Seven Out of Twelve Events From the Millbrook Visitors.

HARD FOUGHT GAMES

The tennis matches on Saturday between the Millbrook Tennis Club and the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association, proved to be the most interesting events of the season. The visitors were all skilful and experienced players, in good form, and they gave an account of themselves such as they might well be proud of. The net result of the day's matches was seven wins to five in favour of Peterborough, and it was open question until the last match was over, which side would capture the most events. A great deal of credit is due to the home players for the splendid exhibition of tennis which they displayed, and this development is largely due to the season's consistent practice and the competitive matches carried on by the Lawn Tennis Association.

One could not in justice to the participants on either side make any special mention of the individual players, yet there was one event which caused much excitement for the many spectators, a long drawn mixed double contest between Miss A. Hall and Sandy Hall for Peterborough, and Miss Wood and Mr. Needler of Millbrook. It took 44 games to settle this dispute and the spectators enthusiastically applauded the good strokes on both sides.

The scores were as follows:

Mr. T. Allen (Mill.) beat Dr. McPherson (Pet.)—6-1, 3-6, 6-4.

Mr. W. Richardson, (Pet.) beat Mr. H. Wood, (Mill.)—8-6, 6-3.

Miss Wood, (Mill.) beat Miss A. Hall, (Pet.)—6-3, 6-4.

Miss M. Burnett, (Pet.) beat Miss Kells, (Mill.)—1-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Miss Wood and Miss Kells, (Mill.) beat Miss Burnett and Miss Dean, (Pet.)—6-0, 6-2.

Mr. W. Landry (Pet.) beat Mr. Chas. Needler, (Mill.)—6-2, 3-6, 6-2.

Mr. T. Allen (Mill.) beat Mr. Burnett (Pet.)—6-2, 4-6, 6-3.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, (Pet.) beat Mr. A. Smith, (Mill.)—4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Messrs. Landry and S. Hall (Pet.) beat Messrs. Needler and Allen (Mill.) —3-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Mr. Wood and Miss Kells, (Mill.) beat Mr. Richardson and Miss Burnet, (Mill.)—8-6, 6-3.

Mr. F. D. Kerr and H. Burnett beat Messrs. H. Wood and A. Smith (Mill.) —6-4, 6-2.

Miss A. Hall and Sandy Hall (Pet.) beat Mr. C. Needler and Miss Wood, (Mill.)—10-8, 7-9, 6-4.

The next tennis event of interest will be the match between Mr. W. Landry and Sandy Hall for the championship of (A) Tournament in the city contest. The winner of this match will play Mr. H. Myers of (B) Tournament in the finals. The match between Messrs. Hall and Landry will be played on Wednesday at 4 p.m. on the Y. M. C. A. courts.

GOULDING WORLD'S CHAMPION WINS FROM WEBB EASILY

TORONTO, SEPT. 12.—G. Goulding the Canadian walker, is now a world's champion, having beaten E. J. Webb of the Herne Hill Harriers, London, England, in both the six-mile and three-mile walks at the Ex Exhibition track meet Saturday afternoon. Fifteen thousand people saw a programme of unusual merit.

Of course the chief interest of the afternoon centred in the invitation walking races between Goulding and Webb. Both walkers are eminently fair, and the judges were not called upon at any stage to correct the respective gaits of the contestants. Goulding is, perhaps, the smaller of the pair. In the mile Webb jumped to the front at the start, but Goulding took up the pace-making after one hundred yards had been covered, and was never afterwards headed. The first half was stepped in 3.15, but Goulding slowed down in the second half. Webb showed no inclination to take up the pace, and the mile was completed in 6.32 4-5. The Englishman sprinted away from the Canadian two hundred yards out and won by about thirty feet. Webb gave the impression that he was not trying particularly hard to cut down the lead which Goulding had earned, preferring rather to save himself for the three-mile event.

As in the mile event, Goulding did most of the pacing in the three-mile race, although the men alternated in the lead. Webb glued to the Torontonian, and, although the latter tried a number of short sprints to shake him off, he was always in close attendance. Not more than three or four feet separated the men at any stage of the three-mile journey until the bell lap, when Goulding opened up a slight gap and increased it to ten yards at the top turn. After turning into the straight the Canadian sprinted, and, although Webb responded gamely, he could not hold the pace, and Goulding drew away to win by about twenty yards. The time was 23.15.

Webb took his beating manfully. He offered no excuse, and said that he had done his best. The Englishman has made an army of friends by his modesty and the plucky race which he walked on Saturday. "He's a jolly well good walker. He beat me fairly both times," said Webb of Goulding after the double defeat. The scene on the track after the second race was one to be remembered. The crowd broke away from the police and surged over to the scratch, where both Goulding and Webb were congratulated on their fine races.

The mile was walked in 6.32. Goulding has done 6.25 4-5, and Webb's best time is also much faster than that on Saturday. In the three miles Goulding's best mark is 21.55, and Webb's 21.21.

CHANGES IN RUGBY RULES NO MORE FAKE KICKS

Scoring Rules Are Made No Plainer and There Should Be No Complaint Over Minor Point.

"SUBS" ALLOWED

(By Lou. E. Marsh in the Toronto Star.)

Toronto is going to have the rugby craze in real earnest this fall, because the indications are that the city will have in the Argos a team to cheer for. There is no use talking, Toronto takes more interest in a winning city team than it does in a winning Varsity team. The collegians are great favourites, but a city team is closer to the hearts of the fans. The college boys are here to-day and scattered to-morrow, while a team from the city at large is an internal portion of the sporting element of the municipality. They live and toil here and so command a closer interest than the college teams ever hope to do.

The Argos, strengthened as they will be by Smirlie aLwson and oRss Bankley behind the line, and Ross Young on the line will be the team best in the Big Four, and the Parkdales, St. Miques and T. A. A. C. will finish good ball in the senior teams and twenty junior teams is the strongest it has been in five years.

At the last meeting of the Canadian Rugby Union several important changes in rugby rules were made.

No Fake Kicks Any More.

As to do away with the fake kick prevalent at the quarter-way stage the following amendment was passed:

"A kick-out is a drop kick from not more than 25 yards from the kicker's own line, and must go as far as the goal lines unless blocked by an opponent. The team entitled to the kick-out shall have the option of a scrimmage on the 25 yard line. The penalty for infringement of this rule shall be a scrimmage by the side not offending on the 25-yard line."

Where a Try is a Try.

The words "or over the deadball line" were added to the definition of a try so as to make it clear that when a player carries the ball across his opponent's goal line he is entitled to a try even if he goes into touch-in-goal beyond the dead-ball line. It is stated though, when an attacking player secures the ball behind the line from an opponent's error and is forced in into touch-in-goal or over the dead-ball line.

To make the definition of a touch-down clear the wording was re-arranged as follows:

"A touch-down is (a) When a player gets possession of the ball in his own goal for a touch-down, fair catch, or is fairly held there; (b) when the ball or a player of either side having possession of it, is in touch-in-goal or across the dead-ball line, except such player carries the ball over his opponents' goal-line and makes a try; (c) when a foul is committed in goal."

Injury and Quarter Time.

To rule 16 was added the following: "No delay for injury to player or any other cause shall exceed two minutes.

It was decided to insert after the word "quarter," in the sixth line, rule 11, section 1, the following:

At the end of the first and third quarters the ball is to be put in play at the opposite end of the field in the same spot as when time was called, the team in possession of the ball to retain possession, and downs to count the same as if play had not been interrupted."

To section one of the playing rules it was decided to add the following so as to gridiron the playing field.

"A distinct line shall be marked across the field at the centre at right angles to touch line, and similar lines every ten yards from the goal line and parallel to it."

No Change in Scoring.

The Inter-provincial introduced an amendment to change the scoring rules by not allowing a score on a ball kicked to the dead ball line or into touch in goal, which does not touch an opponent. It was defeated when it was pointed out that it would be "good tactics" for a defending half back to let the ball go rather than take a chance of making a muff.

The Ontario Union suggested that the penalty for offside in scrimmage to the side in possession of the ball be 10 yards instead of loss of the ball, but it was decided not to make any change, the rule not having worked any hardship in the past.

Substitutes may be put in at any time in the first half for any reason, in other words a man may be tried out, and if found wanting replaced. Under the old rules to get a poor man out injury had to be faked, and he took off with him a man from the opposing side.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBERT WINN.

The death occurred on Thursday, Sept. 8th, at 1 a.m., of Mary Ann, wife of Mr. Robert Winn, Sr., three miles west of Downeyville.

Deceased was fifty-four years of age and died on the anniversary of her birthday. She was apparently in good health until the Sunday preceding her death, when she had a stroke of apoplexy, which did not seem serious, as she recovered entirely in a short time, and on Monday she had a recurrence, and on Thursday morning died almost instantly.

Requiem high mass was celebrated on Friday morning at 10 a.m., by Rev. Fr. McGuire. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband and a large family of sons and daughters.

ROBERT PULLYBLANK.

An old and well-known resident of Otonabee passed away at 4 o'clock this morning, in the person of Mr. Robert Pullyblank of Downer's Corners, who, for over half a century, had resided in the township, and who enjoyed the respect and esteem of a very large circle of friends and acquaintances. The deceased, who was seventy-three years of age, was born in Devonshire, Eng., and came to Canada when 19, settling in Otonabee. He has thus been a continuous resident of that township for fifty-four years. For a long period of time he resided at Zion, Otonabee, but seven years ago moved to Downer's Corners. He had ben ill for the past four months from paralysis. The deceased is survived by a widow and two boys, William, of Bayisland, Alta., and Joshua of Lang, Otonabee. Mrs. Daniel Anderson, of Otonabee, is a niece.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, from the family residence, Downer's Corners, to Zion cemetery.

WILLIAM CONWAY.

Mr. William Conway passed away on Saturday night at his residence, fifth line of Smith, where he had lived for the past thirty-five years. Deceased was eighty-four years of age and was highly respected.

He leaves to mourn his loss four sons and two daughters. The sons are John, of Emmismore; William, of Bridgenorth; James, of Sault Ste Marie; Michael, of Smith. The daughters are Mrs. Mannam, of Iowa, and Mrs. Turtle, of Bridgenorth.

The funeral took place this morning from his residence to St. Peter's cemetery, city.

LUCY GERTRUDE MARGERY ELLIOTT.

The death occurred yesterday of Lucy Gertrude Margery three months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Elliott, 428 Sherbrooke street. The little one had been ailing with marasmus, and death was due to heart failure.

The funeral took place this afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Mr. Trumpour officiated. The many friends of the bereaved parents sympathize with them in their great sorrow.

MRS. ELIAS SAGER.

The people of this city will learn, with deep regret, of the death of Mrs. Elias Sager, of Buffalo, who passed away on Friday morning last, and who formerly resided in this city. Deceased lived in Buffalo for the past seven years and was highly respected by all who knew her.

She was ill for the past five or six weeks, with the fatal results as stated.

The deceased is survived by six sons and three daughters. The sons are: Mr. Sidney, Louis, Jacob, Ernest and Will, all of Buffalo. The daughters are: Mrs. Gilbert, of Bruton; Mrs. Bilanes, of Toronto, and Mrs. Gray, of Buffalo.

The funeral took place this morning from the L.S. train to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Mr. Marsh officiating. All the relatives of the family attended.

ASSISTANT PRESENT

Rev. Charles Carpenter Was at St. John's Yesterday

Rev. Charles Carpenter, the newly appointed assistant at St. John's church, was present in the congregation at St. John's yesterday. He took no part in the services, as he is resting from his long journey from Newfoundland. Canon Davidson referred to his coming and extended greetings from the congregation. The work of the congregation should go forward even better than before.

Canon Davidson also made a strong appeal to complete the Chimes fund, by sending new contributions and paying the old ones, thus enlisting the interests of all.

NARROW ESCAPE

What might have proved a very severe accident occurred yesterday on Charlotte street, near the G.T.R. station, when a local man was driving along at a rapid pace. It was the quick action of the driver that averted the fatality.

When the person in question was driving along two little tots tried to cross ahead of the vehicle, and got excited, so that they stood directly in the way. All children as small as those in question should be looked after and kept off the street when alone.

But for the action of the driver, who managed to pull the horse to one side, both children would almost certainly have been killed.

Drivers, also, should be careful in driving along the streets, as accidents of this nature are taking place every day.

CANADIAN LABORATORY

The Dr. Miles Medical Co., of Elkhart, Indiana, has established a Canadian Laboratory at Toronto. This firm, whose advertising will appear regularly in our columns, has been in business in the States for thirty years, and their line is known wherever there is a drug store.

For the convenience of their many patrons in Canada, and to satisfy the rapidly-growing demand for their goods (though never before advertised in the Dominion) the Canadian Laboratory has been established.

While in no manner responsible for specific statement appearing in our advertising columns, we believe the Dr. Miles Medical Co., of Toronto, is entitled to that large share of our confidence of the trade and public, which they enjoy in the States.

Beds Are Not to Be Had by Visitors and Food In Restaurants Runs Out —Irish Flag Too Conspicuous In Decorations, Say French-Canadians—Duhamel Successorship Now Receives Attention.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—Ten thousand people walked the streets of Montreal Sunday night unable to find lodgings. The food ran short in the restaurants, and crowds flocked to the fruit stores, and made meals from bananas and candy.

All night long the Grand Trunk station was packed to suffocation, policemen refusing to let any more in, and this caused scores to lose their trains. The Canadian Pacific ran seven trains to Quebec Sunday evening, and other lines were, likewise, choked with specials.

The wind-up of the eucharistic congress left about 200,000 strangers in Montreal, all of whom had wanted to get away home as soon as possible. The result is said to be a tie-up at the stations that is practically complete.

The only fatality in connection with the eucharistic demonstration so far reported is the death of Abbe Verrett, cure of St. Sylvestre, Que., who was crushed by a team while getting off a car on St. Lawrence street, Saturday, and died Sunday morning at the Hotel Dieu.

Some of the French-Canadian aldermen are after Mayor Guerin for having the Irish flag in a superior place to the Union Jack on the City Hall, and his worship declared that he had told them if they could not agree on the flag question, that he would have them all hauled down except the Union Jack, which he had taken care to place always in the centre.

Ald. Larrivire, who has not evidently heard of this, stated that the French race had been insulted by the mayor, and that the tri-color had the right to fly in Canada, because it was the first flag in this country.

The city is talking to-day of the reception given some time since to a delegation from the French-Canadian artisans, which asked the Archbishop of Kingston to permit the establishment of a branch in his diocese. His grace replied that he did not want any French organization in his diocese. Also, he said that everybody would soon have to speak English in Canada, and the sooner they realized the fact the better.

The greatest possible interest is felt here over the rumored appointment of Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston to the vacant episcopal seat at Ottawa, as successor to the late Mgr. Duhamel. It has been known for months past that while the French bishops have been united on Canon Gauthier of the archbishop's palace here, the papal delegate has championed the appointment of an English-speaking prelate to the Ottawa vacancy. If the report be true, and that is not quite sure, that the Kingston prelate goes to Ottawa, there will be no end to the comment in this province, as such a nomination would be a very signal victory for the Irish over the French-Canadian contention.

The Navy Is Assailed

Fort William, Sept. 13.—William Glockling of Toronto, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, presented his address to the delegates in the form of an executive report. In this communication both political parties were assailed for the position they assumed in regard to the formation of the Canadian navy. It attacked the new immigration policy of the Government, and described suggested compulsory arbitration legislation.

Attached to the executive report for the Dominion were reports for individual provinces. All these went to show that labor interests in Canada had been fairly well conserved during the year, and that some progress had been made towards the ends the congress ultimately hoped to attain.

The executive report was in part as follows: "The past year has been one of great activity in industrial circles. The country's prosperity continues, and workers are in a position to be sharers in the material advancement to which their labors so extensively contribute. On every hand industry is expanding, and the danger is not of retrogression, but an oversight of those precautions that will make for permanent, rather than speedy betterment."

Passing on, the report expressed regret that the efforts of the congress and of those similarly inclined to preserve the peace of nations and conserve the autonomy of the country had been of little avail. The old parties were denounced for voting away the moneys of the people in the creation of a navy, and thereby making a useless effort to demonstrate loyalty that was not in question.

"Whether it is a tin-pot navy or a tin-can opposition proposal, the result is the same. We are committed to a vast expenditure for war purposes. And the same jingo element that foisted the new policy upon the Canadian people will, no doubt, in the same way rush into the wars of the Mother Country. Your executive recommends that continued efforts be made to promote the efforts of those who believe in international peace."

The report of the campaign at Ottawa last session of Parliament is mentioned, and special reference is made to the Belcourt bill in the Senate to have labor unions declared illegal, and to the agitation in favor of a general eight-hour day. The appointment of a commission of enquiry on the subject of technical education is commended. Delegates are urged not to be misled by declarations that further importations of cheap labor are necessary to insure proper development of the country, and the lowering of restrictions on immigration is viewed with misgiving.

The executive protests against the custom of the American Federation of Labor in classing the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress as a state federation. It also issues a warning against haste in enacting legislation to secure compulsory arbitration.

"Your executive believes that the almost unanimous position of the organized workers of Canada at the present juncture is emphatically opposed to compulsory arbitration. Canada has taken a long step forward in the adoption of the principle of compulsory investigation, as worked out under the Lemieux Act. Although the principle is working out fairly satisfactory, it is yet too early to pass finally upon it, and it would be madness to make the final jump to compulsory arbitration before compulsory investigation has been thoroughly tested.

"Nor do we believe that compulsory arbitration would for years and years to come be acceptable, either to workers or employers in this country. It is a right that belongs to every man to cease work, or to refuse to work for any employer when he sees fit to do so, subject to any contract made in that regard. So, too, it must be the right and privilege of any employer to refuse to continue in his service any workman he does not desire to employ or to whom he does not need, subject again to contractual rights."

Attacks Evidence

Say They Needed It In Their Work of Recovering the Remains of Mrs. Crippen—Lawyer Declares Testimony of Chemists Cannot Be Scientific—Expert on Criminal Law Foresees His Acquittal.

London, Sept. 13.—The inquest over the remains taken from the cellar of Dr. Crippen's residence was resumed yesterday. Arthur Newton, attorney for Crippen, went after the undertaker and his assistant, in an attempt to show that they shoveled the remains into a box, taking little care to keep dirt and stones separate. Both men denied this, saying there was neither stones nor dirt in the coffin when it was taken to the morgue. They admitted, however, that there was a great deal of carbolic acid used, and said they had to use it in order to approach where the body was buried.

It was plain from the questions that Newton put to these two witnesses that he hopes to demonstrate that the testimony of the chemists that hyoscin poisoning caused the death of the person whose body was taken from the Crippen cellar was a conclusion that could not have been reached by an analysis.

Miss May, secretary of the Music Hall Guild, swore that Mrs. Crippen had told her early in January of a dream she had at Christmas time. In it, Mrs. Crippen said, she imagined she was being strangled by the doctor.

Mrs. Paul Martinetto, an intimate friend of Mrs. Crippen, had seen her Jan. 31, when she seemed in excellent spirits, and had said nothing about going away.

Says Crippen Will Escape.

New York, Sept. 13.—John F. McIntyre, who has participated as counsel in 700 murder trials, acting in 614 as prosecutor; who in his service of 14 years in the district attorney's office here, secured 580 convictions for various degrees of homicides, including 44 at one assize sittings, believes Crippen will escape British law. McIntyre has himself appeared as counsel before a British court, being the first American lawyer so permitted. He was engaged by the New York Irish societies to go to England and defend Edward Ivory, charged with plotting to dynamite the House of Parliament and assassinate Queen Victoria. In this case McIntyre employed the tactics of the expert. Instead of attempting to make a case for Ivory, he admitted that the dynamite plot existed, but contended before Lord Justice Sir Henry Hawkins that the plot was completed in Rotterdam, and hence not in the jurisdiction of English courts. It was purely a point of law, but it won the case.

"In my opinion Dr. Crippen will be acquitted of the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore," he said yesterday. "The principle of law known as Lord Hale's rule will save him. The crown attorneys will fail to establish by direct proof the basic part of the corpus delicti, the body of the crime—the fact that Belle Elmore is actually dead or that Dr. Crippen used violence upon her sufficient to cause death.

"Crippen's case will never go to the jury. It will be argued on bloodless legal principles before the icy reason of a judge. No sentiment will have part in that argument. It will be a marshalling of legal precepts, impersonal as rock, rigid from their crust of centuries of custom."

Not a Soulless Religion.

Kingston, Sept. 13.—Mayor Couper laid the corner-stone of the addition to the Protestant Orphans' Home yesterday afternoon.

In his address Rev. Dr. Mackie of St. Andrew's Church said: "This ceremony ought to be a sign that the religion we profess is not a soulless religion. The religion we profess is a religion that has a soul; anyone with eyes and wants to see can see what is being done by sweet charity. In Kingstone alone it can be seen what the churches have done for the city, for the education of the young, providing protection for the orphan, relieving the suffering, caring for the strangers within our gates. The religion with all this at its back could not be denounced as dead."

Quebec, Sept. 13.—News has reached this city from St. Philemon, Bellechasse County, that a woman named Fournier has died as the result of injuries received from her husband, who is said to have attacked her with a hammer, while in a jealous rage. # "THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracey, (Copyrighted)

She took him to the kitchen, where Enid, aided by a sailor, pressed into service, was dispensing cocoa and biscuits. Pyne, who remained in the stairway, went off with the water and Constance's lantern. The interior of the lighthouse was utterly dark. To move without a light, and with no prior knowledge of its internal arrangements, was positively dangerous. All told there were seven lamps of various sizes available. Brand had one, four were distributed throughout the apartments tenanted by the survivors of the wreck, two were retained for transit purposes and the men shivering in the entrance passage had no light at all.

Constance took Enid's lantern in order to discover the whereabouts of Mr. Emmett, the first officer, the tray-carrying sailor offering to guide her to him.

When Payne came back he found Enid in the dark and mistook her for Constance.

"They want some more," he cried at the door.

"Some more what?" she demanded. It was no time for elegant diction. Her heart jumped each time the sea sprang at the rock. It seemed to be so much worse in the dark.

"Water," said he.

"Dear me. I should have thought everybody would be fully satisfied in that respect."

He held up the lantern.

"Well, that's curious," he cried. "I imagined you were the other young lady. The water is needed in the hospital."

"Why didn't you say so?" she snapped, being in reality very angry with herself for her flippancy. She gave him a full pail and he quitted her.

Constance, having delivered her father's message to Mr. Emmett, was greeted with a tart question when she re-entered the kitchen:

"Why on earth didn't you tell me that young man was attending to the injured people? Is he a doctor?"

"I think not. What happened?"

"He came for a second supply of water and nearly bit my head off."

"Oh, Enid! I am sure he did not mean anything. Didn't you recognize him? It was he who climbed the mast and flung the rope to us."

"There!" said Enid, "I've gone and done it. Honestly, you know, it was I who was rude. He will think me a perfect cat."

"That isn't what people are saying" explained Mr. Pyne, whose approach was deadened by the outer noise. "There's a kind of general idea floating round that this locality is an annex of heaven, with ministering angels in attendance."

In the half light of the tiny lamps he could not see Enid's scarlet face. There was a moment's silence, and this very self-possessed youth spoke again.

"The nice things we all have to tell you will keep," he said. "Would you mind letting me know in which rooms you have located the ladies?"

Constance, as major domo, gave the information asked for:

"They are in the two bedrooms over head. Poor things! I am at my wits' end to know how to get their clothing dried. You see, Mr. Pyne, my sister and I have no spare clothes here. We only came to the rock this afternoon, by the merest chance."

"That is just what was troubling me," he answered. "I am sort of interested in one of them."

"Oh," said Constance, "I do wish I could help. But, indeed, my own skirts are wringing wet."

"From what I can make out, then, my prospective step-aunt will catch a very bad cold."

The queer phrase puzzled the girls, but Constance, ready for her, jumped at a conclusion.

"Your prospective step-aunt. You mean, perhaps, your fiancee's aunt?" she suggested.

"I don't know the lady. No, ma'am I was right first time. Mrs. Vansittart is going to marry my uncle, so I keep an eye on her stock of that extent."

"How stupid of me!" she explained, whilst a delighted giggle from Enid did not help to mend matters. So Constance became very stately.

"I will ask Mrs. Vansittart to come out and speak to you—" she began.

"No, no! I don't wish that. You might tell her I am all right That is the limit. And—may I make a suggestion?"

"Pray do."

"It will help considerable if the women-folk take it in turn to get into the beds or bunks. Then, some of the linen could be dried at the stove. I will take charge of that part of the business, if I may. Otherwise, some of them will die."

The girls agreed that this was a capital idea. Constance went upstairs. In the first room she inquired:

"Is Mrs. Vansittart here?"

"Yes," said a sweet, but rather querulous voice.

A lady, who had already appropriated the lower bunk, raised herself on an elbow.

The little apartment, like every part of the building, save the rooms reserved by Brand's directions, was packed almost to suffocation. This, if harmful in one respect, was beneficial in another. The mere animal warmth of so many human beings was grateful after the freezing effect of the gale on people literally soaked to the skin.

The girl, not unmoved by curiosity, held the light so that it illuminated Mrs. Vansittart. A woman of forty, no matter how good-looking and well-preserved she may be, is in a sorry plight under such conditions. Constance saw a beautiful face, deathly white and haggard, yet animated and clearly chiselled. The eyes were large and lustrous, the mouth firm, the nose and chin those of a Greek statue. Just now there were deep lines across the base of the high forehead. The thin lips, allied to a transient hawk-like gleam in the prominent eyes, gave a momentary glimpse of a harsh and perhaps cruel disposition. A charming smile promptly dispelled this fleeting impression. Instantly Constance was aware of having seen Mrs. Vansittart before. So vivd was the fanciful idea that she became tongue-tied.

"Do you want me" asked the stranger, with a new interest, and still smiling. Constance found herself wondering if the smile were not cultivated to hide that faintly-caught suggestion of the bird of prey. But the question restored her mental poise.

"Only to say that Mr. Pyne—" she began.

"Charlie! Is he saved"

Mrs. Vansittart certainly had the faculty of betraying intense interest. The girl attributed the nervous start, the quick colour which tinged the white cheeks, to the natural anxiety of a woman who stood in such approximate degree of kin to the young American.

"Oh, yes," said the girl, with ready sympathy. "Don't you know that all of you owe your lives to his daring? He asked me to—to say he was all right, and—that he hoped you were not utterly collapsed."

The addendum was a kindly one. No doubt, Mr. Pyne had meant her to convey such a message. Mrs. Vansittart, it was evident, had received a shock. Perhaps she was a timorous, shrinking woman, averse to the sudden stare of others.

"I know nothing," she murmured. "It was all so horrible. Oh, God! shall I ever forget that scene in the saloon. They were tigers, fierce tigers with the howls and the baleful eyes of wild beasts."

This outburst was as unexpected as her staccato question. Constance bent over her and placed a gentle hand on her forehead.

"You must try to forget all that," she said, soothingly. "Indeed, it must have been very terrible. It was dreadful enough for us, looking down at things through a mist of foam. For you— But there! You are one of the few who escaped. That is everything. God has been very good to you!"

She was stooping low and holding the lantern in her left hand.

Suddenly, Mrs. Vansittart's eyes gleamed again with that lambent light so oddly at variance with her smile. The slight flush of excitement yielded to a ghostly pallor. With surprising energy she caught the girl's arm.

"Who are you?" she whispered. "Tell me, child, who are you?"

"My father is the lighthouse-keeper," said Constance. "I am here quite by chance. I—"

"But your name! What is your name?"

"Constance Brand."

"Brand, did you say? And your father's name?"

"Stephen Brand. Really, Mrs. Vansittart, you must try to compose yourself. You are over-wrought, and—"

She was about to say "feverish." Indeed, that was a mild word. The strange glare in Mrs. Vansittart's eyes amazed her. She shrank away, but only for an instant. With a deep sigh, the lady sank back on the pillow and fainted.

Constance was then frightened beyond question. She feared that the seizure might be a serious one, under the circumstances. To her great relief another woman, who could not help hearing the conversation and witnessing its sequel, came to the rescue.

"Don't be alarmed" she said. "Mrs. Vansittart is very highly strung. She fainted in the saloon. She does not realize that Mr. Pyne not only saved her, but nearly every woman here, when the door was broken open. Now, don't you worry, my dear, I will look after her. You have a great deal to do, I am sure."

Constance realised that the advice was good. She could not attend to one and neglect many.

Telling the women of the plan to dry their under-clothing in sections, she asked them to help her by arranging matters so that their garments should be divided into lots. Then she went to the second bedroom and made the same suggestion. The case of the sufferers in the hospital required more drastic measures. The little girl she stripped with her own hands and clothed her in one of Brand's flannel shirts and a commandeered reefer jacket.

Two of Brand's spare suits and a couple of blankets enabled the two injured women, who were able to walk, to get rid of their wet garments in the crowded room beneath, and the lockers of Jackson and Bates made it possible for the men who most needed attention to be made comfortable by the invaluable hospital orderly.

Constance was kept busy flying up and down to the kitchen, whilst Enid, having met all immediate demands in the matter of a hot beverage and some thing to eat, supplemented her labours.

Pyne worked like a Trojan. As each pile of sodden garments was delivered to him he squeezed out as much water as possible with his hands and then applied himself to the task of baking them dry. He did this, too, in a very efficient way, speedily converting the kitchen into a miniature Turkish bath. At the end of an hour, he had succeeded so well that more than one-half of the females were supplied with tolerably dry and warm under-clothing. With their heavier garments, of course nothing could be done.

Once on the stairs, Enid detained Constance for a moment's chat.

"Mrs. Vansittart is odd," she said.

Constance, so taken up was she with many errands, had forgotten the lady.

"How thoughtless of me," she cried. "Is she better?"

"Yes. But when I went in just now to give her her clothes, she said to me: 'Are you the sister of the other—of Constance Brand?' It was no time for explanations, so I just said 'Yes.' She gave me such a queer look, and then smiled quite pleasantly, apologizing for troubling me."

"Perhaps she knew dad years ago," she said.

"What do you think Mr. Pyne said about her?"

"How can I tell? Did you speak of her to him?"

"I told him she had fainted when you delivered his message. He said: 'Guess she can faint as easy as I can fall off a house.' Isn't he funny?"

"I think he is splendid," said Constance.

The wreck was now wholly demolished. The first big wave of the retreating tide enveloped the lighthouse and smote it with thunderous malice. Screams came from the women's quarters.

"Go, Enid," said Constance. "Tell them they have nothing to fear. They must expect these things to happen for nearly two hours. Tell them what dad said. Twenty-five years, you know."

Brave hearts What infinite penetration inspired the man who first said "Noblesse oblige!"

Constance looked in at the kitchen. Pyne loomed through a fog of steam.

"Pay no heed to these—" she was interrupted by another mighty thump and cataract roar—"these blows of Thor's hammer," she cried.

"Play me for an anvil," he returned.

She descended to the depths, to reassure the men. Talking with shrill cheerfulness at each doorway was easy. It helped her to go down, down, feeling stone and iron trembling as every surge was hurled many feet above her head. At last, she stood on the lowest floor. Beneath her feet was naught but granite and iron bars. Here was solidity. How grateful to know of this firm base, rooted in the very world. Her heart leaped to her mouth, but not with fear. She was proud of the lighthouse, strong in the knowledge of its majestic strength.

Nevertheless, in this place, the source of her own sense of security, she found uneasiness among the men. They were all sailors in this lowest habitable region. Their pre-conceived ideas had been rudely reversed. The ship, the noble structure which defied the storm by yielding to its utmost fury, had for them no terrors. But the stark pillar which flinched from no assault bewildered them. It was impossible to believe that it could withstand the strain. Ha! Listen to that. The battering-ram of ocean applied to a thin shaft of stone. Surely it must be pounded into fragments.

Said one, with indefinite bellow amidst the black turmoil: "I can't stand this, mates."

"Up aloft for me!" cried another.

"Let's die with our eyes open, anyhow," chimed in a third.

But a light flashed in the rolling orbs of the man who was already on the stairs. Astounded, he drew back. Constance stood in their midst a mere girl, radiant, smilingly unconcerned, addressing them in calm words, broken only by the fitful noises.

"Sorry your quarters—so very unpleasant. Only last a—couple of hours. Twenty-five years—far worse gales. Want any more cocoa?"

"Thank you kindly, miss, we're quite comfortable." This from the man who wished to die with his eyes open.

"Please, miss, may we smoke?" said he who couldn't stand it.

Constance hesitated. Blithely unconscious that a whiff of mutiny had swept through the storm-tossed fold, she pondered the problem. She saw no harm in it.

"Yes," she said. "Smoke by all

Eczema On Head and Arm

Four Doctors Failed After Fair Trial—Cure Effected by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

The average physician is helpless in the presence of skin diseases such as eczema and salt rheum. Some make the mistake of treating eczema as a blood disease and advise internal treatment. Others think only relief is possible and recommend a lotion to afford relief from the itching.

By far the most successful treatment for eczema is the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment. You can verify this statement by enquiring of any druggist. This letter is a fair sample of what we are receiving about every day.

Mr. Geo. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great benefit I received from using Dr. Chase's Ointment. For years I suffered with a skin disease on my head, a sort of eczema. I tried four doctors, giving each a fair trial, but got no better. In fact, the disease spread to my left arm.

"I saw Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised and began using it. Persistent use of this treatment has entirely cured me and I give you a statement of my case with pleasure as I hope thereby to induce some other sufferer to try the same Dr. Chase's Ointment."

There is a wonderful satisfaction in using Dr. Chase's Ointment for you can see from day to day just what results are being accomplished. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE STANDARD OF PURITY

Laboratory of Provincial Government Analyst.
MONTREAL, 22nd February, 1909.
I HEREBY CERTIFY that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four lots of about 150 barrels each and six lots of about 450 bags each. I have analyzed same and find them uniformly to contain 99-99/100 to 100 per cent of pure cane sugar, with no impurities whatever.

TRAINING LIONS.

A Daring Performance That Had a Very Simple Explanation.

Some years ago a lion tamer who was exhibiting in a German circus in Berlin attracted immense crowds at each performance by doing what seemed to be the most daring of acts in the lions' cage. He would climb into the cage with great pieces of meat and throw it to the roaring beasts. The moment they had leaped upon it he would spring among them and put his foot on it. The animals would growl furiously, and then, just as the spectators were all waiting breathlessly, expecting that the beasts would tear him to pieces, they would shrink back, cowed. After he had repeated this exciting act for many days an Englishman made a wager with him for a big sum of money that he dare to do it after the lions had been starved for three days. The trainer considered for a moment and then accepted the wager, making only the condition that he be allowed to have three weeks of preparation.

At the end of three weeks the trainer announced that he was ready, and the process of starving the lions began. The Englishman kept guards posted around the cage day and night to make certain that not a morsel of food should be given to the animals. At the expiration of the three days all Amsterdam rushed to the circus. The lions were maddened with hunger, as any one could see and hear, for they roared continually and their attempts to break through the bars showed how angry they had become. In the height of the uproar the trainer entered the cage with an immense piece of beef in his arms. He tossed it on the floor of the cage, raised his whip, and, lo, not one lion dared to approach it. The mighty beasts lay crouched, roaring and gnawing so hard that their great frames shook, and each kept his terrific yellow eyes fixed hungrily on the meat, but not one of them stirred.

The trainer stooped, lifted the beef and tossed it to them again, and in a moment the lions were in a great tawny ball, reading and snarling and tearing, with blood from the mangled beef spurting all over the cage. The Englishman paid his bet and then tried to find out how the lion tamer had acquired such wonderful control over his beasts. At first the man would not tell, but at last he consented to explain it. During the three weeks' period of preparation he had always starved the lions from the very beginning. Then on the fourth day he would enter the cage with a piece of beef which had been soaked in kerosene oil. The lions would no sooner pounce upon it than they would drink away, sickened by the stuff. Then he would throw them a big and good piece of beef, which they would devour in a moment. The lions soon became so accustomed to eating that the first piece of beef they was thrown to them was not good this at the end of three days they would not even move from their corners when the trainer threw it on the floor of the cage. They would not try to eat anything except the second piece. So the daring trick had a very simple explanation.

Writing In Bible Times.

Prof. Flinders Petrie says that there is nothing abnormal, nothing to be questioned, in the general outlines of the Bible story of the exodus. He contends that the spread of writing in those days has been enormously underestimated.

"It is my firm conviction," he says, "that the Europe of a century ago was far more illiterate than the eastern world in Bible times. We have, for instance, a papyrus containing a cook's accounts scrawled in a very clumsy hand, with the reckoning all wrong, but it shows that even a common servant of those days knew how to write. We have another containing a petition from a peasant. These things are extremely important as showing the probability of documentary records of a historical nature existing at the time.—Jewish Chronicle.

Had to Give It Up.

"When can you spare the time for our marriage, Marion?" the betrothed man asked.

The woman consulted her engagement book. "Three o'clock next Friday afternoon," she replied.

"Oh, that will be out of the question!" he cried protestingly. "There's a special meeting of the Glitter Gold Company that I must attend at that time."

"Well, it's the only time I have," she told him, with an air of easy resignation. "Every other hour for the next two years is filled up."

The man jerked his shoulders irritably. "I guess we'll have to call our engagement off, then," he said.

"It seems to be inevitable," she replied indifferently.

And so they parted.

Repton's New Head.

Mr. William Temple, who has been appointed to the headmastership of Repton (Eng.) School, is the youngest son of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, who was rather fond of telling the following story illustrating his scholastic partiality for abstruse problems of metaphysics. Father and son, the latter then twelve years old, were starting to visit a remote country parish, and as he got into the carriage the boy exclaimed: "Now, father, I'm going for a long drive, and you'll have time to explain to me the philosophy of Kant." "That was rather a large order," related the primate, "but I made the attempt.

Careful Upbringing.

While dining dinner at a friend's home the evening little George refused [illegible] self conscious dignity, several toothsome dishes which William, his tiny host, devoured with relish.

Finally Master William began to eat a [illegible] of fruit cake, George eyed him wistfully for a long time. Then, [illegible] his head on his hand, with a [illegible] he said:

"Oh, [illegible] I wish my stomach wasn't [illegible] brungded up o'rectly!"

Maiden Speech.

It is recorded that when the Earl of Rochester [illegible] reign of Charles II. rose to make his maiden speech in the house of lords he said: "My lords—my lords, I rise for the first time [illegible] time. My lords, I divide my [illegible] into four branches." Here there was an embarrassing pause of some minutes. "My lords," the earl then ejaculated, "if ever I rise again in this house may cut me off, root and branch, all, forever!"

A Question of Ownership.

"Are you the man who advertises 'Own your own home?' said the dejected looking [illegible]

"I am," [illegible] the real estate dealer.

"Well, I'd like to get the recipe."

"The what?"

"The recipe. [illegible] modus operandi. I want to know [illegible] to do to own my own home. [illegible] has a temper like a raging [illegible] and muscles like Hercules. If you [illegible] tell me how to dispossess her, [illegible] no object."

A Lazy Liver

Upsets the Whole System. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Put Things Right Again.

His liver is a sluggish—his stomach bad.

A bitter taste in the mouth—coated tongue—dizziness on rising suddenly—bowels alternately loose and constipated—these mean that the liver is out of order.

Instead of flowing into the bowels, to regulate them and aid digestion, the bile has been going all through the system, upsetting digestion, leaving the bowels constipated, and making the sufferer perfectly miserable. This is biliousness.

The quick, safe and certain cure is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They clear out the clogged-up system, stir up the lazy liver, cleanse the stomach and bowels and purify the blood. The bile returns to its normal course, the food is again digested properly and all the disagreeable symptoms vanish.

Doctors prescribe Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills and they are known throughout the world as a proven cure for all digestive troubles. They are equally effective in strengthening weak kidneys and curing rheumatism.

Tacoma's Great Stadium.

Tacoma's high school, which plays an important part in Pacific coast athletics, is the only high school in America having an Olympic stadium, if not the only one in the world. It is a ponderous mass of steel and concrete, just completed at a cost of more than $100,000, in a gulch at one side of the high school building. The gulch happened to be just the right shape for the stadium, so but little excavation was required. The structure is shaped like a horseshoe, with the open end overlooking Commencement bay. It will seat 25,000 people, has a center sufficiently large for baseball, football, track and field events, and will also be used for outdoor musical concerts and entertainments.—Popular Mechanics.

To Rival the Passion Play.

France is to have something in the nature of a rival to the Passion play at Oberammergau. At Domremy, on the very spot where Jeanne d'Arc heard the miraculous voices urging her to go to the rescue of her king and country, an immense open air theater is to be constructed, in which the drama and tragedy of her life are, with the exception of the leading roles, to be played by native actors. About 600 persons, 150 of them on horseback, will take part in the representations. The first of these, it is expected, will be given on May 7 next year. Two performances a month will also be given in June, July and August.

BOYS' CAMPAIGN ! !

$$ BOYS $$

This is a heart-to-heart talk with Boys about selling the Examiner, and how it may act as a stepping-stone to a successful business career in after years.

BOYS, do you recognize the fact that this little business offers you an opportunity to

Make100

per cent.

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

Here's How It's Done

BUY the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each; in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive 10 cts. from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say, the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

Climbing Steadily

THE Street Sales of the Examiner are climbing steadily and have touched by far the highest point in the history of the paper.

This result has increased the value of the Examiner as an advertising medium. In the city and in the districts outside the city limits, the increase in circulation is most gratifying, and credit is due to the pushing newsboys for their good work in bringing in new subscribers.

SELLING THE

Persistency Draws Good Wages

Enough persistency in Boys is necessary to draw good wages, and this quality gives the biggest awards to the Boys who stick to business.

TO know how to KEEP ON is important in selling papers. It is the secret of the boy who is called "fortunate."

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily selling the Examiner, but some make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Use Spare Time Usefully

GET in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS! Use your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and 'Xmas.

The delivery of the Examiner is under strict and constant supervision. Yet irregularities will creep in because carrier boys make mistakes like all other people.

Subscribers are invited to complain PROMPTLY. Complaints are welcomed when there is a reason for them. They will be given prompt attention.

EXAMINER

Boys, figure this proposition out for yourselves. Be Ambitious. Good Newsboys are taken care of and recommended for future positions

THE PILLAR OF LIGHT

means. I will ask my daughter, if it should be dangerous, my father, and back and let you know. In a few hours it will be daylight and if the coast falls he will whistle come and open the door."

By sheer inspiration she had uttered the formula destined to annihilate the necromantic bluster of the hammering waves. Open the door!

So this ponderous racket was a mere tidal trick, a bogey, which each passing minute would expose more thoroughly.

"All right, miss, an' Gawd bless yer," growled one who had not spoken hitherto. There was a chorus of approval. Constance gave a little gulp. The cultured and delicate lady lying in the bunk above had not spoken so.

"Indeed," she gasped, "God has blessed some of us this night."

Then she fled, further utterances failing her.

Nearer the sky, Brand tended the lamp and discussed matters with chief officer Emmett. The sailor, with the terse directness of his class, told how the Chinook had made an excellent voyage from New York until she ran into bad weather about four hundred miles west of the Lizard.

"It seems to me," he said, "as if we dropped onto the track of that hurricane after it had curved away to the nor'ard, and the d—d thing swooped down on us again when we were abreast of the Bishop Light."

Brand nodded. This surmise agreed with his own theory of the storm, as indicated by the sea.

Mr. Emmett held out a clenched fist with thumb jerked towards the reef.

"I wouldn't breathe a word if he wasn't gone," he said, "but the old man was drivin' her too hard. I knew it, and the chief knew it"—he meant the chief engineer—"but he wouldn't listen to either Mac or me. Fact is, he was fair crazy to set up a new record for the boat. She's been crossin' the Atlantic forty times a year for upwards of twenty years, and the recent alterations, although they added fifty feet to her length, only increased her engine-power in proportion."

"You surprise me," broke in Brand.

"You speak as if the Chinook were nearly as old as this lighthouse, yet I have never even heard her name before."

"You know her well enough all the same," said the other ruefully. "This is her maiden voyage since she was altered; an' they rechristened her, too—always a d——d unlucky thing to do, I say. Bless your heart, man, she is the old Princess Royal. Eh? What's that?"

He guffawed mournfully at Brand's involuntary exclamation.

"Certain! Well, surely I ought to know. I have passed most of my service with the company in her, and when I took a screw to Cramp's to navigate her to New York after she was smartened up I little imagined I would see her laid by forever the next time we saw the lights of Old England. My goodness, even what was left of the old girl ought to know her way bettern't that."

"But what did really happen?"

"Drivin' her, I tell you—drivin' her full pelt at land the mails at Southampton twelve hours ahead of schedule. With that awful sea liftin' her, and a shaft twenty feet longer, what could you expect? Poor Perkins! A rare hard worker, too. Now he's gone down with his ship an' over two hundred passengers an' crew."

"Judging by the number saved I feared that more were lost."

"It's the off season, you know. The passenger list was light. For the Lord's sake, think of what it might have been in May or June!"

"It is bad enough as it is. All has not ended with the disappearance of the vessel."

The sailor shot a sharp glance at Brand.

"You can't be thinkin' anyone was to blame—" he commenced. But Brand waved aside the fancied imputation.

"Blame!" he said. "With a broken shaft! In that whirlwind; No, no. I sent for you to talk over the new difficulty which has to be faced. There is food, water and fuel here for three men for two months. If you do a little sum you will find that the available stores on the basis of full rations will maintain eighty-one people for two days and a quarter."

"But we're only six miles from the mainland." Mr. Emmett had not yet grasped the true meaning of the figures.

"I have been here more than once for six weeks at a stretch, when, for all the assistance we could receive, we might as well have been within the Arctic Circle."

Again the sailor jerked his thumb towards the reef.

"Is it as bad as all that?" he queried anxiously.

"Yes."

"But six weeks. Good Lord!" Mr. Emmett had done the little sum.

"That is exceptional. A week is the average unless the unexpected happens, after a gale like this. And a week will test our endurance to the limit."

Mr. Emmett whistled softly. A grisly phantom was creeping at him. He shivered, and not from cold.

"By Jove!" he said. "What's to be done?"

"In the first place, you must help me to maintain iron discipline. To leave the rock to-day or to-morrow will be an absolute impossibility. On the next day, with luck and a steady moderation of the weather, we may devise some desperate means of landing all the active men or getting fresh supplies. That is in the hands of Providence. I want you to warn your officers, and others whom you can trust, either sailors or civilians. Better arrange three watches. My daughters will have charge of the stores. By going through the lists in the store-room I can portion out the rations for six days. I think we had better fix on that minimum."

JACK and JILL in FAIRYLAND

1.—When Jack and Jill fell down the hill on a certain memorable occasion right onto the bowl that the Three Wise Men of Gotham used to go to sea in—only knows what it was doing there.

2.—Well, Jack had a gimlet in his panties. He was ready for anything, was Jack.

Said he to Jill,
"We'll bore, we will—
We'll bore a hole
If we will, see will,
And then keep still
And watch the bowl with water fill!"

3.—Well, when the Three Wise Men of Gotham went out to sea, of course the water commenced to come in. Serve them right for sailing in such a crazy boat! "Then the——

CATTLE MARKETS.

Old Country Markets Firm—Hogs Higher at Buffalo.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—London and Liverpool cables quote American cattle steady, at 12½c to 15c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef steady, at 10½c to 10½c per pound.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 133 carloads, consisting of 2766 cattle, 36 hogs, 616 sheep and lambs, and 62 calves.

Exporters.

E. L. Woodward bought for Swift & Co., 624 export cattle, as follows: For London market, 367 steers, 1250 to 1400 lbs. each, at an average of $6.47 per cwt., or a range of $6.35 to $6.65; for Liverpool, 200 steers, 1213 lbs. average weight, at $6.10 average price, and a range in prices of $5.90 to $6.25; 53 heifers, 1006 lbs. each, at $5.75 average price, or a range of $5.65 to $6.25; 4 bulls, 1650 to 1800 lbs., at $5.25 to $5.50.

Butchers.

Choice picked lots of butchers sold at $6 to $6.25, but the bulk of them went for export. Alexander Levack, who nearly always buys the best to be had, bought 1 load of the best heifers at $6, but that was the only load we heard of that was bought for the local trade at that figure; loads of good sold at $5.60 to $6; medium, $5.25 to $5.50; common, $4.50 to $5; cows, $3 to $5 per cwt.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was an active trade in stockers and feeders at firm prices, as will be seen by many sales given below by the various commission salesmen. Harry Murby bought 100 feeders, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $4.75 to $5.25 per cwt. One of these loads was from Manitoba.

Milkers and Springers.

The market still remains strong for milkers and springers. Fred Rowntree bought a car load of choice cows at $50 to $75 each.

Prices for veal calves were quoted easier at $3 to $7.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Over 600 sheep and lambs were on sale. Sheep, ewes, were firmer, being quoted at $4.50 to $4.60, and $4.90 was paid by the Swift buyer for 250 ewes weighing 155 lbs. each, a selected lot. Wesley Dunn quotes $4.80 as the average price for ewes; lambs sold at $6 to $6.20 per cwt.

Hogs.

Hog prices were reported by dealers to be unchanged at $9 for selects, fed and watered, and $8.65 to $8.75 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Q.O.R. MEN DECORATED.

King Confers Victoria Order on Col. Pellatt and Staff.

London, Sept. 13.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The King yesterday at Balmoral inspected a detachment of the Q.O.R., under command of Col. Sir Henry Pellatt. The Queen and Princess Mary were present. His Majesty was attended by Col. Hon. Sir Harry Legge and Major Clive Wigram, equerries-in-waiting. Lady Katherine Coke was in attendance upon her Majesty. Gen. Sir Hanbury-Williams was also present.

After the inspection the King addressed the detachment in the following terms: "Sir Henry Pellatt, it gives me great pleasure to receive you and this deputation from your regiment at my Highland home here today. As I was unable to see the whole regiment on parade, I deputed H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught to inspect you. He has told me how pleased he was with your smart appearance. I am very glad that the Q.O.R. should have been the first regiment to cross the seas to take part in the home manoeuvres of the Mother Country. I trust your good example will be followed by many regiments from other dominions in future. I hope you will spend a very pleasant time in England and enjoy your visit to London, and that on your return to Canada you will take back with you the happiest recollections of the old country."

Sir Henry replied: "Your Majesty, on behalf of the Q.O.R., I beg to thank you, sir, for this most gracious reception of a detachment of the regiment which I have the honor to command. If any success has attended us during our visit to the Mother Country, much of it has been inspired by the kind telegram of welcome which you, as King, were good enough to send. This day will be a red letter one in the annals of the regiment. We, as Canadians, humbly hope and believe that our visit will serve to strengthen those links which bind us as an Empire. We may add, sir, the expression of our deep, abiding loyalty to your Majesty and to your gracious Queen."

After the parade the King conferred upon Sir Henry Pellatt and Lt.-Col. Mason the Royal Victorian Order of the third class; on Major Rennie and Capt. Higginbotham, the fourth class of the same order, and the silver medal of the order on Col.-Sergt Macdonald, the senior non-commissioned officer.

The officers of the Queen's Own subsequently dined with the King. During their stay they met Field Marshal Lord Kitchener and Right Hon. David Lloyd-George, who was the Minister in attendance.

Failed 605 Times.

New York, Sept. 13.—The first authentic information given to an American newspaper by those associated with Dr. Paul Ehrlich, director of the Royal Institute for Experimental Therapeutics, at Frankfort-on-the-Main, concerning Prof. Ehrlich's remarkable discovery of a specific for a widespread blood disease of great antiquity, deemed for centuries well-nigh unconquerable, has been furnished to The Times by Dr. Lewis Hart Marks. Dr. Marks, who is an American, is first assistant to Prof. Ehrlich.

The chemical name of this curative agent is dioxydiamidoarsenobenzol. It is popularly called "606" by Prof. Ehrlich, for the reason that it was the 606th preparation compounded by him in an effort to find a cure. The first 606 preparations proved to be failures.

A small supply of the drug has been placed in the hands of Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute for Research, in this city, and in the hands of Prof. L. P. Barker of John Hopkins University, Baltimore. Within a few days, however, limited supplies of the curative agent, which is not a serum but a definite chemical compound, will be furnished to Prof. Anders of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; Prof. Simon, Baltimore, and Dr. William Kohlmann, New Orleans.

COLLINS' START IN THE GAME

(Rochester Express.)

Have you ever heard [illegible]

Collins, star second baseman of the Athletics, made his debut in baseball as a member of the Mackmen? This is the story from the sensational sacker himself.

"I was in my senior year at Columbia, when a scout found me up at Rutland, Vt., playing shortstop for that team in the Northern league. The scout asked me how I would like to join Connie, but I told him I did not want to lose playing for Columbia the senior year. He said that would be fixed up all right and I could travel under an assumed name.

"So I went down to Philadelphia and cut to the clubhouse, which was on the old grounds at Columbia Avenue. Connie's office had two rooms, and he was in the inside office. Tim Murnane, the baseball writer, was in the outer office when I showed up.

"Connie could look out and spot anybody coming in. Tim and several of the local reporters were there, too. I remember Connie saw me and he did not want Tim to get wise, so he got up out of his chair, ran to the door and pushed me into the outer office.

"As he bumped me out Connie stuck out his hand and said, 'How do you do, Mr Sullivan? Come right along with me.' He took me around behind the grand stand and I practised there for three days.

"I made the whole trip and went back to college, got my degree and then came to the Athletics after commencement. I played under my own name then, of course, but it was funny in Chicago. One writer came out with a note and said, 'The young fellow who now is playing under the name of Collins has been in the league before, and his right name is Sullivan.'"

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Do you laugh?

No, that's not a funny question.

If you think it is, just pause a moment and look over your acquaintance, and I'm sure you'll find that there are mighty few of them who really do laugh.

Most people smile, and once in awhile chuckle or giggle, but the hearty, natural, unrestrained laugh that makes you want to laugh to, even if you don't know what the joke is—well, that's about as rare as a man who doesn't measure success by money or a woman who doesn't judge other women by their clothes.

And because of its rarity, the gift of laughter is an invaluable social asset.

A man was telling me recently how he happened to spend an evening at a summer boarding house where there were half a dozen girls and not a man but himself.

He told how he was introduced to the group, and what nice girls they were, and what a shame it was there weren't some nice men to amuse them.

"Did you see any of them again?" I asked.

"Yes, I was back there the next week and I took one of them canoeing," he said.

It was an interesting opportunity to inspect the psychology of a man's choice, and find out just why, with the pick of six, he chose that one.

I put the question. "Why did you choose that particular one? Was she the prettiest?"

He considered a moment.

"No, I don't think so. I guess it was just because she laughed the most at my attempts at wit."

You see.

Laughter is an oil for the social relations.

In a crowd on an ocean liner, I noticed one woman whom everyone seemed to like to talk to. I watched and listened and found it was not because she was extraordinarily witty or amusing but because she always laughed at the proper place with a heartiness and spontaneity that made her companions feel that they must be extraordinarily witty and amusing

Maybe you don't find it easy to laugh. You are afraid your laugh is unmusical.

Then make it musical. Learn to laugh prettily. It can be done just as an unmusical voice can be modulated into harmonious tones.

Listen to your own laugh and conscientiously attempt to make it more pleasing. If you can afford it, go to a singing teacher and ask him to teach you how to laugh.

All that will make you self-conscious—some one protests. You will become affected if you learn to laugh.

Don't let it make you self conscious. Don't be affected.

Just learn to laugh well enough so that you aren't afraid to, so that you aren't self conscious, and then cultivate a disposition to be genuinely and easily amused, and you will have a social talent that will do much to make you welcome everywhere.

KIDNAPPED BOY IS MYSTERIOUSLY RETURNED

After Being in Hands of Black Hand Gang for Nearly Three Months, Youngster Is Home.

ABDUCTORS ESCAPE

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Although little Michael Scimeca, the three-year-old son of Dr. Michael Scimeca, a prominent Italian physician, is to-day safely in the hands of his relatives, after having been held for nearly three months a captive by "Black Hand" kidnappers, the abductors of the boy have so far escaped the police trap set for them, when it was learned that the little fellow was about to be returned to his guardians.

Fifty detectives of the Italian squad had been for hours watching ferries and the railroad stations and the vicinity of Dr. Scimeca's home in Manhattan in expectancy of trapping the kidnappers, when the lad mysteriously turned up late last night at the home of Dr. Scimeca's father-in-law, Dr. Michael Petrella, in Brooklyn.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY

The police had heard that Dr. Scimeca was trying to raise $7,000 which had been demanded as a ransom for the boy. Dr. Scimeca, however, denied that he had paid a cent for the return of the child.

Much mystery surrounds the circumstances of the child's reappearance. It was said at the Petrella home that a telephone message was received during the evening that little Michael would be found walking on Fifty-fifth Street, Manhattan.

The Petrellas drove in their carriage to that locality, they said, and spied the lad alone on the sidewalk. The boy uttered a cry of joy when he saw his relatives and was soon snugly wrapped up in the carriage and on the way to the Petrellas' Brooklyn home.

ARRESTS PROBABLE

A report which had come to the police that the kidnapped boy instead of being found along the street had been brought to the waiting carriage at the curb by a rough looking man who disappeared as soon as he could deliver his charge was to-day being investigated. Lieut. Vachris of the Italian squad declared that he knows the identity of the boy's captors and arrests in the case are considered probable.

Michael Scimeca was spirited away from his parents' home on June 17 last, by men who lured him with promises of candy. Shortly afterwards demands for large sums for his ransom began to pour in upon his well-to-do father, through the mails and mysterious telephone messages. Threats that the boy would be killed were also received and his parents were in an agony of terror lest harm would come to him.

SHE IS YOUNG AT FIFTY

This is said of the woman whose blood is rich and red and whose complexion has the natural healthful glow. You can restore the healthful colour of the skin by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, because it actually forms new, red blood The form is rounded out by firm, healthy flesh, wrinkles disappear, and the glow of health returns to the cheeks.

JEALOUS LOVER SHOOTS YOUNG SWEETHEART

Special to The Examiner.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 12.—While alone in her home at Honeoye Falls, shortly before noon to-day, Nellie Stefano, 15 years of age, was shot three times, and perhaps fatally wounded, her alleged assailant being Luigi Altobelli, 25 years of age, a laborer employed on the farm of William Palmer. Jealousy is ascribed as the cause of the shooting.

One of the bullets entered the left breast of the young girl and passed through her body, coming out at her back. Another entered her head just above the left eye, and came out of the top of her head. A third bullet inflicted a flesh wound on her left arm. Following the shooting neighbors claim they saw Altobelli leave the Stefano home, and start on a dead run across a cornfield in the rear of the house. Shortly before the shooting occurred Altobelli purchased a ticket for Rochester at the Lehigh Valley station, but whether this was a blind or not is not known.

The wounded girl was brought to Rochester this afternoon, arriving over the Lehigh Valley, and was taken at once to the Homeopathic Hospital. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stefano, and it is said Altobelli formerly paid her no small attention, to which her parents objected, and of late she has been inviting the attentions of another young man.

Dr. Charles Bauld of Honeoye Falls, who was called following the shooting, by the Marasco family to whose home the young girl ran, accompanied her to Rochester. Rev. Father M. J. Cluny, of St. Paul's Church, administered the sacrament to the wounded girl in Honeoye Falls, and also came on to Rochester, riding in the ambulance to the Homeopathic Hospital.

AUTO HITS TRAIN OF LIQUID METAL; THREE MEET FIERY DEATH

Special Wire to the Examiner.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Two women and a man were burned to death in South Chicago early this morning when the automobile in which they were riding and which was speeding at the rate of 25 miles an hour, collided with a train of three moving cauldrons of molten metal and slag on One Hundred and Fourth Street, near an entrance to the Illinois Steel Company's plant. A third woman was seriously, but not fatally, burned.

The automobile was owned and driven by Peter Lesterhouse, a contractor. Sitting in front beside him was his wife. In the rear seats were Miss Anna Baker, Mrs. Lesterhouse's sister, and Mrs. Blanche Hunt, a friend.

The train of cauldrons is moved by a dummy engine, and the route leads out on the street by a narrow gauge track, then around to the rear of the plant, where the stuff is dumped in the lake. It consists of steel refuse. At night the glow from the seething mass lights up the sky and can be seen for miles.

SHOWER MOLTEN METAL

The Lesterhouse party had been out for two hours and were returning home. The machine was crossing 104th Street at high speed when the train of cauldrons steamed out of the steel works. According to the steel company employees, they supposed the machine was going to stop.

The usual illumination shot up from the mouths of the great pots. Lesterhouse apparently paid no attention to the danger ahead. When he did realize it was too late.

Miss Baker jumped and escaped with serious burns. The machine hit one of the big pots with the force of a catapult. The molten mass shot upward like a geyser and descended in showers on the trio who lay wounded and bleeding beside the wrecked car.

The impact had tossed Mr. and Mrs. Lesterhouse and Mrs. Hunt out of the car and into the path of the molten shower. They were instantly burned to death.

The steel men stopped their train and ran to the rescue. Miss Baker was sent to a hospital.

"I do not know how it occurred," she said. "Mr. Lesterhouse was an experienced driver. He could not have been asleep. It was too late to stop when he saw the danger, and then I jumped. Oh, this is awful!"

QUEER PRANKS SAID TO BE THE WORK OF GHOSTS

ROCHESTER, SEPTEMBER 12. — The police have been asked to make a search for Michael Wilsey, 52 years old, who has disappeared from his home, 471 Plymouth Avenue. Wilsey was employed as a nightwatchman at the Reed Glass Works in Plymouth Avenue, and he has not been seen since Tuesday night.

Wilsey is said to be one of several night watchmen employed at the glass works, who have mysteriously disappeared. Ghosts, real live ghosts, that grab one by the arm, that knock on the ngers and smash lanterns, are said to be the cause of Wilsey's disappearance. Whether or not it is so, will not be determined until Wilsey takes it upon himself to return to his home.

In the neighbourhood of the glass works, rumors have been heard for two months past, regarding a ghost that has flitted about the place at an unseemly hour. The descriptions of the nocturnal visitor differ widely, but they agree that the ghost is not a person to be trifled with, and it is said that one night watchman, who has since quit his job, trifled with the ghost, and came out of the fray with a discolored optic.

A few nights ago Wilsey was questioned about the alleged ghost and he is said to have replied that he was not afraid of the biggest ghost alive. Another rumor has it that he told members of his family if he ever saw the ghost they would see him again. As his relatives are looking for him it is supposed that Wilsey saw the ghost Tuesday night.

The actions of the ghost are said to be most weird. One night a watchman is said to have confided to a group of Plymouth Avenue residents that while he was going about the factory and winding up the clocks, something white, resembling a human, followed him about. In one part of the factory when he went to get his key, he said, the ghost struck him a sharp crack on the fingers. He reached up with the other hand and that, too, was cracked. When he reached up with both hands down, smashed his lantern and ran away with his time clock.

Another story has it that one man employed at the works, who has since quit his job, saw a strange object flit across the yard of the factory shortly after midnight, and that it was dressed in white. Later the same object appeared in the form of a factory dressed in black crepe. The night watchman shivered, and the ghost walked right up to him, made a buzzing sound and disappeared in a misty vapor. The night watchman did not return to the works the next night.

Some of the incredulous persons in the neighbourhood, who have laughed at the ghost stories, think that a band of mischievous boys are having a lot of fun at the expense of the night watchmen. It is not believed that a ghost hovers at the glass works, and persons not endowed with more than an ordinary imagination, are said to doubt very much the visit of the ghost and its various accomplishments.

Wilsey is described as 5 feet 10 inches tall, of light complexion, light hair, dark, sandy moustache, and slight build. The initials "J. W." and a girl's head are tattooed on his arm.

Farmer Married Six Times Hangs Himself When Fourth Wife Threatens Exposure

Examiner Special.

CANANDAIGUA, Sept. 12.—Frank Arnold, a Gorham farmer, aged 61 years, exposed, it is said, by the third of his six wives, five living, because he refused to sign papers that would enable her to draw a pension which had been discontinued, went into his barn yesterday and hanged himself. Arnold was found by the woman with whom he was living as his sixth wife. Arnold had lived for several years in this vicinity, but knowledge of his matrimonial experences was confined to his present wife and one other from whom, it was understood, he had a divorce. Mrs. Stella B. Austin, of 18 Grove Street, Rochester, the pension-seeking third wife, who threatened the exposure, absolutely refused to divulge the names of the other women aside from Mrs. Carrie Cobb, the second wife, who died some years ago. It was learned, however, that Arnold's matrimonial affairs covered a period of 24 years and all parts of the country.

The sixth Mrs. Arnold was captured in Florida, where she was a stenographer, and yielded, as she says, to Arnold's portrait of his fine estates and wealth in the Empire State. Arnold's fourth wife resides now in Buffalo, it is said, but Mrs. Austin refused to divulge her address, declaring that it was she who put her on the track of Arnold, after years of search and she didn't propose to have her dragged into the case. Mrs. Austin's anxiety to get her pension restored led to Arnold's suicide. She said she had spent much time and money looking for Arnold.

A pension agent had told her that if Arnold would make affidavit to the fact that he had two wives living when he married Mrs. Austin he could fix up the pension. Mrs. Austin finally located Arnold on a farm of Dr. J. A. Hawley in Gorham. She and a lawyer went to see him Wednesday. Arnold was given his choice between signing the papers, or being exposed as a bigamist. Arnold promised to come to Rochester Thursday and deal directly with the pension lawyer. He didn't show up and Thursday night Mrs. Austin came here, engaged Lawyer F. D. Cribb and an automobile and went to Arnold's place, where a hitter controversy developed, which ended in Arnold agreeing to meet Mrs. Austin yesterday and sign the papers. Mrs. Arnold nearly collapsed when told by Mrs. Austin that she was the sixth Mrs. Arnold. Yesterday morning Arnold went to the barn and hanged himself.

EDSON PROPERTY IS A SPLENDID INVESTMENT

Mr. S. T. Tivey, who has a few weeks ago returned from the West to visit his parents here in Peterborough, has stated that he does not know of a livelier and faster growing place than Edson. He stated that he has every reason to believe that Edson will be a second Calgary owing to its location, as there is usually a large city on any of the Transcontinental lines before entering into the mountains and Edson is situated on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway the same as Calgary is on the C. P. R. He also believes that no other town in that section has the natural resources that Edson possesses. Mr. Tivey has been over a considerable portion of property in Edson and states that it is a safe and good investment. Mr. Tivey has spent six years in Calgary, Alberta, and is well pleased with that city. He states when he arrived there six years ago Calgary had a population of six thousand; to-day it has about forty-six thousand inhabitants. He has also established a printing concern and is well pleased with the business he has been doing.

Girl Writes Pleading Letter To Wife Asking Her To Give Up Her Husband

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Two women both declaring their love for the same man, one accusing and the other defending him, appeared in the court room of Municipal Judge Fry at the Hyde Park Police Station and told a story of love and hate which was replete with charges and counter charges that ranged from attempted murder to alienation of affections.

The principals around whom the web of fate has been spun are Albert L. Norrington, 33 years old; Mrs. Emily Norrington, his wife, who is 40 years old; and Helen Castleman Kern, the 20-year-old High School graduate, whom Norrington claims is the only girl he ever loved. The Norringtons have been married five years, but separated a year ago. The case was brought into court by Mrs. Norrington, who charged her husband with abandonment and introduced in evidence a letter signed with Miss Kern's name, but which Miss Kern declares is a forgery. The letter follows:

INNOCENT PARTIES DISTURBED

"Sept. 18, 1909—Mrs. Emily Norrington, Dear Madam—I only desire to state that in the future when you desire to speak to me kindly refrain from disturbing parties who are completely innocent of any wrongdoing. My parents and sisters should not be made to bear the brunt of your dislike for me. This has occurred once too often, and if any further means or ways will disturb them through you, I am afraid the quick Southern blood which flows through my veins will respond. You see, madam, you have injured my parents more than any injury caused by me. The man who has given me his love—the man whom I have learned to live for—has been straightforward and honest with you. You know how much he deserves his freedom.

"Remember, our God loves the self-sacrificing. Love those who repay evil with good. Have you done this? Has your worship been a mockery? Has it been good? No, no—I do not claim to be entirely right with my God, but when the day of judgment comes I shall be judged accordingly. No sacrifices too great for me to make one whom I love happy. No pain shall ever come to him through me. Maybe, madam, if I was some other girl, one who had a spark of badness in her—you might have found solace in the thought, but when it proves to be a good girl—then why desire to bring unhappiness and evil to her?

"No harm can be done to me—no pain will be too great to bear for my lover. But there is good in you. You will act as a good woman—one who is proud of her sex—one who will not show degeneracy and bring your suit for freedom.

EXPOSE FAMILY SKELETON

"Believe me, Mr. N. does not know or realize that would stop to plead with you, but, madam, it is for the best. Don't cause the black pages of life to be laid bare before the multitude of the people who judge harshly. Call upon our Father in heaven to give you strength to bear this and your answer will bring happiness—not only to one, but to many. I love my God, but I believe love is stronger in the eyes of Him above.

"I have not ... God made man and woman to love—to bind the ties of marriage through life and death, but when love does not exist this marriage, this mingling of sexes, is a crime. Surely your teaching of childhood days conveyed this phrase to your memory. Don't judge me harshly—I only love Mr. N. with a love that is everlasting. It's pure and undefiling, and if there ever was a spark of affection burning in your breast for him, madam, now will be the time to prove it.

"Now comes the greatest crisis in three lives, and of you, lady, I come and ask this favor. Remember the days of your girlhood. My life is before me—please don't let the stain be upon your memory, blighting the dearest and most precious thought that a young girl has—those of love and being loved.—Yours very truly,

"Nellie L. Kern."

DENIED WRITING LETTER

"I am ready to acknowledge that I love Albert, but I never wrote any such letter as Mrs. Norrington showed in court," said Miss Kern when seen at the home of her parents, 6,339 Prairie Avenue. "It is a case of spite work on the part of Mrs. Norrington. She wants to injure Albert and evidently hopes to discredit him by bringing me into the matter. This 'fake' letter is but the climax to a long list of petty injuries she has inflicted on me. One of her favorite pastimes has been to call me up on the telephone and threaten my life. She has also told me repeatedly that she would 'lay Albert out cold' and that I could have the dead body and she would keep the life insurance.

"But, regardless of what she may accuse me of, I can truthfully swear that Albert and I have nothing to be ashamed of. He has been coming here as a friend of the family for a long time, and our relations have always been most honorable. Father and mother both knew that he was unhappily married, but felt there was no harm in his visits here."

Albert Norrington, the husband-sweetheart, was at the home of Miss Kern when the reporter called here, and he unfolded a story of an unfortunate marriage and an unhappy life that followed.

"When I met my wife she represented herself as two years younger than myself," he said. "At that time I was a travelling man, and she followed me through several cities of the South, and finally, in Terre Haute, Ind., she inveigled me into marrying her. Our married life has been one long quarrel. For weeks at a time we would not speak to one another, and she repeatedly threatened my life. On July 18th, 1900, we quarreled and she attacked me and cut me about the face with a razor—"

"Why, if forty cats had scratched him he would not have looked any worse," interrupted Miss Kern.

"I left the house then," continued Norrington, "and have not been back since."

After ruling out the letter alleged to have been written by Miss Kern, Judge Fry ordered Norrington to pay his wife $10 a week for a year. Norrington declared he would appeal the case.

IT SAVES YOU WAITING

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call, write, or phone for appointments, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

Sensational Black Hand Case Will Shortly Be Heard in Italy

—Murder of Cuocolo

CAMORRA RESPONSIBLE

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, Sept. 12.—One of the greatest and most mysterious murder trials ever held in Italy will open shortly in the quaint medieval Viterbo when three hundred members of the much-dreaded Camorra or "Black Hand," including some of the prominent leaders in this body, will be put on trial for the murder of Gennaro Cuocolo and his wife in 1906. The proceedings, which are expected to last six months at least, are likely to make the world in general understand that the celebrated Neapolitan Camorra is no picturesque fiction, but a terrible reality—an open sore in the life of Southern Italy.

The history of the Cuocolo murder is this: In June, 1906, Gennaro Cuocolo was found dead with forty knife wounds in his body at Terra del Greco, a small suburb of Naples, and the same night his wife, Maria Cutinelli, was murdered in the flat in which they lived in Naples. Cuocolo came of rich Neapolitan merchants, but was incurably weak and vicious himself, while his wife was from the dregs of the people. Both were known to be leaders in the Camorra, and it was obvious that they owed their death to the unrelenting vengeance of the Camorra, who never forgive treason. The police of aNples, some of whom have since been proved to be in collusion with the Camorra, failed to bring the murderers to justice, though, on the accusation of a churchyard priest, Don Ciro Vitozzi, "the Father of the Camorra," various innocent persons were arrested.

HAD A GLORIOUS TIME

On the night of the murder various members of the malavita supped hilariously at a little trattoria called Mimi a Mare, within a stone's throw of the dead body of Cuocolo. All the members of the supper party were arrested as accomplices in the crime, but, as no trustworthy evidence could be obtained against them, after a couple of months all were released, and it was supposed that the Cuocolo murder would be added to the list of undiscovered or unpunished crimes. But this was not so. The case was put into the hands of the Carabineers, a splendid body of military police, of the highest character, who have earned the respect of all classes in Italy by their probity and courage in combatting crime.

Chance put the clue to the mystery into the hands of one of the number, Sergeant Capezzuto, and he and four other members of the force devoted themselves to the task of discovery, for months living a life of incredible danger, mixing with the members of the "Honorable Society," attending their meetings, and learning their secrets, knowing that at any moment discovery, or even suspicion, would mean instant death. Finally they succeeded in their task, but so deep and vindictive is the hatred of which they are the object that Sergeant Cappezuto is said to have decided, directly the great trial is over, to become a monk, as the only possible way of avoiding the edict of death which he knows has been pronounced against him.

DISCOVERED THE MURDER

It is said that the Carabineers discovered that Cuocolo was murdered because he had been denounced by Enrico Alfano, the head of the Camorra, who was jealous of him. This man, who was extremely wealthy and powerful, escaped to America, but was arrested and brought back, and the police officer, Petrosino, who was the means of his capture, was shortly afterwards murdered in Palermo. A certain Gennaro de Marinis acted for Alfano in accusing Cuocolo, since the head never appears personally before the Camorra tribunal, and Gaetano Donadio is said to have arranged the practical details of the murder under Alfano's directions, thereby earning his promotion in the society. These, with Gennaro Abatemaggio, through whom the great secret was betrayed, several of the of the most powerful men of the Naples Camorra, and three hundred others of less importance, are now awaiting their trial. Over five hundred witnesses were heard during the preliminary investigations. The difficulty, however, will be to prove the actual complicity of Ericone in the crime, as he did not himself carry it out, and the impossibility of proving his incitement to murder. Should the prisoners be convicted of the murder, it will be a heavy blow to the Camorra, which has been the scourge of Southern Italy for several hundred years.

HOW IT WAS STARTED

It is not known exactly how or when the dread Camorra was started, but it is supposed to have first taken from under the Spanish Viceroys in the middle of the sixteenth century. Under the Bourbons it was said to be also political in its workings, but now, at any rate, it is simply an association, marvellously organized and covering like a network vast portions of the southern provinces, which controls and taxes trades, whether lawful or unlawful, and protects its members from punishment for their crimes.

The Camorra has two divisions, the Upper and the Lower. The latter levies blackmail on the petty gamblers, pickpockets and criminals of the lower strata of the people of Naples, but the former engages in more important affairs, like the Cuocolo murder, robbery on a large scale or the direction or taxation of affairs in the municipalities, the law court, or even in Parliament. The "Honorable Society," as it calls itself, is divided into corps, each of which contains twenty-four members and forty-eight recruits, who are on probation, and must prove their right to promotion by cleverness in crime, preferably by murder, and who are told off in twos to help the regular members in their work, and to keep watch over them. The Picciotti, in their turn, are assisted by honorary members, who themselves pay for the help and protection of the society. There are only two acting officials in the Camorra—the head, who is the most important and most dreaded person in the south of Italy, and the cashier, who receives all the booty of the members, and gives it to the head, who divides it at his pleasure, keeping the lion's share for himself. Any member who fails to deliver up his gains is severely punished. Innumerable societies up and down the country are affiliated with the Camorra, though they are often unknown to each other, but their members can recognize each other by signs and passwords, and are bound to help each other to evade punishment or to aid in a work of revenge.

PATIENT'S GRATEFUL POETRY

A late patient, recently discharged from the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, wishes to acknowledge the kind treatment received from the lady superintendent and her nurses. It is to be noted that the writer is 85 years of age; and his poetical gratitude, pitched appropriately to the metre of the "Ancient Mariner," shows that while his body may have needed the attention of nurses, his mind is sound and his heart in the right place:

It is not long—since I have gone
From Nicholls Hospital—
Nurses were good—did what they could,
To help me at my call.

The nights were long—I wandered on Myself along the hall;
The dreary nights—were slow in flight
With little sleep at all.

For me, poor soul—could hardly thole
The pain which I had then;
The nurses' bliss—is my best wish
To one and all of them.

My nurse to me—was aye ready,
Oft spoke kind words to me;
Great care did take—my bed to make
No better nurse could be.

At my low call—my nurse did all—
Was willing to attend
So kind was she—I now can see,
On her I did depend.

—A LATE PATIENT.

PRELATES ARE LEAVING.

Cardinal Gibbons Has Left, Mgr. Logue Goes Soon.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Cardinal Gibbons, who was the guest of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy during the congress, left yesterday morning for New York, en route for Baltimore, and Cardinal Logue will follow in a few days. Archbishop Bourne will leave for Portland to-day, en route for New York, and daily both American and European prelates and priests are leaving the city.

Archbishop Bourne stated yesterday that he had never seen such an orderly crowd in his life as that of Sunday. London itself, offering few demonstrations similar in magnificence to that of the closing day of the great congress.

Yesterday morning, His Grace of Westminster had a long interview with Henri Bourassa, M.P.P., who had taken exception to the English prelate's statement that if the west is to be brought into the Catholic fold it must be done by means of the English tongue. After the interview his grace told the press that all misunderstanding had been overcome.

Wage War on Jobbers.

Brandon, Sept. 14.—The Western Retail Merchants' Co-Operative Association, in session here, has practically decided to wage war against the jobbers. They have been pooling their orders, to obtain goods in carlots, but the jobbers object. The merchants claim they can cut out the middleman and reduce prices to consumers.

Inspector-General Garlington Says Officers Are Not Attending to Their Work, and All Are Forced to Learn Too Much — Major Bell Says Field Army Is Quite Unfit For Service—To Change Training.

Washington, Sept. 14.—If fearless criticism is calculated to benefit the army, then Uncle Sam's soldiers should profit much from the comment upon their condition and abilities contained in the annual report of Inspector-General Garlington, just made public. One inspector points out a whole battalion of artillery starting for the Phillippine service without a single field officer and one of the batteries commanded by a second lieutenant of less than two years' service. An inspector-general declares that this absence of captains from their commands is "the most fruitful source of professional disease in the line of the army to-day."

In one department nearly a third of the line officers were absent from duty with their commands.

The time for specialization in the army has arrived, in the opinion of another inspector-general. He says: "We try to crowd too much upon the officer and enlisted man of the line. That is, we try to teach all of them everything, instead of specializing and only teaching each as much as he can learn well with ordinary application."

Inspector-General Bell declares that the field army is wholly unprepared for field service. He says the new regulations are almost entirely theoretical or dependent upon the experience of European armies. Our transportation is the same as at the beginning of the civil war, for our army has so far failed to make use of automobiles, traction engines and other modern appliances in the field. The weakness could be quickly developed if the present annual manoeuvres could be replaced at least once by the march of a complete army corps. Very few of our officers have ever marched with more than a regiment."

Major Bell says: "While our infantry is composed of the best material in the world, and is probably as well, if not better, trained in the use of the rifle than that of any other army, its marching capacity is below mediocrity, and yet it is admitted to-day that the fate of the battles of the future depends, as it has in the past, upon the marching capacity of the infantry."

To remedy these conditions, Major-Gen. Woods, chief of staff, yesterday issued orders which will change materially the training of the army. All inspector-generals will be required to submit the troops to an annual inspection in the field, designed to show efficiency of the troops.

Chinese Get Back at Alderman.

Windsor, Sept. 14.—Incensed because Ald. Keough has suggested that a license fee of $50 be placed on their establishments, several Chinese laundry proprietors are said to have banded together for protection, and, incidentally, to rebuke Keough for such a thought.

The Chinamen have about completed negotiations for a long lease on the old Charter homestead, in the same block in which is located Ald Keough's fine residence. It is understood they will convert the house into a big laundry establishment, in spite of any protests residents in the neighborhood may make. The home of Police Chief Wills is directly across the street from the proposed laundry.

The Triangle In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—The golden triangle sent out by St. Patrick Chapter, Toronto, was received with much ceremony by Prince Rupert Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, last evening.

The reception was attended by a number of the members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, now in this city, Messrs. Fred Jacobi and David Bruce, representing the St. Patrick Chapter of Toronto. The triangle goes to Wascana Chapter, Regina, on the 14th; Alberta Chapter, Calgary, on the 15th, and Vancouver on the 20th.

Found Famous Picture.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Purves Carter, the English art expert, who has just returned from Ontario, states that he has found the famous Durer picture of Sir Thomas Moore, who was chancellor to Henry VIII., and who lost his head on account of a disagreement with his master on matrimonial affairs. The artist will not say where he found the picture, but says that it's discovery will create an uproar in art circles.

Wreck on Norfolk and Western.

Roanoake, Va., Sept. 14.—A special on the Norfolk and Western Railway, bearing President L. E. Johnson and General Manager N. D. Maher, was wrecked at Delorme, West Virginia, yesterday. Neither President Johnson nor Mr. Maher was hurt, but F. L. Woolwine, foreman of engineers, and Engineer E. D. Burton, were killed.

Garrett a Stratford Man.

Collingwood, Sept. 14.—The Collingwood Presbyterian Church has unanimously extended a call to Rev. T. Thompson, M.A., of Stratford, to become its pastor, the stipend to be $1,500 and the interest of $4,000, willed by the late Alex. Brust for the purpose of augmenting the pastor's salary.

Sustained the Call.

Brantford, Sept. 14.—At the September meeting of the Paris Presbytery, in Zion Church here yesterday, the call of Rev. Mr. Matheson of Chatsworth to Knox Church, Embro, was unanimously sustained.

Legislation Is Asked

Organizations For the Various Provinces Chartered Under the Dominion Congress Are Favored by Resolution Presented to the Congress —Trotter Has Bitter Criticism for Immigration System.

Fort William, Sept. 14.—Yesterday several matters at the session of the Trades and Labor Congress were deferred pending the arrival of Solicitor J. G. O'Donoghue of Toronto. Several other resolutions were considered, one to secure federal legislation for weekly pay instead of semi-monthly or monthly; another, by James Watt of the Toronto tailors' union, opposed to home work and open shop in Ontario; others to amend the compensation for workingmen's injuries act of Quebec; re-arrangement of taxation on land values and not on improvements and industry; to increase postmen's pay for Sunday labor, and an eight-hour day for postmen, and denouncing the present heavy postmen's uniforms for summer year, and one calling for suitable car sheds for railway carmen to eat and dry their clothes in when on duty.

The most important resolution yet to come up is one to organize provincial federations of labor chartered by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

A resolution which will precipitate a lengthy debate is one asking that an amendment to the liquor act be sought to have saloons and bars in hotels close on Labor Day. The bartenders, brewery workers, cigar workers, as well as other trades, are opposed to this resolution when it comes up to-day.

The election of officers takes place on Friday. It is said Wm. Glockling of Toronto will be opposed as president by James Somerville of Moose Jaw. The west is depending, it is said on the entire delegation supporting Somerville, while the east will support Glockling. Port Arthur and Fort William, with over thirty delegates, appear to be in favor of no change and will support Glockling, which means he will be elected unless Somerville withdraws before Friday and Glockling is elected by acclamation.

Immigration was the principal theme of discussion at the morning session. W. R. Trotter of Winnipeg presented a long report on the subject, in which he laid special stress upon the necessity for restriction, and for provision against exploitation.

He severely criticized some of the schemes of immigration and emigration followed in the past, and in the concluding portion of his report, said in part: "It should be understood that no scheme detrimental to the interest of the Canadian citizenship will be tolerated, and Canadian citizenship must be held to include more than manufacturing associations and their allied press.

"No scheme of imperial labor exchange can possibly be agreed to which is not preceded by a system of provincial and Dominion exchanges. Any other arrangement would be open to a repetition of the scandalous shipping by the Salvation Army to British Columbia of 11,000 persons, when there were 7,500 unemployed people in Toronto alone. It should be clear that our fight from now on is not so much against numbers of discredited societies as against many schemes of the crowd of dividend-hunting corporations which has descended upon Canada, and whose agents, titled and otherwise, are much in evidence during the summer months."

An invitation from the mayor of Vancouver to meet in that city next year will be considered with other invitations later on.

Rabies Prevalent Over the Line.

Albany, Sept. 14.—State Commissioner of Agriculture Pearson, stated that rabies had broken out in Westchester County. Heads of suspected canines sent to Cornell University for examination contained positive evidence of the disease. A quarantine is enforced at Scarsdale and Yonkers and Mount Vernon, New Rochelle and Ossinging are being closely observed for any outbreaks.

Another newly-infected district was reported in Niagara County, where the towns of Lewiston and Royalton have been put under quarantine.

Will Live In Winnipeg.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—Following the recent appointment of Rev. Dr. Chown to be general superintendent of the Methodist Church, Dr. Chown stated last evening that he intended making his new headquarters in the West. He will go west in October and do considerable work there, but will not remove to Winnipeg until next spring.

Cut a Third of the Charge.

Kingston, Sept. 14.—Word from Ottawa says that in regard to the bill sent the city by the G.T.R. for the cost of the subway at Kingston Junction, the Railway Commission has reduced the company's charges against the city and county by $2,200, making a saving of $1,100 to the city.

Chief of Police Arrested.

Portsmouth, O., Sept. 14.—Chief of Police W. N. Davidson was arrested yesterday charged with violating the local option laws. He had treated some friends to samples of whisky he had brought back from Chillicot, where he attended a convention of police.

Would Be Sorry to Leave.

Kingston, Sept. 14—Archbishop Gauthier says he has received no word of his reported transfer to Ottawa. He speaks in the highest terms of the people of Kingston of all denominations, and says he would be very sorry to leave.

Bribery Charges

Prominent Clergyman Offered a Sum of Money If He Would Persuade Owner to Sell a Toll-Road—Lawyer Advises That Committee Ask For a Royal Commission to Secure More Evidence.

Woodstock, Sept. 14.—The special committee appointed by the County Council to investigate the charges of bribery and corruption in connection with the purchase of the toll roads of the county reported to a special meeting of the council yesterday.

The report mentions specific instances that have suspicious aspects, and in one case tells of a prominent county official having approached a clergyman, and promised a large sum of money if he would induce the owner of the toll road between Woodstock and Ingersoll to sell out.

Other similar cases are cited, and with the report was submitted a letter from D. O. Cameron, solicitor, of Toronto, who stated plainly that the duty of the council was, in the face of the evidence, to demand the issuance of a royal commission and the prosecution of the alleged guilty parties. The investigating committee had a detective agency gathering the evidence, and parties were interviewed in Chicago, Denver, Toronto, Hamilton and other cities.

Inspected by Mr. Haldane.

London, Sept. 14.—Secretary of War Haldane, accompanied by General French, inspected the Q.O.R. at Basingstoke Monday, and yesterday Chaplain Lloyd placed on behalf of the regiment, a wreath on General Wolfe's tomb at Greenwich. The Duke of York's School has been completely refurnished.

During a lull in the manoeuvres the Leicesters organized an athletic meeting. Pte. Walsh beat Sergt. Crane and Pte. Gurney of the Leicesters, successively. Pte. Dent threw Pte. Grey, while Pte. Samuels, in wrestling, beat Pte. Henry.

Arrangements for the coronation include a larger representation of contingents of troops from Canada than on the last occasion, and probably also from Australia and South Africa.

It is also felt that the rapid expansion of Canada demands an impressive delegation of colonial Premiers, who, with other officials, will naturally receive invitations.

To Centralize Government.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 14.—A recommendation that the administration of Alaska, especially the judiciary, be better unified and the power of the Government be centered on one spot, will be made to President Taft by Wickersham, who passed through here yesterday, after making a 6,000 mile tour of inspection of Alaska.

Lynched Two Negroes.

Tiptonville, Tenn., Sept. 14.—Will Sharp and Bob Bruce, negroes, who for seven or eight years have worked on various farms over the county, were lynched Monday night by a mob of about forty men for an attempted assault on two little daughters of Jack Dowing, at their home at Connersville.

The Cause
of Eye Troubles is usually not disease, but defect in the structure or muscles of the Eye.
Consider the incessant work of the Eye, the instantaneous and exact adjustment demanded that sight may be always equal, single and ready to every change in position, distance and light. The nerves compel and control the mechanism in these instant adjustments. The mechanism may be defective, that is—
There may be defects in the structure, or focus of one or both Eyes;
The Muscles may be imperfectly balanced, so that both Eyes do not work in harmony;
There may be inability to focus for close work;
There may be strain through overwork, abuse, poor lights, bright reflections, etc.
An examination will tell you just what condition your Eyes are in.

"PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracey, (Copyrighted)

"Of course I will back you up in every way," said Mr. Emmett, who felt chillier at this moment than at any time during the night. "I know you are acting wisely, but I admit I am scared at the thought of what may happen—if those days pass and no help is available."

Brand knew what would happen, and it was hard to lock the secret in his heart. He alone must live. That was essential, the one thing carved in stone upon the tablets of his brain, a thing to be fought out behind barred door, revolver in hand.

Whatever else took place, if men and women, perhaps his own sweet girls, were dying of thirst and starvation, the light must shine at night over its allotted span of the slumbering sea. There, on the little table beside him, lay the volume of Rules and Regulations. What did it say?

"The keepers, both principal and assistant, are enjoined never to allow any interests, whether private or otherwise, to interfere with the discharge of their public duties, the importance of which to the safety of navigation cannot be overrated."

There was no ambiguity in the words, no halting sentence which opened a way for a man to plead: "I thought it best." Those who framed the rule meant what they said. No man could bend the steel of their intent.

To end the intolerable strain of his thoughts Stephen Brand forced his lips to a thin smile and his voice to say harshly:

"If the worst comes to the worst, there are more than three thousand gallons of colza oil in store. That should maintain life. It is a vegetable oil."

Then Constance thrust her glowing face into the lighted area.

"Dad," she cried, cheerfully, "the men wish to know if they may smoke. Poor fellows! They are so miserable —so cold and damp and dreary down there. Please say 'Yes.'"

CHAPTER IX.

MRS. VANSITTART.

The purser, faithful to his trust, had secured the ship's books. He alone, brought a parcel of any sort from that ill-fated ship. The others possessed the clothes they wore, their money, and in some cases their trinkets.

Mr. Emmett suggested that a list of those saved should be compiled. Then by ticking off the names, he could classify the inmates of the lighthouse and evolve some degree of order in the community.

It was found that there were thirty-seven officers and men, including stewards, thirty-three saloon passengers, of whom nineteen were women, counting the two little girls, and seven men and one woman from the steerage.

"It isn't usual, on a British ship, for the crew to bulk so large on the list," said Mr. Emmett huskily. "But it couldn't be helped. The passengers had to be battened down. They couldn't live on deck. We never gave in until the last minute."

"I saw that," said Brand, knowing the agony which prompted the broken explanation.

"An' not a mother's soul would have escaped if it wasn't for young Mr. Pyne," went on the sailor.

"Is that the name of the youngster who climbed the fore-mast?"

"That's him. It was a stroke of genius, his catching on to that way out. He was as cool as a cucumber. Just looked up when he reached the deck an' saw the lighthouse so near. Then he asked me for a rope. Planned the whole thing in a second, so to speak."

"He is not one of the ship's company?"

"No, sir, a passenger, nevvy of Cyrus J. Traill, the Philadelphian millionaire. Haven't you heard of Traill? Not much of a newspaper reader, eh? There was a lady on board, a Mrs. Vansittart, who was coming over to marry old Traill, so people said, and the weddin' was fixed to take place in Paris next week. Young Pyne was actin' as escort."

"Is she lost? What a terrible thing!"

The chief officer glanced down the purser's lists and slapped his thigh with much vehemence.

"No, by gosh! Here she is, marked O.K. Well, that beats the band."

"So the lad has discharged his trust to his uncle?"

Mr. Emmett was going to say something, but checked the words on his lips.

"Queer world" he muttered. "Queer world."

With that he devoted himself to planning out the watches. Soon he and the purser betook themselves to the depths on the roll-call. As they crept below gingerly—these sailormen were not at home on companion ladders which moved not when the shock came—they met Enid, for the first time. She coming up, held the swinging lantern level with her face. They hung back politely.

"Please come," she cried in her winsome way. "These stairs are too narrow for courtesy."

They stepped heavily onward. She flitted away. Emmett raised his lantern between the purser's face and his own.

"What do you think of that?" he whispered, awe-stricken.

The man of accounts smiled broadly.

"Pretty girl!" he agreed with crudely emphatic superlatives.

Emmett shook his head. He murmured to himself: "I guess I'm tired. I see things."

Enid handed an armful of dry linen to the damp, steaming women in the lower bedroom. She was hurrying out; someone overtook her at the door. It was Mrs. Vansittart.

"Miss Brand," she said, with her all-sufficing smile, "give me one moment."

They stood in the dark and hollow-sounding stairway. The seas were lashing the column repeatedly, but the night's ordeal was nearly ended. Even a timid child might now know that the howling terror without had done its worst and failed. From the cavernous depths, mingling with the rumble of the storm, came the rhythm of a hymn. Those left in gloom by the withdrawal of Mr. Emmett's lantern were cheering their despondent souls.

Surprised, even whilst Enid awaited the older woman's demand, the listeners heard the words:

"Awake, my soul, and with the sun
Thy daily stage of duty run;
Shake off dull sloth, and joyful rise
To pay thy morning sacrifice."

The rough tones of the men were softened and harmonized by the distance. It was a chant of praise, of thanksgiving, the offering of those who had been snatched from death and from mortal fear more painful than death.

The singing ceased as suddenly as it begun. Mr. Emmett and the purser were warning the first watch.

The interruption did not seem to help Mrs. Vansittart. She spoke awkwardly, checking her thoughts as though fearful she might be misunderstood, or say too much.

"I am better," she explained, 'quite recovered. I—gave up my bunk to one who needed it."

"I am sure we are all doing our best to help one another," volunteered Enid.

"But I am restless. The sight of your sister—aroused vague memories. Do you mind—I find it hard to explain—your name is familiar. I knew—some people—called Brand—a Mr. Stephen Brand—and his wife."

She halted, seemingly at a loss. Enid, striving helplessly to solve the reason for this unexpected confidence, but quite wishful to make the explanation easier, found herself interested.

"Yes," she said. "That is quite possible, of course, though you must have been quite a girl. Mrs. Brand died many years ago."

Mrs. Vansittart flinched from the feeble rays of the lantern.

"That is so—I think I heard of—of Mrs. Brand's death—in London I fancy. But—they had only one child."

Enid laughed.

"I am a mere nobody," she said. "Dad adopted me. I came here one day in June, nineteen years ago, and I must have looked so forlorn that he took me to his heart—thank God!"

Another solemn chord of the hymn floated up to them:

"Let all thy converse be sincere,
Thy conscience as the noonday clear."

The rest of the verse evaded them. Probably a door was closed.

Mrs. Vansittart seemed to be greatly perturbed. Enid, intent on the occupation of the moment, believed their little chat was ended. To round it off, so to speak, she went on quickly:

"I imagine I am the most mysterious person living, in my early history, I mean. Mr. Brand saw me floating towards this lighthouse in a deserted boat. I was nearly dead. The people who had been with me were gone, either starved and thrown into the sea or knocked overboard during a collision, as the boat was badly damaged. My linen was marked 'E. T.' That is the only definite fact I can tell you. All the rest is guess-work. Evidently, nobody cared to claim me. And here I am."

Mrs. Vansittart was leaning back in the deep gloom, supporting herself against the door of the bedroom.

"What a romance!" she said, faintly.

"A vague one, and this is no time to gossip about it. Can I get you anything?"

Enid felt that she really must not prolong their conversation, and the other woman's exclamation threatened further talk.

"No, thank you. You'll excuse me, I know. My natural interest—"

But Enid, with a parting smile, was half-way toward the next land-

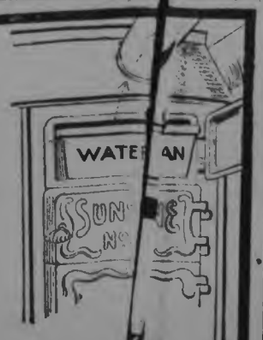
Water Pan Is Correctly Placed In The Sunshine



Few people realize the importance of the water-pan. Yet, without the moisture evaporated from the water in the pan, the warm air passing through the registers is harsh and dry. It is hard on your lungs and on your furnishings.

SASKATOON

According to statistics obtained by the Winnipeg Free Press the average increase in land values in eight Western Canadian cities during the past five years is 302 per cent. and profits of over $100,000,000 (one hundred million dollars) was the result of last year. HAVE YOUR PROFITED BY THIS INCREASE ?

The opportunities for profitable investment are greater now than ever. The population of the West is small, but is increasing by leaps and bounds, and soon we shall have cities in the West, almost, if not quite, as large as those in the East. The population now is less than two millions, many of us will live to see a population of forty or fifty millions in this vast country known as Western Canada.

You have undoubtedly many friends who have benefited or will benefit by these increasing values. HAVE YOU. IF NOT, WILL YOU ?

The chance of loss in purchasing real estate in or near a good Western city is eliminated, and, was as certain as anything can be that lots bought "right" adjoining a growing Western city will, in a few years make the buyer much money.

Calgary less than three years ago boasted a population of about fifteen thousand, to-day Calgary claims fifty thousand.

The leading wholesale hardware merchant of Canada, having warehouses in the most important western centres, is quoted as saying, when purchasing his site for his Saskatoon warehouse, that he "considered SASKATOON would in a very few years be the largest Canadian city west of Winnipeg." Do you realize what this means ? Will you share in the resulting profit ?

——SASKATOON is the livest City in the West to-day, its citizens are the most energetic and progressive.

——SASKATOON is now a Divisional Point for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.
Canadian Pacific Railway.
Canadian Northern Railway, and will be the terminal for the Hudson Bay Railway.

——SASKATOON has an ideal location from a scenic point of view, and is traversed by the South Saskatchewan River.

——SASKATOON is the centre of the most fertile agricultural portion of Western Canada.

——SASKATOON has already ninety wholesale warehouses & factories.

——SASKATOON is the natural distributing centre for 45,000 square miles of territory on car-loads shipped in, embracing already 155 towns and villages, and :

——SASKATOON is the natural distributing centre for 70,000 squnre miles on goods manufactured locally already embracing 213 towns and villages.

——SASKATOON has unlimited electric power obtained from damming the Big South Saskatchewan River. Electricity quickly makes a city in the East and will do so much more quickly in the West where it is not plentiful.

——SASKATOON Census figures tell of the wonderful strides made in the past few years.

|---|---|
| Population in 1903 was | 113 |
| Population in 1906 was | 3,011 |
| Population in 1909 was | 12,100 |

Percentage of increase 10608 per cent , which is equal to the combined percentage of increase of the other largest eleven Western Cities

The population for 1910 is estimated to be 16,000.

——SASKATOON is the EducationalCentre of Western Canada.

——SASKATOON is now having built the Provincial University for which ($2,500,000) two million five hundred thousand dollars has been set aside by the Saskatchewan Government.

——SASKATOON has at present four Public Schools and a Collegiate Institute, each one fo which would compare favorably with any school building in Toronto.

——SASKATOON is the best real estate proposition in Canada to-day.

The Financial Post, in a recent issue, says prices seem to be reasonable at this time.

The property of the Saskatoon-Saskatchewan Land Corporation, Limited, is well located, high, dry and level, within easy reach of the centre of the City. Lots range in price from $125.00 to $250.00 each, according to location.

Payment 25 per cent. cash, balance ten dollars a month on each lot.

WITHIN THREE YEARS EACH ONE OF THESE LOTS SHOULD BE WORTH SEVERAL TIMES THE PRICE PAID.

Inside lots sold a few years ago at these prices are now worth from ten to a hundred times the prices then paid.

The best locations will naturally be taken up first, but every lot, we believe, is a good purchase at the price and terms offered.

THE PILLAR OF LIGHT

ing, and Mrs. Vansittart was free to re-enter the crowded apartment where her fellow-sufferers were wondering when they would see daylight again. She did not stir. The darkness was intense, the narrow passage draughty, and the column thrilled and quivered in an unnerving manner. She heard the clang of a door above and knew that Enid had gone into the second apartment given over to the women. Somewhere, higher up, was the glaring light of which she had a faint recollection, though she was almost unconscious when unbound from the rope and carried into the service-room.

And at that moment, not knowing it, she had been near to Stephen Brand, might have spoken to him, looked into his face. What was he like, she wondered. Had he aged greatly with the years? A lighthouse-keeper! Of all professions in this wide world how came he to adopt that. And what ugly trick was fate about to play her that she should be cast ashore on this desolate rock where he was in charge? Could she avoid him? Had she been injudicious in betraying her knowledge of the past? And how marvellous was the likeness between Constance and her father! The chivalrous, high-minded youth she had known came back to her through the mists of time. The calm, proud eyes, the firm mouth the wide expanse of forehead were his. From her mother the woman who "died many years ago," when she, Mrs. Vansittart, was "quite a girl"—the girl inherited the clear profile, the wealth of dark-brown hair, and a grace of movement not often seen in Englishwomen.

Though her teeth chattered with the cold, Mrs. Vansittart could not bring herself to leave the vault-like stairway. Once more the hymn-singers cheered their hearts with words of praise. Evidently, there was one among them who not only knew the words, but could lead them mightily in the tunes of many old favourites.

The opening of the door—caused by the passing to and fro of some of the ship's officers—brought to her distracted ears the concluding bar of a verse. When the voices swelled forth again she caught the full refrain:

"Raise thine eyes to heaven
When thy spirits quail,
When, by tempests driven,
Heart and courage fail."

Such a message might well carry cheer to all who heard, yet Mrs. Vansittart listened as one in a trance, to whom the divinest promise was a thing unasked for and unrecognized. After passing through the greater peril of the reef in a state of supine consciousness, she was now moved to extreme activity by a more personal and selfish danger. There was she, a human atom, to be destroyed or saved at the idle whim of circumstance: here, with life and many things worth living for restored to her safe keeping, she saw imminent risk of a collapse with which the nebulous dangers of the wreck were in no way comparable. It would have been well for her could she only realize the promise of the hymn: "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

Not so ran Mrs. Vansittart's jumble of thoughts. The plans, the schemes, the builded edifice of many years, threatened to fall in ruin about her. In such bitter mood there was no consolation. She sought not to find spiritual succour, but bewailed the catastrophe which had befallen her.

It assuredly contributed to that "affliction which is but for a moment," that Constance should happen just then to run up the stairs towards the hospital. Each flight was so contrived that it curved across two-thirds of the superficial area allotted to the stairway. Anyone ascending made a complete turn to the right-about to reach the door of the room on any given landing and the foot of the ladder to the next.

Hence, the girl came unexpectedly face to face with Mrs. Vansittart. The meeting startled her. This pale woman, so thinly clad in the demi-toilette of evening wear on ship-board, should not be standing there.

"Is anything wrong?" she cried, raising her lantern just as Enid did when she encountered the sailors.

"No, no," said the other, passing a nervous hand over her face. Constance, with alert intelligence, fancied she dreaded recognition.

It Reports a Remarkable Cure of Kidney and Bladder Disease From Belleville, Ont.

Also Recalls Mr. D. M. Waters' First Purchase of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and Ointment a Quarter of a Century Ago.

When you read this letter you will readily understand why it is of special interest to us, for the druggist who sold the pills in this case gave his first order in 1885.

For twenty-five years Mrs. Waters has watched the growth in popularity of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and other medicines and can now point to hundreds of cures in Belleville and vicinity resulting from his recommendations of these well-known medicines.

If you are tired of experimenting, why not use a medicine which has proven its undoubted control over diseases of the kidneys and liver? Let this letter convince you or send to us for records of hundreds of other cases.

Mr. Mark Ottrey, Bay Side, Ont., writes: "I purchased two boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills from my druggist, D. M. Waters, Belleville, Ont., and the amount of satisfaction my wife obtained from their use has led me to ask my druggist to send you this letter.

Mrs. Ottrey suffered considerably with kidney and bladder trouble, causing great pain at times. The urine was very heavy and of a bad colour. After taking a few doses of these pills she felt better and when she had used three boxes she was entirely well." Remember Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills on the liver, kidneys, and bowels enables them to bring about cure.

Family Cured of Eczema By Cuticura Remedies

"The Cuticura treatment has absolutely cured me and family of eczema which I, my wife and two-year-old child had for eight months. It started with small pimples on the head of my child which gradually broke out in sores, and it was not long before I and my wife got the same. Our heads were one mass of sores, we could not sleep and the itching was terrible. We suffered for eight months. We tried different kinds of ointments and medicine but it did us no good and soon it began to break out on our bodies until a friend who had the same trouble told me about Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent, and I was surprised. After the first few days our heads began to heal and in two months we were absolutely cured of this terrible eczema."

(Signed) EUGENE POTTHOFF,
581 Ralph St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

No stronger evidence than this could be given of the success and economy of the Cuticura Remedies in the treatment of torturing, disfiguring humors of the skin and scalp, of infants, children and adults. Sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, U.S.A., for free 32-page Cuticura book on treatment of skin and scalp diseases.

Better Dream On.

"Isn't that a perfect dream of a hat?" she demanded of the man by her side.

"I said," she repeated after some seconds of silence, "isn't that a dream of a hat?"

Still silence from the man. Then she ventured reproachfully:

"Why don't you say something?"

"My dear, you seemed to enjoy your dream so that I was afraid of waking you up," the man then replied.

The Psalms.

Many years ago a new clergyman was taking Sunday duty in a remote hamlet among the Yorkshire wolds.

After morning service the old clerk came up to him and observed: "So ye calls them 'Sauums,' do ye? Noo, we never knew what to make o' that 'ere P. We allus calls 'em 'Spasms.'"—London Scraps.

Had All His Nerve With Him.

In a downtown stand up lunch place, where the chief source of the waiters' revenue is in the form of tips and where the patrons are supposed to step lively so that those who wait may be accommodated, a man has been coming of late who brings a newspaper with him and reads it leisurely, sometimes for half an hour, while he takes his modest luncheon. The waiter at whose station he planted himself one day recently was prepared for the emergency, and when the man had finished reading his paper the servant handed him two others with the remark: "Maybe you'd like to see these?" The other waiters, knowing of the plot, looked to see the man wilt, but were disappointed. He took the papers with thanks, continued reading, and finally, when he asked for his check, asked also whether he might keep the papers.—New York Tribune.

The dim and delightful swimming pool
Is the country boy's retreat
When he's played too long or things go wrong
And he's dusty from head to feet.
It cleanses and soothes and makes him cool,
For a friend in need is the swimming pool.

I like to think of the many boys
Who have frolicked there in their day,
For by nature's rule a swimming pool
Neither changes nor passes away.
It has always been, it will always be,
A place of delight and rest and glee.

A Cup of Sugar.

A large china cup with a handle was shoved across the counter and a child's voice said, "Ma wants a cupful of sugar."

The grocer filled the cup, weighed the sugar, poured it back into the cup and said, "Two cents."

To a customer who expressed surprise at his willingness to sell groceries in such small quantities he said:

"Have to in this neighborhood. Most of these people live from meal to meal, which means that they buy things by measure instead of weight. Reckoned by the cupful, the spoonful or the pailful, they know just how much of anything they need. In order to satisfy both customers and the inspector of weights and measures we measure first to suit the trade, then weigh afterward."—New York Sun.

Tartini, the great violinist, after dining indiscreetly, dreamed that he had made a bargain with the devil for his soul. To prove his powers the evil one seized a violin and played a sonata of exquisite beauty. Tartini awoke with the ringing in his ears, committed the music to paper and published it as "The Devil's Sonata."

BOYS' CAMPAIGN!!

$$ BOYS $$

This is a heart-to-heart talk with Boys about selling the Examiner, and how it may act as a stepping-stone to a successful business career in after years.

BOYS, do you recognize the fact that this little business offers you an opportunity to

Make100

per cent.

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

Here's How It's Done

BUY the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each; in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive 10 cts. from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say, the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

Climbing Steadily

THE Street Sales of the Examiner are climbing steadily and have touched by far the highest point in the history of the paper.

This result has increased the value of the Examiner as an advertising medium. In the city and in the districts outside the city limits, the increase in circulation is most gratifying, and credit is due to the pushing newsboys for their good work in bringing in new subscribers.

Persistency Draws Good Wages

Enough persistency in Boys is necessary to draw good wages, and this quality gives the biggest awards to the Boys who stick to business.

TO know how to KEEP ON is important in selling papers. It is the secret of the boy who is called "fortunate."

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily selling the Examiner, but some make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Use Spare Time Usefully

BOYS! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and 'Xmas.

The delivery of the Examiner is under strict and constant supervision. Yet irregularities will creep in, because carrier boys make mistakes like all other people.

Subscribers are invited to complain PROMPTLY. Complaints are welcomed when there is a reason for them. They will be given prompt attention.

WORLD'S DEBT TO CANADA

A Wonderful Achievement

Discovery of "Fruit-a-tives" has meant health for all

Canada's fame does not rest solely on her furs and wheat fields. Her rise in the esteem of the world is not due to her Cobalt mines. It is the work of her great men that has made her great. A graduate of McGill University has won lasting renown for his original researches in the realms of Physics.

Everyone knows that fruit is wholesome, when eaten judiciously. Physicians generally recognize the fact that fruit juices have a beneficial effect on the various organs of the body.

It remained for a Canadian physician to discover a process whereby the medicinal action of fruit could be so increased as to make the intensified juices a wonderful cure.

"Fruit-a-tives" is this combination of fruit juices and tonics. Since its introduction to the public, "Fruit-a-tives" has met with a success accorded to no other medicine in the world. The reason is plain. "Fruit-a-tives" is the one remedy that is actually made of fruit, and is the only remedy that naturally cures Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Backache, Kidney and Skin Troubles. At all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c., or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

NEW GUINEA PYGMIES.

The Spear and Bow and Poisoned Arrows Their Chief Weapons.

Our knowledge of the pygmies of New Guinea shows that in habit they are nomadic, nowhere tilling the ground, but depending for their living entirely on their skill in hunting and fishing. Their chief weapon is the bow, their arrows being generally poisoned either with the famous upas or some other similar vegetable poison, in some cases a species of strychnine. They also make use of the spear and an ingenious form of spring gun which is common to numerous other forest tribes. This is formed by setting a flattened bamboo spear attached to a bent sapling, which is fastened to a trigger in such a way that it is released by the passerby stumbling against an invisible string stretched across a game track. These spears are really set for game, and to the initiated they are obvious enough, as their presence is always indicated by certain well known signs, such as a broken off twig placed in a cleft stick. In war these signs are removed, the removal being equivalent to the moving of buoys in a mined channel. The wounds inflicted by these hardened bamboo spears are necessarily serious. The mental qualities of the Negritos are extremely undeveloped, none of them being able to express a higher numerical idea than three, but all observers who have met them unite in saying that they are a merry little people, with great ideas of hospitality when their confidence has been gained and provided they have not been previously ill treated. They are not cannibals and are generally monogamous. —London Times.

LIGHTNING FLASHES.

Many Things Concerning Them That Science Cannot Fathom.

A young girl in charge of two children, sheltering under a tree on Chislehurst common, was struck by lightning and killed—one of those dreadful instances of the sort of personal touch with which lightning seems to select its victim, for, though one child is reported to have been thrown down, neither apparently was injured. There are many instances, of course, of this strange selection, due in most cases probably to some accident of clothing. There is a well remembered case which happened some years ago at Cambridge, when three young men were walking across an open space of ground, and the middle one of the three was struck dead, while the others were untouched. The inquest showed that the young man who was killed had nails in his boots, whereas the others were wearing boating shoes.

The phenomena of thunderstorms have been the subject of much study in America. But if thunderstorms can be classified, they are still not thoroughly understood. We do not yet know what are the exact conditions which lead to a discharge of electricity in the form of a lightning flash from cloud to cloud or from cloud to earth. We cannot reproduce thunder and lightning in a laboratory. We do not know what is the origin of the electrification manifested in a storm.—London Spectator.

Tickling the Debtors.

John Barrett was only twenty-seven years old when President Cleveland appointed him minister to Siam. The first important task which confronted the youthful envoy was to press a claim against the Siamese government for $1,000,000. Experienced ambassadors warned him against using threats in obtaining the money. "Be cunning; avoid arrogance," they said.

"That is," responded Mr. Barrett, "you favor tickling with a straw to pricking with a bayonet."

The statesmen nodded assent.

When the young minister had finally succeeded in collecting the claim the ambassadors asked in astonishment, "How did you accomplish it?"

"By tickling," explained Barrett. "I had to tickle them almost to death, though, before they agreed to pay it."

Quaint Remedies.

Among the members of the Greek church in Macedonia the following recipes are regarded as highly useful: To pacify one's enemies write the psalm "Known In Judea," dissolve it in water and give your enemy to drink thereof, and he will be pacified. For a startled and frightened man take three dry chestnuts and saw thistle and three glasses of old wine and let him drink thereof early and late. Write also "In the beginning was the word" and let him carry it.

A FRIENDLY [illegible]

Making the Acquaintance of a Motorcar In China.

In Manchuria a motorcar is naturally a fantastic if not a dangerous invention in the eyes of the natives. When Signor Scarfoglio and his party stopped their machine at one of the villages for a supply of water for the radiator the inhabitants fled in terror and watched the strangers from half closed windows.

I advance to parley, waving a ruble over my head, he writes in "Round the World In a Motorcar," and at last one man ventures to approach. He takes two or three steps toward me, with his eyes fixed on the ruble. At last by means of a hundred complicated gestures he is made to understand that the money is not merely a reward for his arrival, but that we require some water.

He turns to the silent crowd and in a voice full of anger and fury hurls at them a stream of violent invective. The men listen with bowed heads as the tempest passes over them. Then some ten or twenty hurry off, and an instant later there is a row of pails beside the car. The chief, for he certainly is a chief, regards me with a smile full of satisfaction and points to my pocket, where the ruble has disappeared, and to his own, in which it would find a grateful resting place.

When Haaga takes from one of the pails the small quantity of water that he requires the people become more courageous and approach the car, with their little eyes wide open with astonishment. They are led by a youth who appears to enjoy much authority in the land. The crowd listens with patient attention to his vivacious discourse, which is punctuated by eloquent and convincing arm play. He evidently explains the mysterious dragon.

Gradually the young Manchurian approaches the tires and with grim resolution touches them with a finger. The crowd is struck dumb with admiration. He takes another step and fingers the lamps. Something like a shiver passes over the crowd. A third step and he touches the radiator, but unfortunately for him it was still hot, and the experimental scientist burned his hand.

The crowd flees like a herd of surprised antelopes. Soon, however, they return under the persuasions of the more courageous experimenter and themselves touch the pneumatics which fill them with wonder, make grimaces before the lenses of the lamps, which turn their images upside down, and finally one by one conscientiously burn their fingers on the radiator.

Dance on the Ceiling.

A student of the Tyrol and Tyrolese people describes a remarkable dance in which the male dancers beat time on the ceiling with their feet.

"In Brandenburg and one or two other Tyrolese valleys which boast of a particular muscular fair sex," says the writer, "the girl at the conclusion of her swain's fantastical jumps catches hold of him by his braces and hoists him up in the air. He, of course, helps by jerking himself upward when she lifts, then, balancing with his hands on her shoulders, he treads the ceiling of the low room to the tune of the music, and she continues to dance around on the floor of the room. Such dances are rapidly falling into disuse."

A Sure Way of Saving.

An ingenious method of putting his savings beyond his own reach was adopted by a German writer who found from dire experience that all his profits melted away as soon as earned. Having made $60,000 by a fortunate literary speculation, he placed the whole of the money, together with his will, in the Imperial Deposit bank at Berlin and on receiving the receipt from the cashier deliberately tore it up. The cashier thought he was mad and told him angrily that it would take fully three years before he could expect to obtain a duplicate receipt. "That is just why I have torn up the original," calmly remarked the depositor, "and now the money is safe for that time."

What the Knife Said.

"Some folks want funny inscriptions engraved on their silver," said the jeweler. "Takes wedding knives. Many wedding cakes are such mountainous affairs that a special knife is required to cut them. One of last month's brides cut her cake with a knife that was a present from her aunt. I guess not many of the guests got to read the inscription; if they had they would be talking about it yet. Those knives are supposed to be used for cutting the bride's cake and then laid on the shelf for the rest of time, but the aunt couldn't distinguish, apparently, between wedding and birthday cakes, for she made us engrave on the knife, 'May I serve thee well and often'."

Mark Twain's Profanity.

When Mark Twain began to write for the Atlantic Monthly he came willingly under its rules, for with all his willfulness there never was a more biddable man in things you could show him a reason for. He never made the least of that trouble which so abounds for the hapless editor from narrower minded contributors. If you wanted a thing changed, very good, he changed it; if you suggested that a word or a sentence or a paragraph had better be struck out, very good, he struck it out. His proof sheets came back each a veritable "mush of concession," as Emerson says. Now and then he would try a little stronger language than the Atlantic had stomach for, and once when I sent him a proof I made him observe that I had left out the profanity. He wrote back: "Mrs. Clemens opened that proof and lit into the room with danger in her eye. What profanity? You see, when I read the manuscript to her I skipped that." It was part of his joke to pretend a violence in that gentlest creature which all the more amusingly realized the situation to their friends.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine.

Odd Shaving Habits.

It is said that of men who shave themselves not one in fifty can use the razor with both hands, and to this may be added other curious facts about the shaving habits of the average man.

There is the president of a trust company in New York who, he tells his friends, always shaves himself standing in a corner of the room and facing the wall. He was a poor country boy and, like most boys, bought a razor on the sly. There was no mirror in his bedroom and rather than let his people know what he was about he faced the wall and scraped away by sense of feeling. Once accustomed to this method he never needed a glass.

There is a United States senator, formerly a farmer, who for many years shaved himself sitting on a milking stool and looking at his reflection in a bucket of water. That was what he did as a boy and man on the farm, and he says that he couldn't shave standing up.—New York Tribune.

"Tolerance" in Coins.

The mint allows a certain degree of "tolerance" in coins. For example, the gold double eagle's standard weight is 516 grains, and the "tolerance" allowed is half a grain. A coin of this denomination may weigh as little as 515½ grains or as much as 516½ grains, but never less than the first nor more than the second figure. The standard weight of the silver half dollar is 192.9 grains, and the tolerance allowed is 1.5 grains. This coin may weigh as little as 191.4 grains and as much as 194.4 grains, but never less than the first nor more than the second figure. The standard fineness of all gold and silver coins is 900. In the gold coins a deviation of only one one-thousandth from this is allowed and in the silver coins of only three one-thousandth. The so called five cent nickel coin is really only 25 per cent nickel, the rest being copper. One cent pieces are 95 per cent copper and 5 per cent tin and zinc.—Philadelphia Record.

Sir Walter Scott's Debts.

The Ballantyne failure threw upon Sir Walter Scott the responsibility for £130,000, or $650,000, and the grand old man immediately set about the mighty task of paying it; but, notwithstanding the most heroic efforts on his part, he never succeeded in paying it all. He did the best he could, but he had to depend solely upon his writings, and the task was more than mortal man could accomplish. As his powers failed he became possessed of the idea that all his debts were paid and that he was a free man, and in this belief he happily remained till his death.—New York American.

Grit.

Grit is the grain of character. It may generally be described as heroism materialized—spirit and will thrust into heart, brain and backbone, so as to form part of the physical substance of the man.—Whipple.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a sole medicine in any condition of the system.

THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of known composition. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for the sake of extra profit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is willing with your money to purchase—your health—may be your life itself. You don't get what you ask for.

The Educated Chinaman.

To the ordinary Chinaman one talks pigeon English, but it is not always possible to know who is an ordinary Chinaman. I was once in Shanghai and saw two English sailors who wanted to be directed to the quay. One of them said, "Here, ask that old chink walking along there." So the other went up to a stately looking Chinaman and said, "Hi, Johnny, you tells me chop-chop which way velly good water is?" The Chinaman stared at him in cold scorn. "If," he said, "you will speak to me in proper English I will answer you."—London Mail.

How Far the Blood Travels.

The mileage of the blood circulation reveals some astonishing facts. It has been calculated, for instance, that, assuming the heart to beat sixty-nine times a minute at ordinary pressure, the blood goes at the rate of 207 yards in a minute, or nine miles an hour, 220 miles a day and 80,000 miles a year. If a man eighty-four years old could have had one single blood corpuscle floating in his blood all his life it would have traveled in that time nearly 7,000,000 miles.

Mexican Prisoner Swindle.

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—The Postoffice Department issues the following statement: "Communications on the lines of the celebrated 'Spanish prisoner' fraud are being received by prominent persons in Canada from Mexico. These communications purport to come from a person who has been arrested in Mexico for bankruptcy, and whose baggage, containing a sum of 1,800,000 francs, is lying 'checked' at some railway station in the United States. The Mexican prisoner is willing to give one-third of this sum to any person who will wire him sufficient money to pay the costs of the judgment against him in the Mexican court under which he is held.

This is a very plain swindle, but in view of the fact that quite a number of persons in Canada were deceived by the Spanish prisoner fraud and invoigled out of considerable sums of money, it is thought advisable to warn the public against this Mexican variation of the same fraud."

Black Handers Resort to Bombs.

New York, Sept. 14.—After writing several threatening letters and waiting in vain to a response to their demands for $5,000, Black Handers yesterday exploded a bomb in front of the wine store of Enrico Cassabianca on Sixth avenue. The explosion demolished part of the front of the five-storey building and created a panic in the neighborhood. Occupants of big apartment hotels and residences of millionaires a block away were aroused by the terrific shock, but no one was injured.

Ran After the Girl.

London, Ont., Sept. 14.—Nelson H. Stebbins of Toronto, who is running some amusements at the Western Fair, was fined $10 by Mayor Beattie yesterday for chasing a young London girl through the streets Monday night.

An Unconclusive Test.

Collected Loans.

Washington, Sept. 14.—A system by which banks in small cities in the west have been fooling national bank examiners and concealing loans in their reserve bank in a large city, has been discovered, and is under investigation. A keen examiner had found an instance where as many as a dozen banks in small cities had been concealing loans in one reserve bank in Chicago.

There is authority for the statement that the whole system of national bank examination and regulation is to receive great attention during the next few months.

A Tribute From Earl Grey.

Quebec, Sept. 14.—On behalf of His Excellency the Governor-General, a wreath of lilies and a wreath of roses were laid at the foot of the monument to Wolfe and Montcalm in the governor's garden yesterday morning. A card on each bore the inscription, "In respectful memory, from Earl Grey." Yesterday was the anniversary of the battle of the Plains of Abraham, which cost the two generals their lives.

Home Rule Mystery.

Lincoln, Eng., Sept. 14.—Regarding the speech of the Home Secretary, W. J. Bryan said yesterday: "I am very much pleased to learn of the Democratic victory. The fact that we elected two out of four governors, as well as governor and legislature, gives a national significance, which it would not have if it were merely a victory for state officers.

"Taken with the returns from Vermont, it indicates that the revolt against the Republican party is as pronounced in the east as in the west, and would seem to make it certain that there will be a Democratic majority in the next Congress."

REPUBLICANS DELUGED.

Democrats In Maine Have a Majority All Along the Line.

Portland, Me., Sept. 14.—Complete returns of the vote for state senators and representatives in the election on Monday gave the Democrats substantial majorities in both branches of the Maine Legislature, which next year will elect a United States Senator to succeed Eugene Hale, a Secretary of State, State Treasurer, Attorney-General and Commissioner of Agriculture. The new legislative body will also probably be called upon to carry out the declarations of the Democratic party platforms of recent years, and re-submit to the people the liquor prohibitory amendment to the constitution and to repeal the Sturgis liquor law enforcement act.

According to unofficial complete returns, the Legislature will have a Democratic majority of 36 in joint ballot. The Senate will consist of twenty-one Democrats and ten Republicans, and the House will have 86 Democrats and 36 Republicans. The last Legislature consisted of 122 Republicans and 90 Democrats, the Republicans having fifteen majority in the Senate and 47 in the House.

Practically complete returns last night on the vote for governor gave Frederick W. Plaisted, Democrat, 73,644, and Governor Bert. M. Fernald, Republican, 64,912, a plurality for Plaisted of 8,732, as again a plurality of 8,064 for Governor W. T. Cobb, Republican, four years ago.

Another Democrat Victory.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 14.—Returns from Monday's state elections are still incomplete. The Democrat state ticket, however, has been elected by a majority ranging from 15,000 to 20,000. Constitutional amendment No. 10, providing for the initiative and referendum has probably carried, although by a much smaller majority than estimated yesterday.

It is claimed the several counties that voted "dry" last year, will show a majority for license when the full returns are recorded.

Goldwin Smith's Estate.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—The will of the late Goldwin Smith disposes of $832,-250.55, of which $582,350 is in Ontario. After bequests totalling some $50,500, and succession dues, $80,000, are paid, the balance, aggregating over $700,000 goes to Cornell University at Ithaca, New York, with which he was formerly connected, and which always held a foremost place in his affections. The gift is absolutely to be used by the board of trustees for the promotion, especially of liberal studies, languages, ancient and modern, literature, philosophy, history and political science, for which provision has been made in the new hall, which bears my name, and to the building of which my wife has contributed.

The will says as to the art museum: "I bequeath to the art museum of Toronto all my pictures, portraits, or engravings, and statuary which belong to me in the Grange, and also my scrap-book and autograph book and any books on art which may be in my library and for the purpose of confirming my wife's devise of the Grange property to them I hereby devise and bequeath to them upon the same conditions as the devise to them in my wife's will, all right, title, and interest I may have or may have acquired in any manner whatsoever to the Grange property, as more particularly described in her will, and as occupied by me since the time of my marriage."

Warns Against Separation.

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—Sir George Doughty roused the members of the Canadian Club in Winnipeg yesterday by a fine patriotic address, in which he sounded a warning against separation from the rest of the Empire.

"Some say that Canada might walk alone," he said. "I hope if she ever tries to do so she will walk warily, and that that time will be far distant, because, however much Canadians might think they have got on, I would suggest to you that the more important you become the more your provinces are known throughout the world for their richness, the more certain will foreign nations jealously look upon you, and the more surely will they covet what you have got."

PROSPECTS FOR FAIR WERE NEVER BRIGHTER

If Present Weather Continues for the Balance of the Week Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Will Break All Records in Point of Success.

ATTRACTIONS SPLENDID

If the present brand of weather continues for the balance of the week, the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition of 1910, which opens to exhibitors tomorrow and to the public on Friday, will break all previous records in point of success.

This is the confident expectation of President Leary and the Board of Directors, all of whom expressed themselves as being most optimistic concerning the big exhibition. The policy adopted during the past few years has inspired a feeling of confidence on the part of exhibitors and the public generally, and the result has been a yearly gain in popularity for the Exhibition, which this year promises to culminate in the greatest possible success.

The announcement that Hon. Mr. Stratton, Messrs. Crowe and Murray of Toronto, and Senator Beith had consented to exhibit their prize-winning string of Hackneys, probably the finest collection of horses of this type on the continent, has been received with delight, and the fact that these horses will be shown here, promises to be the finest possible kind of a drawing card for the Exhibition. They will be here only on Friday afternoon, as they are to compete at Ogdensburg, N.Y., and must be shipped from Peterborough on Saturday morning. They will be shown in front of the grand stand in singles, tandem and four in hand. The Fair directors are to be congratulated upon having such a splendid attraction for the first public day of the fair. It will be the finest showing of Hackney horses ever seen in Peterborough and anyone who takes any interest in horses, should not miss this feature.

The Horse Races.

As usual the harness horse races will be a big feature of the programme. Entries are coming in fast and the events are already well filled. The half mile track, the finest in Canada, is in the best of shape, and the races promise to be well worth seeing.
well worth seeing.

Grand Stand Attractions.

The attractions in front of the grand stand, which include the famous Marvin family and a marvellous troupe of Japanese acrobats, come here with the advance notice of providing two of the most sensational acts that have ever been presented in Peterborough. The 57th Regimental band will play a splendid programme in front of the grand stand, while in the evening the [illegible] will be augmented by a grand display of fire works.

IT'S UP TO PETERBOROUGH TO BOOST THE INDUSTRIAL

It is up to the people of Peterborough. President Leary and the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, have done everything in their power to make the big fair a success. Their labour of months is very near at hand. Nothing is left but the actual work during the Exhibition. All that could be done in way of preparation has been carried out. That the fair is to be the greatest success on record or not, depends on the citizens of Peterborough city and county. The programme is best that has ever been offered. You should see that the attendance breaks all records. Go to the Exhibition, go both days and [illegible] night if you can, but go one day anyway; take the family with you, talk Exhibition to your neighbour, and the stranger within your gates. Be a booster, not a knocker. Remember, the fair is a local enterprise, most of the money being spent in the city and county. Go to a circus in thousands and the silk-hatted proprietor departs with a bagful of coin of the realm that you have handed him. He has a chance to keep your money in circulation in your own community once again, visit the fair. Help to make it the best in history.

MR. D. HUGHES CHARLES WAS BANQUETED BY THE CITIZENS

Was Guest of Honour at Delightful Affair Under Auspices of Board of Trade and Canadian Club Last Night---Addresses Were Read---Presentation by the Peterborough Club.

About one hundred of the leading citizens of Peterborough were present as hosts last night at a banquet in the Hotel National, in honour of Mr. D. Hughes Charles, who has been manager of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for the past eight and one-half years, and is on the eve of departure to Montreal, where he assumes new business relations and responsibilities.

After discussing the excellent dinner provided by the National, the chair was assumed by Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, president of the Canadian Club. On his right sat Mr. Charles, the guest of honour, Mr. Alex. Laird, manager of the Bank of Commerce, His Honour Judge Huycke, and Dr. Cameron. On his left were Alderman G. A. Gillespie, president of the Board of Trade, His Worship Mayor Morrow, Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P., Mr. D. O'Connell, Alderman Bradburn and Mr. F. D. Kerr.

After the removal of the cloth and the King loyally remembered, Mr. Kenner, on behalf of the Canadian Club, read a complimentary address to Mr. Charles, testifying to his excellent services as secretary of the club, to his personal good qualities, and expressing regret at his departure from Peterborough.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, on behalf of the Board of Trade, read an address in which Mr. Charles' services as a former President, were made the subject of eulogistic mention, and his fidelity to the duties of the position. Reference was also made in graceful congratulation to Mrs. Charles' restoration to health. The address was elegantly illuminated and contained, besides the corporation seal of the Board of Trade, photographic signed portraits of Peterborough citizens and views of Peterborough scenery.

His Honour, Judge Huycke, in proposing the health of Mr. Charles, which was very heartily received, referred to the prominent part Mr. Charles had taken in matters pertaining to the welfare of the city. He has been a good and public-spirited citizen. Testimony was also given to his manly kindness of heart, and the ungrudging devotion he had given to the promotion of the many interests he had at heart.

Hon. Mr. Stratton, Mr. O'Connel, Mayor Morrow, and Mr. Laird, all spoke in appreciative terms of the good, personal and business qualities of Mr. Charles, as evidenced in his management of the bank and in his connection in a presidential capacity, with the Board of Trade, the Industrial Exhibition, and as Secretary of the Canadian Club. His energy and public-spirited citizenship were especially dwelt upon and a graceful tribute paid Mrs. Charles, whose social prominence and popularity had been an assisting influence. The toast was enthusiastically drunk.

Mr. Charles, replying on behalf of himself and Mrs. Charles, expressed his hearty and grateful appreciation of the many kind things that had been said of him. His most cordial thanks were due for so hearty an appreciation of his efforts to advance all the interests of the city in which he had passed eight and a half pleasant years of his life.

A telegram was read from Hon. Senator Cox, president of the Bank of Commerce, regretting his inability to accept the invitation to be present.

During the evening Mr. Devey's orchestra lent the pleasant variety of music to the proceedings, and Mr. W. McIlroy sang one of his greatly appreciated songs.

"God Save The King" brought a delightful evening to a close, and adjournment was made to the Peterborough Club, where another evidence of Mr. Charles' popularity was given.

On behalf of the members, with a few graceful remarks by Mr. O'Connel, Mr. W. H. Denham presented Mr. Charles with an elegant punch bowl. Mr. Charles neatly acknowledged the gift and the sentiments accompanying its presentation.

BOY CHARGED WITH THE THEFT OF A $25 BICYCLE

A number of cases were heard in the police court this morning, some of which were of a serious nature.

The first was a trespass case. The offender was fined $4.00, two of which were to be paid the complainant.

A "blacklister" took the stand next, charged with drinking liquor on Sunday, Sept 11th. He pleaded guilty. "I got some liquor at home, your honour, that my wife had for medical purposes," he said. He admitted, however, going up to the north end of the city, in company with three other fellows, where they procured a bottle of ale each, and indulged in a jollification. He was fined ten dollars, to be paid in ten days.

Walter Mahaffy was charged with stealing a bicycle valued at $25.00. He pleaded not guilty, and was allowed to go on the promise that he would appear again in a week.

An Additional Insurance of $10,000 Put On New Public Library

A meeting of the Property Committee of the City Council was held last evening, there being present Ald. Duncan, chairman, Mayor Morrow, Ald. Bradburn, Batten, and Graham. Two representatives of firms for the supplying of electrical fixtures and stacks, tables and counters for the new Public Library were present, and discussed the matter with the committee. It was arranged for the committee to meet these gentlemen this morning at the Library.

It was moved by Ald. Batten, and seconded by Ald. Graham, that Henry Purber be engaged to fix up the grounds around the Public Library, at a cost of $35.00.

Regarding the insurance on the Public Library and the Isolation Hospital, it was moved by Ald. Batten, and seconded by Ald. Graham, that Mr. T. E. Bradburn be given the insurance on the former, and that the present amount of insurance on it be increased to $15,000, and that Mr. W. Might be given the insurance on the Isolation Hospital. The committee then adjourned.

WAS SENT BACK

Fred Reynolds, a young Englishman, returned to England to-day, leaving for Montreal by the noon train, where he will sail by the S. S. "Lake Manitoba" for the Old Country. This young man has been out here four years, and is being sent back by the city. He is suffering from tuberculosis and is fast failing. It was thought that it was best to send him back to his home. He has been unable to work for some time, and has depended largely on charitably disposed friends for his maintenance.

DEFENCE SCORES

Point for Dr. Crippen in Investigation This Morning—Not Possible to Tell Sex, Says Government Analyst

GIRL-MAN COLLAPSES

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., SEPT. 14.—During the continued Crippen investigation this morning, Dr. Pepper, government analyst, made an admission that startled the crowd in the court room and threatened to wreck every foundation of the Crown's case against Crippen and Miss Leneve. Pepper candidly admitted what agreed with the doctor, defence witness, that owing to the state of the remains it was impossible to determine the sex of same by anatomical observation. Solicitor Newton, lawyer for Crippen, made the witness repeat this admission. This leaves the fate of Crippen hanging literally by a hair. The Crown is endeavouring to prove that the hair on the head was Mrs. Crippen's. Dr. Crippen in dock this morning, was noticeably more cheerful after the admission of Pepper. Miss Leneve seems to be on the point of collapse.

MAN WHO SUPERINTENDED MUCH OF THE WORK ON LOCAL LIFT LOCK MEETS TRAGIC FATE IN MONTREAL

Mr. David Murphy, Engineer for the Dominion Bridge Company, Which Built Steel Work on Famous Lock, Run Down by a Speeding Automobile Last Night and Died This Morning.

MONTREAL, SEPT. 14. — David Murphy, a civil engineer, who directed the construction of the famous hydraulic lift-lock at Peterborough and Kirkfield, on the Trent Canal, died in the hospital here this morning, as the result of injuries received last night. Mr. Murphy, while riding on a motor cycle, was run down by a speeding automobile. He leaves a widow and four children.

The above despatch from Montreal, special to the Examiner, gives the first information of the death of a gentleman who had many friends in Peterborough. Mr. Murphy was an engineer in the employ of the Dominion Bridge Company of Lachine, which company did all the steel work in connection with the local lift-lock, and also with the Kirkfield lock. Mr. Murphy superintended all the work, and, as a result, spent considerable time in Peterborough, making many friends, who will regret indeed to learn of his tragic death.

Y. W. C. A. To Have A Rally On Friday, September 23rd

The long, bright, summer days are drawing to a close. In the midst of the out-of-doors life there has crept in upon us, we know not how, a rest, a renewing of energy which fills us with fresh vigour for work. As we look ahead to the winter we are anticipating and planning time for study and reading; time also for fun and recreation. In so planning we would call the attention of every girl in our city to the Y.W.C.A. fall programme, which offers golden opportunities for both mental and physical development.

Miss Coventry, who is so well and favourably known, will resume her gymnasium classes. Classes for junior girls and boys, school girls and business girls will be formed. The gymnasium class happily combines work and play and is a most popular class. Rev. H. R. Trumpour will conduct the weekly literature class, which will be free to association members.

Dr. Malcolm McCullough will lecture to the First Aid to the Injured class, which will organized under the St. John Ambulance Association and certificates given at the close of the course.

Elementary English, cooking and drawing classes will also be held.

More than 200 members took advantage of the various classes at the Y.W.C.A. last season, and this season promises to see a much larger number enrolled in the Bible study, gymnasium and educational classes. Informal travel talks and many jolly social evenings will be arranged for and announced.

The annual Association rally has been arranged for Friday evening, Sept. 23rd. Miss Addison, Dean of Annesley Hall, Toronto, will be the speaker. There will be a short musical programme, followed by a social half hour. A cordial invitation is extended to all to enjoy this evening with the Association members.

The Y.M.C.A. girls are making a special effort to largely increase the membership before October 1st, when all class work commences.

All intending to join, and we believe a great many girls are, and those desiring definite information regarding the classes, should call on or phone Miss McCalla, at the building. Membership tickets $1.00, juniors 50c.

OILING GEORGE STREET HAS PROVED VERY SUCCESSFUL

That oiling the streets is a success is clearly demonstrated just now on George street, which thoroughfare has been oiled from Murray street down. Above Murray street the road has been given a new dressing of gravel, and rolled, but no oil has been put on. The difference in the two sections of road is clearly demonstrated. In the oiled district there is no dust; the road is not cut up and presents a cleanly appearance. On the other section the dust is bad, traffic has already made an impression upon the road, and the street is not nearly in as good condition as the oiled portion.

POLICE ARE ON TRAIL OF BOLD HOTEL ROBBERS

Examiner Special.

WINNIPEG, SEPT. 14.—All available forces of the Canadian Pacific police, assisted by the Northwest Mounted Constables, Provincial police and a score of detective agencies are on the trail of the gang of expert robbers who entered the Canadian Pacific Alexandria hotel here and robbed the Countess of Antrim passing through to the coast, of diamonds and family jewels valued at thousands of dollars, some of them priceless heirlooms. They are supposed to be the same gang who recently made a systematical looting of the railway's hotels all along the line, and are now supposed to have escaped across the border.

COUNT ZEPPELIN'S BALLOON WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Back From Convention

Mr. W. H. Noyes, son of Mr. Chas. Noyes, of East City, was in the city yesterday; afterwards he left for his home in Toronto.

Mr. Noyes spent last week in Boston attending the meeting of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance Railway Trainmen. Two hundred and ninety-two lodges were represented. This society has been in existence for a great number of years, and its intended uses are widely known; however, for the benefit of those who are not acquainted with this order, it is well to state that its object is the regulating of the interests of all signal men, trackmen, interlockingmen, repair and water supply men. A grand procession, consisting of about thirty thousand men of the order, and attending by invitation, were about four hundred members of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of way employees, all marched in one grand line for about twelve miles.

Much business of interest to the delegates was transacted. Mr. Noyes was re-elected to the responsible position of chairman of the Grand Executive, which he has filled with great satisfaction to all concerned.

Mr. Noyes' wife was also honoured, she being elected member of the Executive of the Women's Auxiliary.

Mr. Noyes is foreman of the West Toronto Railway yards, and left for home on the 4.30 C. P. R. last evening.

SOME TALL HAY

Two remarkable stalks of hay were placed on exhibition at the Examiner office this morning by Mr. O'Connor, on whose farm it grew, at lot 10, concession 7, Ennismore. One of the stalks measured six feet, while the other measured five feet, eight inches.

This extraordinary stalk of hay is good evidence of Mr. O'Connor's splendid farming, and is certainly a credit to the farm that produced it. Mr. O'Connor regarded this as the tallest piece of hay grown in the country, and those who have examined it, are of this opinion. These stalks show the remarkable fertility of the soil, and reflect credit on Mr. O'Connor.

BABY'S SKIN TROUBLES

IS IT TO BE A FLOP?

There is a good deal of discord just now, says the Hamilton Times, in the Conservative Protectionist chorus. The Toronto Mail and Empire wants a tariff as high as Hamaan's gallows. The Toronto World, which, a short time ago, could not have too much protection, declares now for "qualified" protection. The Toronto News has been converted to "moderate" protection—a tariff that would exclude competition. The Halifax organ wants "more" protection, while the Winnipeg Conservative organ, alarmed by the expressed feeling of the West, is ready to go at the tariff "with an axe." The British Columbia Conservative organs are almost ready to disclaim protection entirely. There is even a doubtful tone in the tariff chant of the junior local Tory organ. Is the party preparing for a flop?

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

The Industrial Exhibition is an annual event, and it means a good deal to Peterborough and could and should be made to mean a great deal more. It has had a history of struggle, and that it still even exists is due to the persistence and courage of those who from time to time, have had charge of its management. It has been a difficult matter to finance, and this difficulty can be lessened by the citizens taking a more practical interest in its success, which can easily be done by more liberal patronage during the days of exhibition. This year the Exhibition promises to be more worthy than ever of patronage. Last night the number of entries was in excess of the total of last year, and their number will be very largely added to between this time and the date of closing the lists. Many city people do not seem to think that the exhibits interest them. This is from want of thought. They are very greatly interested in farm products, for upon these the quality of their tables and comfort of living depend; the improved methods of farming, dairying, and stock raising promoted by these exhibitions affects the prosperity of the farmers and their prosperity is the prosperity of the city dwellers. It is, therefore, the duty of the citizens to promote the success of the exhibition—their duty to support a home enterprise closely connected with the good name of the city, and the benefit of the community. The special attractions are of universally good quality this year; the stock exhibits, especially of high-class horses of provincial reputation, also promise to be more than usually well worth seeing. Altogether the Exhibition is worthy of, and should receive, the hearty support of the citizens of Peterborough.

THE Y.M.C.A.

Next week the annual membership campaign of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association will begin; and it is commended very warmly to the practical, cooperation of the citizens. On moral grounds the support of the Association is indicated. The highest standard of citizenship depends upon the moral fibre of its citizens, and the larger the membership of the Association is made, the wider the area of the moral influence it is equipped to exert. Closely allied with the moral influence of the Association is its work in promoting sound minds and sound bodies. Healthy and wholesome sport with physical improvement which the Association promotes and fosters, has its influence in promoting a sound physique, an important asset in the proper discharge of duty in any sphere of occupation or employment. Besides, addiction to clean sport and strength-giving and health-giving exercise, systematically and scientifically directed, gives the mind a good bent and forms a wholesome counter-attraction to debilitating pleasures and unhealthy, if not vitiating, amusements. For business reasons the Association's work is worthy of support. In this age of keen competition business interests demand that an employee in any branch of activity, shall be able to give the best and most that is in him. He cannot do this if his habits are not regular and good; if his mind is given to unworthy ambitions, if he subjects himself to influences that deteriorate character and promote untrustworthiness, the most serious defect in an employee. He will avoid these objectionable characteristics, and, indeed, be endowed with, and greatly helped to, the possession of higher qualities of character by connection with the Y.M.C.A. For these and other reasons, the business men and employing establishments of the city should, if, on no higher grounds than self-interest, extend substantial assistance to an organization, whose aim and achievement, to a large degree, are to make young men steady, sober, sound in mind and body and dependable. The acquirement of additional "sinews of war" as represented by the membership campaign of the Young Men's Christian Association of Peterborough is very heartily commended to the practical sympathy of all classes of citizens.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

AN UNHOLY ALLIANCE.

Weekly (Canada) Sun

The Peterborough Examiner declares that the late German scare "was largely made out of whole cloth and for political purposes."

It was. The manufecturers of the scare were the Tories of England—a country in which the word Tory still carries the original meaning and in full measure. The scare was chiefly the finished work of a selfish landed aristocracy the back-bone of English Toryism, which desired, by creating foreign complications, to prevent Lloyd George from levying upon this aristocracy its fair share of the public burdens. The evil business was aided by professional soldiers and sailors, also of Tory instincts, clamorous of fame and promotion, and by soulless contractors, whose pockets govern their politics, and who profit by the spending of huge sums on army and navy contracts.

CANADA'S PROGRESS.

(London Advertiser.)

The monthly report of the department of trade and commerce for June, 1910, just issued, contains a statistical record of the progress of Canada since Confederation, which shows expansion in every department of activity.

In 1896—to go back no farther—the Canadian tonnage that passed through the canals amounted to 4,039,113 tons; in 1908 the tonnage had increased to 6,780,789. It is in the steam railway department of traffic, however, that by far the greatest increase is shown. In 1896 Canada had 16,270 miles of railway in operation, the total gross earnings of which amounted to $50,-545,569, and the net earnings $15,802,-915. The amount of freight carried was 24,266,825 tons, and the number of passengers carried 14,810,407. In 1908 the mileage had increased to 22,-966 mile s.he total gross and net earnings to $146,918,314 and $39,614,-171 respectively, the amount of freight to 63,071,167 tons, and the number of passengers to 34,044,992. When the returns for 1909 and 1910 are available it will be found that these figures have been exceeded.

The total tonnage of vessels entering and leaving Canadian ports in tons was 49,302,236, of which 11,456,824 tons were sea-going. In 1909, the total tonnage was 93,371,801, 19,491,271 being sea going.

The figures as to trade and commerce show tremendous expansion: The total value of imports in 1896 was $118,011,508; the total for the fiscal year 1909-10, was $391,803,336—an increase of more than threefold. In the year the Liberals entered office the exports totalled $121,013,868; for the last fiscal year the total was $331,205,-869. Notwithstanding the lowering of the tariff and the British preference, there has been more than a threefold increase in the amount of customs duties collected, the figures for 1896 and 1909 being $20,210,607 and $61,686,-467, respectively.

In 1896 Canada had 9,169 postoffices, with a revenue of $4,689,891; in 1909, the number had increased to 13,429, and the revenue to $9,837,254. At the same time the department has been able to show substantial annual surpluses, in place of the deficits of other years.

Tables are also given in the report showing the expansion of the banking and insurance business, mineral production, etc., the whole telling a story of progress such as Canada has never experienced in any other period in her history.

Canada's Place And Destiny; A Nation Within The Empire

(Lethbridge Herald.)

The efforts of the Tariff Reform Press of Britain, particularly the London Daily Mail, to coerce the people of the Old Country into a change of fiscal policy are varied, sometimes ignorant, often amusing, and even positively ludicrous. In another column the Herald produces an article from the London Daily Mail of August 22nd last from the pen of one Robert Machray, presumably a special correspondent in Canada, trying to dig up material to convince the people of the Mail's constituency, which is a very large one, that tariff reform is absolutely necessary for the safety of the Empire.

This writer goes so far in his purpose as to accuse the Canadian people of disloyalty, and to prove his case makes statements that are false and cannot be substantiated. The Canadian people are described as having the ideal of "Canada a nation" not within the Empire, but without, independent, literally and actually, not virtually, as at present.

The writer holds that the present movement in Western Canada for freer trade is part of the Americanizing process, the result of the American invasion, that will eventually lead not to annexation, but to the severance of the ties of Empire, and the independence of Canada as a nation.

Before dealing with this phase of the subject, there are a few matters in Mr. Machray's article that require some correction, and have some bearing on the final issue.

The writer would have some difficulty in counting up the half million Americans in Western Canada, although the number is rapidly nearing that total, but they are not chiefly where he says they are, which goes to prove is lack of information which can be considered in his other statements.

The remarkable development os Saskatchewan he ascribes to the energy and enterprise of the American settler. It is very true that they are in a large measure responsible for it, but it must be remembered that there are three or four Canadians and Britishers in the West for every American, and they have all had their share in the development. It is true that American capital has come to the West much more freely than has British capital, and the Canadian people very much regret the lack of appreciation the British capitalist shows in the Canadian investments.

The building of the railways has been a great aid in the development of the country, and this has been possible not because the Laurier government adopted the protectionist plank of the Macdonald platform, but because they worked out a tariff along common sense lines, producing the maximum of revenue with the minimum of burden on the people. The duties have been very materially reduced, but reduced so as to increase and encourage trade,and as a result the revenue increased by leaps and bounds, enabling the government to build railways at a rate that the old protection system of Macdonald would never have allowed. The Laurier government is following out its policy of still further reducing the tariff and its revenue is ever increasing.

Canada has not the slightest wish to become an independent nation. It would have nothing to gain and all to lose by taking such a position. Canada has no desire to launch out as an independent nation among nations that for many years will be stronger, wealthier and more populous. The lowest motive of self-protection is against independence.

But Canada has higher aims than being an independent nation, ruling herself alone. Canada has hopes of being the nation within the British Empire that will rule the Empire and therefore rule the world. Her people see in the British Empire the greatest world power that has ever been or ever will be. They see in the development of the various great component parts of the Empire a power that must be the great dominating power of the world. Her people seeing her vast area, knowing her unbounded resources, realizing the bracing climate that breeds sturdy men and women, sure of the foundation of her institutions and the integrity of her people, they see the elements that are bound to make Canada the greatest the wealthiest, the most populous and most enterprising part of the whole Empire. What people with a prospect of ruling the world by remaining true to the British Empire would choose to become an independent nation ruling itself alone and having a divided influence in the world? Outside of the consideration of sentiments of loyalty and gratitude to Britain, of our common blood, language, institutions, laws, literature and history, a common inheritance ,we believe Providentially given and humanly indivisible ; outside of the belief that committed to the British Empire is the peace of the world, and to its care is given the task of leading the world to its glorious destiny; outside of all these considerations, the Canadian people believe that their best interests from what may be called the selfish, practical standpoint, are not in annexation, not in independence, but in the development of a great nation within the British Empire.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE

Will Be Held in This City on October 10th, 11th and 12th

Peterborough is to have another Missionary Institute. This announcement will be gladly received by all who had the privilege of attending the very successful institute held two years ago. The committee appointed by the Young People's Union of the city to arrange the programme has been most successful, and a large attendance is assured. The dates are October 10, 11 and 12. Mr. J. Lovell Murray, M.A., successor to Prof. Harlem P. Beach, as Educational Secretary of the Student Volunteer movement has kindly consented to come, and will give one or two addresses. He is a man of wide experience, of world-wide travel, and will be a great help to the success of the Institute. Other speakers are Rev. Dr. Rankin, of Toronto; Rev. Canon Tucker, L.L. D.; Rev. Dr. J. G. Brown, Rev. A. E. Armstrong, M.A., all favourably known to Peterborough audiences. Mission study classes will be held each day, and a number of missionaries who are home on furlough, will be present, giving the Institute the inspiration of their presence and messages. The Mission Study Classes include all strangers within our gates, led by Mrs. F. C. Stephenson of Toronto. The challenge of the city by Rev. J. A. Miller, M.A., of Toronto. South America, by Rev. Mr. Mitchell of Bolivia. Other countries will be under consideration. A noted figure at the Institute will be Mr. G. Whitefield Ray, F.R.G.S., missionary and Government explorer, author of "Through Five Republics on Horseback." Delegates will come from the surrounding towns, and a most successful Institute is looked for. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 10, 11, and 12, should be set apart in our programme as given up to the Missionary Institute. All societies from outside points should kindly send in names of delegates at the earliest possible date.

LONG LOST CHILD

Girl Carried Away by Angry Father Recovered After Ten Years

Special to The Examiner.

NORTH YAKIMA, Wash., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Hubert Harris, a sixteen-year-old matron of this city, held in her arms to-day the fainting form of her mother, Mrs. Rose McDonald, whom she had been told was dead. The mother had not seen the daughter, Rosella, for ten years, since the time her husband, Joseph McDonald, picked up their sixteen-year-old daughter and left her in Anaconda. Since that time Mrs. McDonald had little money, and had been unable to conduct a thorough search, father and daughter having been in various towns in Washington and Canada. McDonald prevented communication between the mother and child. He told Rosella her mother was dead, but she had begun to doubt it lately. Mrs. McDonald had been partially supported by her son, Captain John F. Fawcett, who is in the Philippines, and in addition worked as a nurse. She found a clue as to her daughter's whereabouts by reading in a newspaper that McDonald had refused to recognize the girl who eloped last spring with Hubert Harris, and at once came here, where mother and daughter were reunited.

GOOD-BYE TO BEAUTY

It is good-bie to beauty when kidney derangements set in. The skin becomes hard and dry and the form wastes away and becomes emaciated. One cannot be too watchful and the safest way is to keep the kidneys, as well as the liver and bowels, healthy and active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. This ensures pure blood and a healthy digestive system.

RABBIT INTRODUCED HIMSELF TO A BASEBALL GAME

MEDIA, Pa., Sept. Pitcher Jack Krause of the Upland team should play in phenomenal luck for the rest of the season. There is anything in the rabbit superstition of ball players.

In a practice game at Media League Club grounds a rabbit jumped out of a clump of grass and scurried across the diamond. Krause, who was endeavoring to catch a ball thrown in from the outfield, did not see the rabbit, but before the ball arrived the little beast jumped into his hands.

Thinking he had the ball, Krause threw the rabbit to the second baseman to catch a runner. The baseman "ducked" and the rabbit made its escape.

Kingston Ball Team To Play Here On Saturday

The game will be called at 3 o'clock, at Riverside Park. Kingston are running a special train and will bring 200 supporters.

THE MAKE OF CHEESE THIS SEASON GREATER THAN LAST

From Farm and Dairy.

The make of cheese throughout the season has been greater than that of a year ago. Early in September, according to Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, factories in Eastern Ontario were averaging about one-half a cheese per day more than for the same period the year before. The total receipts of cheese into Montreal however, are not as large as they were last year. The increase is true of Eastern Ontario. The shortage in Montreal receipts is caused by a decline of cheese production in Quebec. This shortage is caused by the large number of cheese factories that have shipped cream to the States.

CREAM SHIPPING

Some 25 cheese factories in Eastern Ontario have turned over to the shipping of cream or the making of butter; this goes to offset the increased make of cheese. Indications are that more factories will turn over to shipping of cream unless prices of cheese advance. The prices offered by United States dealers net the farmers considerably more than can be secured from cheese factories—probably 10 to 15 cents a cwt. more than cheese factories. They offer $10 to $20 a ton for cream and the farmers have the skim milk returned except where casein is manufactured.

At the time of Mr. Publow's visit to Montreal during the first week of Septomber, the cheese that were arriving were not equal to previous shipments. Buyers, however, were unanimous in saying that the average quality of the cheese for the season has been better than that of a year ago, which indicates that there has been an improvement.

PROSPECTS FOR HIGH PRICES

The prospects are not brilliant for high prices for cheese. It is highly probable that cheese will not go extra high—not over 11½ cents, at any rate. There are lots of New Zealand cheese offering on the markets of Great Britain and the English make is said to be large. More favorable conditions, however, have not prevailed in Ontario during the past 25 years for a larger output for the remainder of the season than is now anticipated. Pastures, owing to the favorable conditions for growth caused by abundant rainfall, have not been better in years. There is every indication that cows from this time forward until late fall will not want for abundant forage.

CREAMERIES

Creameries are making more butter than they did last year. And, after all, the question of output largely hinges on pastures and fodder supplies; practically the same conditions exist for butter as in cheese except that as the cool weather approaches the farmers or producers are more given to making the butter up at home rather than taking the milk or cream to the creamery. The butter produced in Eastern Ontario practically all goes to supply the home trade. Very little or any of it is exported.

FEATHER EATING

From Farm and Dairy.

My fowls have become addicted to the habit of feather eating. How can I prevent it?—A. G. L., Leeds Co., Ont.

Feather eating is due to lack of exercise. It is most common where fowl are kept in crowded quarters. The habit is usually confined to one or two birds. Unless the birds are very valuable the best thing would be to kill them. Where the bird is sufficiently valuable to warrant treatment I would advise you to try feeding some salt in the mash or soft feed and pare the beaks of the birds addicted to the habit, with a piece of glass. Pare down close until the raw part of the bill begins to show through. We have found that the best remedy however is to kill the birds.—M. C. Herner, O.A.C., Guelph, Ont.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

But I'm not going to marry his family; I'm going to marry him," I heard a girl protest the other day when her mother objected to the man she was going to marry, on the grounds that his family was not a desirable one.

"If I marry John we shall live where his work is—a hundred miles from her. So what difference could his family possibly make?"

I've heard that argument, "I'm not marrying his family, I'm marrying him," a good many times before and it seems to me there is just one answer to it.

You ARE marrying his family—IN him.

There are some people who believe heredity has the most powerful influence on what we become, and as many others that environment does.

Remember that the influence of the family is made up both of heredity and environment.

Now please don't think that I mean a girl should refuse to marry a man because some member of his family had gone wrong or because there was some family skeleton, or anything like that.

That isn't what I'm trying to say at all.

What I mean is that I believe a girl ought to think a good while before she decided to marry a man whose family atmosphere was not congenial to her, because, although she might take him very far away from it, she would still be marrying in him the product of that atmosphere.

In every family that is a family unit at all, there is apt to be a certain fixed standard, a certain unchanging set of ideals and desires and inclinations.

For instance, in one family the point of view is a habit of considering money and show the measure of life.

At their dinner table the talk runs like this:

"What do you think—the Browns have bought a new car that must have cost at least $4,000."

"The Jones' are blossoming out lately. Mrs. Jones went by here to-day in the handsomest white suit with a whole lot of Irish lace on it."

"Just think, Harry Smith says they stopped at ——, and that's the most expensive hotel in Atlantic City."

"Mother, the new girl in school has a real gold watch. Can't I have one for Christmas?"

Isn't it very nearly inevitable that the son of this family will have the family point of view that the be-all and end-all experience is to have money, or at least to appear to have it?

And suppose he marries a girl who has been brought up in a family where the point of view is a love of books and education and simple things—isn't it likely that their ideals and desires and admirations, products as they are of such widely different points of view, are going to clash?

Perhaps they will amalgamate and produce a generation with a more cosmopolitan point of view than either, you suggest.

Perhaps.

But I did not say you should not marry a man whatever his family was.

I simply wanted to show you that no matter how far from them your lines might lie, you were nevertheless marrying his family—IN him.

If you are willing to do that, that's your affair.

Only just don't make the mistake of thinking you aren't doing it.

INSANITY TO BE DEFENCE OF SELF-CONFESSED SLAYER

Spencer to be Tried Sept. 19---Counsel Says His Client Is Not Able to Tell Right From Wrong.

IN HANDS OF ALIENISTS

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 13.—Bertram G. Spencer, rated by many criminologists the most remarkable (self-confessed) murderer of the year, will face trial on Sept. 19 on the charge of killing Miss Martha B Blackstone, a Smith College graduate, last March.

The confessed murder was the culmination of a career as a burglar of nearly two years in which Spencer had successfully entered the homes of prominent residents and at the point of a revolver had relieved them of money, jewellery and other valuables.

The burglary in which Miss Blackstone was killed and Miss Harriet Dow wounded was an unusually daring operation, even for Spencer, who entered the Dow home at 8 o'clock in the evening and when Miss Blackstone screamed, shot and killed her.

Spencer's capture was like the climax of a melodrama. In the burglary preceding the visit to the Dow home he dropped a locket on the reverse of which were the initials "B. G. S." and inside were pictures of his mother and sister.

The locket did not come into possession of the police until after the murder. Within forty-eight hours Pinkerton detectives had fastened the crime upon Spencer so convincingly that Spencer made a clean breast of his entire career.

CLERK BY DAY, BURGLAR BY NIGHT

With Jekyl-Hyde cunning, he had been a painstaking clerk by day and a burglar by night, he admitted. The prevalent opinion at the time of the arrest and confession that Spencer's trial would be a mere formality on the way to the chair now appears to have been a misconception.

Col. Charles L. Young, Spencer's attorney, says that his client is not only insane but is a victim of a peculiar strain of insanity—that he does not know the difference between right and wrong and did not at the time of the murder of Miss Blackstone. Arguing further along this line, Col. Young makes the deduction that if Spencer did not know it was wrong to kill Miss Blackstone it is not right for the commonwealth to take Spencer's life.

There are indications that Spencer is in accord with his counsel's views. He pulls his hair, wrings his hands and moans continually in his cell in the York Street jail. On one occasion an attendant played checkers with him in the early morning hours to calm a brain-storm. Rumors have been heard that Spencer was on the verge of collapse, and there are unsympathetic citizens who aver that the psychological moment for an utter collapse will be when Spencer takes the stand on trial for his life.

The comment of Springfield newspapers already is to the effect that if Spencer breaks down completely a postponement of the case or his commitment to some institution for the criminal insane will be necessary.

While sympathy depicts the pitiable plight of Spencer's wife, his mother and sister, there are thousands of well balanced citizens whose perspective includes another picture—a grief that of the aged parents of Miss less obtrusive but none the less real—Blackstone, alone and lonely, whose comforts have been restricted by the loss of their daughter's income as well as their happiness for ever blighted by her death.

It is unlikely, however, that public sentiment for or against Spencer will enter into the outcome in any appreciable degree. The legal fraternity is agreed that his fate rests almost wholly with the verdict of the alienists who have had the case under advisement for several weeks.

Talk is heard that Spencer may be allowed to plead guilty to murder in the second degree, which would carry with it life imprisonment instead of the death penalty. The District-Attorney's office naturally is silent, but the prevailing opinion of the bar is that a second degree pleading is out of the question and that the District-Attorney will demand that Spencer be condemned either to the electric chair or the madhouse.

ARRESTED AS THIEF, SAYS HE WAS ONLY PRACTISING

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Elmer Grant, a good-looking, well dressed youth of fifteen, went out yesterday afternoon to get what he called "a little practice in detective work." He visited several apartments at No. 965 Second Avenue, explaining he had been sent to look after bad boys.

Mrs. Maria Rafaelli welcomed him into her flat, showed him her children and sang their praises. When he left Mrs. Rafaelli missed her pocketbook, which had been lying on the sideboard. She rushed after him and Grant ran into the arms of Patrolman Ryan.

"Do you make a habit of this little game?" asked Magistrate Freschi in the men's Night Court last night.

"Two or three times before I've done it," replied the youth. "I am ambitious to become a detective, and thought this would give me practice.

"Did you fancy it was necessary to become a thief to qualify as a police officer?" demanded the Magistrate.

"Well, yes, I suppose most of them are that," returned Grant. He was held until his parents could be interviewed. They live in Elmhurst, L.I.

"No one questions the honest motives of those who advocate local option, or prohibition — not even we who brew Regal Lager. But the temperate folk who use Regal Lager as a daily beverage for health's sake, know how mistaken is the idea that as pure and tonic a drink is an intoxicant.

DREADING AN OPERATION HE TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

Special Wire to the Examiner.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Tortured by an intestinal disorder and in dread of an operation which he had come to this city to undergo, Samuel F. Inness, forty-six years old, head of the firm of Drake, Inness & Co., shoe dealers of Charleston, S.C., shot himself in the right temple in his room on the fifth floor of the Hoffman House Saturday morning.

His Brother, C. A. Inness, who had accompanied him here and occupied a room on the ninth floor, awoke about 7.30 a.m. with a premonition that something was wrong, and, going down to his brother's room, he found him lying dead on the floor by the side of the bed. He always carried a revolver, his brother said, and the weapon lay near him.

"It is a marvel how he managed to crawl out of bed after shooting himself," said the physician who was summoned; "death must have been instantaneous."

Coroner Winterbottom gave his brother permission to take the body back to Charleston.

Samuel Inness was unmarried. He and his brother and Dr. Wilson, his family physician, came to New York five days ago. He had long been a sufferer, and Dr. Wilson had finally advised him to come to New York and be operated upon by a special as his only chance of recovering. But he had a great dread of it, and brooding over it aggravated his suffering.

Mr. Inness enjoyed a large income from his business, his brother says. So far as known he left no writing of any kind.

BOTH WIVES OF POISON SUSPECT DIE SAME WA

Illness Ascribed to Ptomaine Poisoning—Each Carried Insurance in Name of Husband.

ANALYSIS UNDER WAY

Examiner Special.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Karl A. Badsing, a confectioner thirty years of age, who is held by the police because it is suspected that both his wives died from poisoning, will not know the character of the evidence against him until an analysis of the vital organs of his last wife, Mabel Reid Badsing, is made by Dr. Walter Haines of the Rush Medical College. It was Dr. Haines who was instrumental in convicting Hyde, the Kansas City poisoner. Here are points of similarity which have developed in the investigation of the deaths of the two women:

Both were taken sick after eating and their illness was ascribed to ptomaine poisoning.

Both were attended during periods of their illness by their mothers, under whose care they improved. Relapses and death followed departure of the mothers in each case.

The attending physicians were puzzled in each instance by the mysterious relapses when the patients appeared to be on the road to recovery.

Badsing carried insurance on both of his wives, made payable to himself.

At the death of his first wife he was paid $1,000. He had $2,000 on his second wife. This has not been paid.

In both cases doctors issued death certificates for ptomaine poisoning.

DEATH OF FIRST WIFE

In October, 1905, Badsing married Mary McConnell. Two years later she was taken ill and Dr. O. M. Holiday was summoned. She was apparently suffering from ptomaine. Her mother was called to nurse her, and soon she seemed to be on the high road to recovery. Mrs. McConnell returned home. The patient had an immediate relapse and a few days later died. The McConnell family believed the death was a natural one, and Badsing continued to live with his mother-in-law until he married Mabel Reid June 14 of this year. He induced his new bride to take out two $1,000 policies. They were made payable to Badsing and he paid all the premiums promptly. July 18 the young bride was seized with convulsions. Dr. J. A. Gessing and Dr. Martin Lukens were called. They diagnosed the symptoms as ptomaine poisoning. Dr. Lukens says:

"The patient informed me that she ate considerable canned corn and ice cream. She said the corn had a bad taste, but later ate more of it. She was stricken about 3 o'clock in the morning. I ordered her on a liquid diet, but later discovered that she was taking solid foods. I gave strict injunctions to her mother that no solid foods should be given to her. She improved, but later there was a relapse, and she died. I think death was caused by ptomaine poisoning."

The doctors in both affairs hesitate to go into details, as they expect to be called as witnesses before the Coroner.

INSURANCE COMPANIES SUSPICIOUS

Upon the death of his last wife Badsing attempted to collect the $2,000 insurance. The suspicions of the insurance companies were aroused, and they began an investigation. While this was in progress, early in August, Badsing heard of it. He sold out his confectionery business and went to Indiana. The trail of death led the detectives to the suspicious circumstances involving the death of his first wife. The body of Mabel Reid Badsing was examined ten days ago and preparations made for a chemical analysis. The police were then called in by the insurance companies. Badsing was lured back to the city by a message stating that the insurance companies were ready to pay the policies. He was arrested in one of the insurance offices.

Badsing stoutly maintains his innocence. He has been subjected to the third degree, but all efforts of the police to make him admit that he is in any way guilty have been baffled. The case rests no upon the result of the findings of the chemists. If poison other than developed internally in the form of ptomaines is discovered, the body of his first wife will be exhumed and subjected to the same analysis that the organs of his second wife are now undergoing.

TRIED TO BREAK UP A WAKE

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13. — Two drunken men tried to "break up" a Hoffler wake Friday night in No. 784 Eighth Avenue, and were fined $5 each yesterday in the West Side Court. They called themselves Charles Hoffler of No. 506 West Forty-fifth Street and Joseph Gardner of No. 375 West Forty-eighth Street.

William Jones, sixty years old, died suddenly in his bathroom last Tuesday night. His funeral was postponed because his widow was too ill to attend it. Friday morning she died.

The wake was in progress at 1 o'clock yesterday morning when Hoffler and Gardner appeared. They were so drunk that they were not admitted. They returned in an hour and their drunken persistency so angered the dead couple's son-in-law, Patrick J. McLaughlin, that he ejected them. There was a moving fight up Eighth Avenue to Forty-ninth Street, where Policeman McGowan of the West Forty-seventh Street station arrested Hoffler and Gardner.

APPRECIATIVE REMARKS

The farewell testimonial, which was held under the auspices of the Temperance and Moral Reform League, to Rev. J. G. Potter, in the school room of the Charlotte Street church last night, was largely attended. Every seat was occupied and eager faces were lifted up to hear the last words to be tendered to a man who is dearly beloved, and who will be greatly missed by all, namely, Rev. J. G. Potter.

The meeting was opened by Mr. Lees, acting chairman, by the singing of two hymns, after which a president, successor to Mr. Potter, was elected. Mr. Keith moved that Mr. Hussard, who was unfortunately absent, should be future president of the Moral Reform League of this city. The motion was seconded by Mr. Neill. The result is that Mr. Hussard will now occupy the responsible position of President.

The chairman, Mr. Lees then arose and made a short speech, in which he expressed his regret at losing so dear a friend as Mr. Potter, also, he said that when he was praising Mr. Potter, he felt that he was praising one of his own family. He regarded Mr. Potter more as a brother than a co-worker. He spoke of the length of time they had known each other. He said that he had known Mr. Potter before the people of Peterborough did and before Mr. Potter ever knew them. He knew him at the University and always noted him for his extreme kindness and the self-denial that he displayed, always ready to fill a place where any person was in trouble or need. He devoted himself to the work in great earnestness and Mr. Lees expressed his surprise at the way Mr. Potter could hold out and work as hard as he did along this line. Mr. Lees then said that the Temperance League had prepared an address for Mr. Potter. It was put forth, and read, as follows:

To Rev. J. G. Potter, Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Friend,—We gather to-night as citizens of Peterborough to say farewell, and to express to you our heartfelt gratitude for the great services you have rendered our community.

We realize that our city stands on a higher moral plane as a result of your untiring energy and inspiring leadership.

The greatest foes of hearth and home, the greatest enemies of civic righteousness and civic government have been dethroned from a place of control, and though still enjoying a legal existence are furtively awaiting their final defeat. For this great measure of success, we, as citizens, are profoundly thankful.

We feel your departure will be a great loss to us, but we also realize that the good seed of inspiration and ultimate victory you have so faithfully sown will bring forth its hundred-fold harvest. To the various speakers of the evening we have delegated the expressions of regard felt by every Christian church and Society in our city.

As a slight token of our regard we ask you to accept this purse and trust its golden coins may symbolize in some measure the worth, esteem and love we desire to express.

You carry with you our earnest prayers and good wishes for success and happiness in your new field of labour.

Presented by the City Temperance League, on behalf of the citizens of Peterborough.

R. LEES,
Vice-President.
A. BROWN,
Treasurer.
A. B. CUNNINGHAM,
Secretary.

Mr. Potter was then presented with a purse of gold, by the Temperance League, on behalf of the people of Peterborough. The presentation was greeted with great applause from the people.

Mr. Potter replied with an address, which, it is to be regretted, all the people of Peterborough could hear, but, in part, is as follows:

He said he could not find words to express his appreciation of their kindness, and thanked them sincerely for their esteem and the intense interest which they showed in the temperance work that was undertaken. He said he did not expect, and had no anticipation of anything like was then taking place, and he felt that he would rather step away quietly from the city, only that it would be cowardly to do so.

Mr. Potter then went on to say that every man should feel it his duty to do all that he could to quell the liquor traffic for the sake of those whom it destroys, even for the men who sell it, as it is a bad business. He said that liquor brightens no corner and has no place in the word that is any good. "I have no spirit of enthusiasm to work up," he remarked, "I was brought up to feel it my duty to do all I could in the temperance line. My mother was a temperance worker. She would go out in the middle of the night and save drunks from the verge of destruction, until she was given the name of 'police matron'; and when we told her she could not stand it, she only replied that it was better to wear out than to rust out." Mr. Potter said he would be here for a month before the next local option vote would be taken, if the people so desired it. I will always be delighted to help all I can," he said. "I want the people to remember that they have a mortgage on me for one month before the local option vote is taken." He expressed his sincere thanks for the interest they showed and said that he felt that he was unworthy of the applause they gave him. "Let us look at the conditions at the last effort made; look at the changes that are taking place at the corner of Brock and George streets, also Charlotte and Aylmer streets, and places in other quarters of the city show that Peterborough will be a much better city when the saloons are removed. Let us look forward to a better day when Peterborough will be a better city." He also stated that many people were sure that local option will carry with a large majority next time. He ended by thanking the people for their expressions of esteem.

Rev. Mr. Webb, representing the Baptist denomination, said it was not the first time he had arisen to speak good words of Mr. Potter, yet he felt that the people have a debt to pay to Mr. Potter, and if they did not say what they felt regarding him there would be a lot of debts to pay. Mr. Webb said: "We have a man as our guest here to-night, who gave his body, if not his soul, at the time of the local option campaign." He stated there was no man who could down Mr. Potter on the subject he was advocating.

A very appreciable selection entitled "British to the Core," was rendered by Mr. Downie.

Rev. Mr. Coon, representing the Methodists, next spoke. He expressed his regret at having to say goodbye to one beloved so much. He also was pleased to see the manifestation of the good work that was being carried on, and glad to see the people working so harmoniously. He also stated that he was sorry that Mr. Henderson was absent. He assured Mr. Potter that he had a warm spot in the hearts of the Methodists, and that he did not believe that Mr. Potter had an enemy amongst the Methodists. He closed by wishing him success and God speed.

Rev. Mr. Pogue then delivered an address which was very much appreciated. He said it was the third or fourth time he had spoken about Mr. Potter. He said: "It is sometimes said that ministers have no right to take part in public affairs. "If ministers have no right to vote and such like, I would like to know who has. No man contributes more in this line, if he is a true man, than if he is a true preacher. The city will be poorer when Mr. Potter has gone."

Rev. B. J. Keith then made a short speech, in which he stated that it would be a great pleasure to hear of the success of Mr. Potter in his new field of labour.

"Don'ts" For Housewives Who Want Pure Milk

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Secretary Wilson's Agricultural Department has furnished more ammunition for the fight now being waged throughout the country for pure milk and an improvement of the sanitary conditions surrounding its delivery to city homes. The Agricultural Department offers the following list of instructions to housewives.

Buy your milk in bottles.

Don't set out an open dish overnight, for the milkman.

Never let the sun shine on the morning's milk. Put it in the ice-box as quickly as possible and keep it there.

Carefully wash the mouth of the bottle before pouring out the contents.

Serve the milk in the original bottle.

If you have to buy milk in an open vessel, keep the vessel covered; expose the uncovered milk as little as possible; never keep it uncovered in the refrigerator.

Keep the flies away from it.

These are more of the "don'ts" and instructions, which, if carefully followed it is believed will undoubtedly decrease the mortality from typhoid directly traceable to milk and its unclean handling.

The great dangers surrounding the use of milk in the home are summed up by George M. Whitaker of the Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington as follows:

In placing it in unclean vessels;

In exposing it unnecessarily to the air;

In failing to keep it cool up to the time of using it;

In exposing it to flies.

The Agricultural Department joins the cry of "save the babies" which is inducing activity in every large city of the country to bring about milk purity.

LEAP FROM CLIFF KILLS DAUGHTER OF A BANKER

Examiner Special.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 13.—Leaping from the top of East Rock, the precipitous hill that stands sentinel over this city, Miss Grace Burt, daughter of John I. Burt of the New Haven Savings Bank, committed suicide today. She died in Grace Hospital some time afterward from her injuries.

With her aunt, Julia Palmer, the young woman went walking this afternoon. The two strolled around Lake Whitney and then, at Miss Burt's suggestion, started for East Rock, on the summit of which there is a summer house. At the base of the hill the aunt declined to go any farther, saying that the climb was too much for her strength.

Proceeding up the steep slope alone Miss Burt reached the top. Selecting a spot where there is a sheer fall of a considerable distance, the girl jumped. Her body fell until it struck a projection, whence it bounced to another jagged spear of rock that stuck out from the main mass, then it lodged on a shelf just below.

The girl's leap had been witnessed by her aunt and several others. The police were summoned, and some of them crept down the face of the rock and carried Miss Burt to the top. She was still conscious and begged the police to let her die, as she was in great pain. Then she became unconscious and remained in that condition to the end. Her skull was fractured, and there are many other injuries. Temporary mental derangement due to illness is given as the reason for her act.

Carried From Taxi-Cab, Dying Man Refuses To "Peach"

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—There was a mysterious shooting in the Stag Hotel, No. 32 West Twenty-eighth Street, early yesterday as a result of which a man lies dying in New York Hospital with bullet holes in his head and neck.

The owner of the Stag Hotel is Dan Mulcahy, known as "Dan the Dude." The manager of the place is "Chick" Tricker, a prizefighter. The first the police knew of a shooting was when Police Lieutenant Dempsey, of the West Thirtieth Street station, saw three men run from the hotel, carrying an unconscious man in their arms. Dempsey started for the men, but they hurled the unconscious man into a waiting taxicab and leaped in after him. The chauffeur put on speed and was off like a flash, going west.

Dempsey boarded another cab, and there was a mad race for several blocks, and then Dempsey's cab lost the trail. Thinking the cab with the unconscious man was making for Bellevue Hospital, Dempsey went there. No such cab had come into Bellevue.

Dempsey went to the station house just as the telephone rang, and New York Hospital asked that the police be sent there at once. It was learned at New York Hospital that a taxicab dashed up to the door about 1.30 o'clock and that an unconscious man had been carried into the receiving room by three men. No sooner had the wounded man been placed on a bench than the three men bolted through the door. They got into the taxicab and disappeared.

When the man was revived he said he was Rocco Merino, No. 212 West Thirty-fourth Street. He said he didn't know where he had been shot or who had shot him. He said, further, that he did not know the names of the men who had brought him to the hospital. Told that he would die before the day was out, Merino said: "Well, if I do it is my death, not yours. I will die game. You can't make me peach."

MARRIED IN BUGGY

Kansas City Couple Have a Novel Wedding Ceremony

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 13.—With the bride seated beside the Justice in the buggy and with the groom sitting on the judicial knees and holding the bride's fingers with one hand and the reins with the other, the marriage ceremony that united William E. Ginn and Mary J. Hoffman on Admiral Boulevard was "informal" in the superlative.

"Now kiss the bride," demanded Judge Edwin S. McCrary, Kansas City's newest Justice of the Peace, who, though he may be a bit informal at times, still has regard for the proprieties.

The man in the judicial lap leaned over and kissed the woman in white. A half hundred people along Eighth boulevard stared.

"I pronounce you man and wife," said the Justice. "Would you like to be taking the first lap of your honeymoon drive past my office?"

CONUNDRUM SOCIAL HELD AT APSLEY

Under Auspices of Ladies' Aid Society a Great Success

Examiner Special.

APSLEY, SEPT. 12.—The threshing machines are almost a thing of the past. Farmers are pleased with the yield of grain.

Mr. Alex. McIlvena and his friends spent a very enjoyable evening at the creek last Monday. They purchased chickens from Mr. T. G. Eastland and had a roast.

The Ladies Aid Society held a conundrum social on the town hall grounds on Sept. 2nd, which was a grand success. The admission fee at the gate was 2c. per foot, according to the height of the person. As they paid they were given a bill of fare, written in conundrums. They then passed on to the tables and ordered their meal, some obtaining an amusing one, not having much knowledge of riddles. The ladies had a canteen erected on the grounds, where fruit candies, ice cream, etc., were sold. After tea a splendid programme was given in the temperance hall.

There being quite a variety of cooking remaining the ladies decided to have a 10c. social on the Monday evening following, which also proved a success. Both socials included, the proceeds were about $40. The ladies deserve great praise for the many dainties that were provided.

THAW WORKING ON PLANS TO GAIN HIS FREEDOM

Spends Several Hours Daily With Lawyers—Mother Preparing to Apply Soon For Habeas Corpus Writ.

IS GUARDED CLOSELY

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—In the Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminal Insane, Harry K. Thaw is making elaborate preparations to fight for his liberty. The slayer of Stanford White is working several hours every day with a staff of legal experts under the direction of Clarence J. Shearn, and within two months it is expected he will be taken from the asylum on a writ of habeas corpus.

Thaw's confinement has been tightened since the hospital authorities learned, it is alleged, of a plot to rush the prisoner from Fishkill to Connecticut in a high power motor car.

"Thaw is sane. It will be a matter of only a few months until he is a free man," said Henry J. Rice of the Shearn law office to a reporter for The World yesterday. "Thaw can never again be tried by a jury and there will be enough proof to show that the man is not a maniac. It is up to the State to prove him insane. They never can do it."

Mr. Rice has been closeted with Thaw every afternoon while Mrs. William Thaw, the prisoner's mother, has been offering suggestions on which to get additional proof of his sanity. Every affidavit obtained from the nurses and attendants is carefully read by Thaw before he allows it to be set aside for use in the courts.

SAYS THAW IS WORSE

While Thaw and his lawyers were mapping out their plan for his release the doctors at the hospital told the reporter that the prisoner would never gain his freedom. They regarded the affidavits given by employees of the institution as valueless, and said they had observed his condition every day and could find nothing to show that he has improved.

"If Thaw had recovered his sanity we should make a report to the State, and then he would be allowed his freedom," said Dr. Amos T. Baker, assistant superintendent of the hospital. "The man can prepare as many affidavits as he chooses. He is under constant surveillance, and beyond allowing him to confer with his lawyers and his mother we have nothing to do in the matter.

"Our duty is to watch the condition of patients, and the minute we find any have entirely recovered we take our reports. If Thaw were sane he would not be here. Whatever affidavits he may prepare or obtain will have to be taken before a Supreme Court Justice, who must decide on the value of such testimony."

An attendant who has been with Thaw since he was placed in the asylum said the prisoner had not shown any signs of improvement. He denied that the attendants who had been closely associated with Thaw had made affidavits to prove his sanity.

"I accompanied Thaw to New York and am with him every day," said this attendant. "He is getting worse instead of improving. Thaw is very nervous, and it seems that there is little hope of his getting out of here. We all feel sorry for his mother, but it is against the rules to accord him any but regulation privileges."

KIDNAPPING PLOT DENIED

Mrs. William Thaw lives in a cottage at Fishkill Landing, where she and her lawyers spend many hours in consultation after the conference at the hospital. Mr. Rice, who has been detailed by Mr. Shearn to prepare the affidavits made by the attendants and those given at former insanity proceedings with the minutes of the trials, is at the hospital every afternoon from 2 until 5 o'clock.

Immediately after Thaw takes his seat in front of the desk in the consultation room which is now used by him exclusively as an office, Mrs. Thaw is ushered into the room. Then the papers are arranged and every technical point in the volumes of testimony is discussed.

Besides the lay testimony several alienists will testify and an effort will be made to show that Thaw never suffered from any form of paranoia. The lawyers have given particular attention to errors made in presenting insanity testimony at previous hearings.

"We will show that Thaw was found not guilty of murder at his last jury trial and that he was committed to Matteawan after alienists had examined him," said one of the [illegible] "Then we will contend that [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] insanity, [illegible]

Whose Body Was Found

Expert, Who Said the Remains Found In the Cellar Were Those of Belle Elmore, Is Forced Under Merciless Examination to Qualify His Statements — Miss Leneve Is Steadily Failing In Health.

London, Sept. 15.—Under shrewd and merciless cross-examination yesterday by Attorney Arthur Newton, Dr. Pepper, the Government analyst, practically repudiated much of his former testimony, and admitted that it was impossible to determine the sex of the remains supposed to have been the body of Belle Elmore Crippen from an anatomical study of them.

Pepper's admission leaves the question of the body's identity dependent upon a few strands of hair found in curlers near the body, another lock of hair found knotted in a man's handkerchief, and the remnant of a woman's underwear.

The evidence of the hair, however, was rendered practically valueless by Pepper's admission that the hair found in the curlers was dark, while that in the handkerchief was light and much shorter than that in the curlers.

Pepper testified that the person who removed the viscera of the body must have been both a student of anatomy and a clever surgical operator, as the work equalled that of a professional surgeon.

Pepper added that the scar on the body, by means of which the prosecution is also trying to prove the identity, was probably old.

"What makes you think the scar resulted from an operation?" Newton asked.

"Because from the nature of it, and its position, it could hardly have come from an accident," Pepper replied.

Dr. Pepper earlier in the day admitted that when he first saw the remains of the woman supposed to have been Belle Elmore Crippen, he thought they were animal remains. It required close inspection, he said, to determine that they were remnants of a human body.

After Pepper left the stand, the hearing was adjourned until Friday.

Miss Leneve is rapidly breaking down. Her periods of elation yesterday were always followed by moments of depression. That she is on the verge of a nervous collapse was shown by her convulsive actions, which she made every effort to hide.

Was Struck By Train

J. W. Morwood of Welland and James Lloyd of Stratford, While Crossing Trestle Near Jordan, Ont., Try to Step Out of Way of Approaching Train—Mr. Morwood Had Only Retired Two Weeks Ago.

St Catharines, Sept. 15.—Stepping aside to avoid a freight train coming from the west yesterday towards this city, J. W. Morwood of Welland and James Lloyd of Stratford were struck by express train No. 5, running at a high rate of speed in the opposite direction, death being instantaneous. The men had been walking along the Grand Trunk tracks from Jordan to Vineland, and were on a very high trestle midway between the two stations when the accident occurred. Their bodies were thrown with great force against the freight train and frightfully mangled.

There was little trouble in identifying the Stratford man from the contents of his pockets, but it was some time after the accident that the other body was identied as that of Mr. Morwood. He had been in business in Welland for about a quarter of a century, and only two weeks ago retired. He was on his way to visit his sister, Mrs. Fry, at Vineland, when death overtook him. At Welland he was one of the most prominent citizens, and was highly respected. H. R. Morwood of the law firm of Gorman & Morwood, is a son.

Dr. J. M. Jory, coroner, decided to hold no inquest, but will go to the scene of the fatality to examine for himself into the facts. The trestle is the property of the railway company, and, while quite generally used, the men had no business there.

The Public Has Right

Hot Discusion Occurs at Trades and Labor Congress at Fort William Over Resolution In Favor of the Forcible Abrogation of Agreements In Order to Make Way For Public Ownership.

Fort William, Sept. 15.—After a strenuous session yesterday morning the Trades and Labor Congress adjourned for the day to take a trip on the harbor and to visit the Canadian Northern grain elevators. The congress' solicitor, J. G. O'Donoghue, Toronto, read his report yesterday morning, which was referred to a special committee. The following resolutions were dealt with yesterday morning:

An amendment to the Lemieux Act to make it illegal to approach conciliators by 'phone, letter, personally or by any other method while the investigation was going on, was voted down.

To appeal to the Minister of Militia to prohibit military exercise and drills on Labor Day. Some delegates said this was becoming prevalent and deprived labor men from participating in Labor Day demonstrations when they desired.

To seek the enactment of a law making it difficult for petty thieves to sell carpenters' and other mechanics' tools to pawnbrokers and second hand dealers. The resolution asked that the seller prove his identity as owner of the tools before he can dispose of same. Another to establish a monthly magazine under the auspices of the congress.

A perennial resolution introduced by Socialists, making it prohibitory for union men to enlist in the militia, was voted down.

To enforce the Ontario Act referring to running boards on street cars.

The resolution that provoked a lengthy and heated discussion was as follows: "That provincial laws be enacted which will enable the public to take over and operate any public franchise utility if at any time the people so decide, irrespective of any existing franchise previously granted."

The two main opponents to this resolution were Alphonse Verville, M.P. and S. L. Landers, Hamilton. They argued that labor organizations believed in keeping agreements inviolate, and it would be placing the labor congress in a ridiculous light to ask for legislation to violate agreements.

At least a score of delegates spoke in favor of the resolution and denounced Messrs. Verville and Landers. They argued that a corporation should not be considered as being aggrieved when a franchise was taken from it. It squeezed the people when it had a chance, and should be given a dose of its own medicine. Some argued that the law permitted public franchise corporations to expropriate, irrespective of the choice of the owners and the same right should revert to a municipality and political division. The resolution carried with but the two opposing votes.

Teddy a "Vulgar Blusterer."

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 15.—The annual meeting of the permanent committee of the Young Egypt party, the aim of which is autonomy, opened yesterday, and afforded an opportunity of which several Egyptians availed themselves, to attack former President Roosevelt, because of his speeches at Khartoum and London. Among the epithets applied to the colonel were "Vulgar blusterer" and "self advertiser." The committee sent a telegram to London demanding the immediate evacuation of Egypt by the British Government. A message was also sent to the Khedive of Egypt asking for the re-establishment of the Egyptian Constitution.

Lashed Girl Prisoner.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 15. Women's clubs and a number of civic organizations of Atlanta are preparing vigorously to prosecute Supt. Fanning of the Fulton County Convict Camp, for the lashing of Anne Clare, a young white prisoner.

He admits that he administered 110 lashes with a heavy strap, because, he says, that was the only way he could silence the woman.

Met Death on the Tracks.

May See the Fight Pictures.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 15.—It looks now as if the Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures would be shown in St. John after all. An outside concern is seeking a license, and the mayor intimates rather plainly that he will not interfere in the matter, although some time ago he refused to grant a license to local parties to show the pictures.

The Pope Is Ill.

Rome, Sept. 15.—The Pope is seriously ill, and consultations are being held by his physicians regarding his condition. It is said that worry over reverses which the church has sustained recently in Spain, France, Austria and Germany has caused his sickness. A complete rest will be ordered by his doctors.

New Lighthouse Steamer.

Ottawa, Sept. 15.—The Department of Marine has decided to call the new boat for the lighthouse and buoy service in the Montreal district, the Dollard. Tenders are now being invited. The steamer will be of steel and 175 feet in length.

WHITNEY STATES VIEWS.

Wants Preference With England on Chamberlain Basis.

London, Sept. 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In consequence of his alleged desertion, by his views here, on Canada, Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, has given an interview to The Standard, recapitulating his views on imperial questions.

Sir James Whitney urges the desirability of Canada establishing herself in the British market and strongly deprecates any reciprocity arrangement with the United States. The accusation that he favored a policy which would raise the cost of living in England, he styles scandalous misrepresentation. He would have nothing to do with any policy having that affect, but he is unable to see any possibility of any such result. Canada could supply wheat as cheaply as the United States and the Argentine, and the refusal of Britain even to discuss the proposals for imperial preferential trade are deplorable and may well prove disastrous.

Dealing with the strong desire of Canada to weld the Empire on the strongest lines, Premier Whitney said "We don't care whether you make free trade or tariff reform the basis for your part for commercial arrangements. But for goodness sake let us stop drifting and agree to sail a definite course. The only live imperial policy before us is that enunciated by Chamberlain. Let us get around the table and discuss it as business men, as loyal sons of the fathers by whom our splendid heritage was won. If free traders cannot see their way to make the Chamberlain policy a subject of discussion, let them produce an alternative policy of their own. We will examine that and anything to make a step forward, anything to prevent a backward movement which may naturally occur.

New Ships for Canadian Lines.

London, Sept. 15.—The C.N.R. next week opens a weekly service between Bristol and Montreal. The Volturno, with accommodation for 1,500 steerage passengers, is to be put on the St. Lawrence route.

Emigration is to be better catered for by the various lines, who are also being urged to pay attention to the question of better communication with Newfoundland.

The Cause

of Eye Troubles is usually not disease, but defect in the structure or muscles of the Eye.

Consider the incessant work of the Eye, the instantaneous and exact adjustment demanded that sight may be always equal, single and ready to every change in position, distance and light. The nerves compel and control the mechanism in these instant adjustments. The mechanism may be defective, that is—

There may be defects in the structure, or focus of one or both Eyes;

The Muscles may be imperfectly balanced, so that both Eyes do not work in harmony;

There may be inability to focus for close work;

There may be strain through overwork, abuse, poor lights, bright reflections, etc.

An examination will tell you just what condition your Eyes are in.

"THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracey, (Copyrighted)

"Then why are you standing here? It is so cold. You will surely make yourself ill."

"I was wondering if I might see Mr. Brand," came the desperate answer, the words bubbling forth with unrestrained vehemence.

"See my father?" repeated the girl. She took thought for an instant. The lighthouse-keeper would not be able to leave the lamp for nearly three hours. When dawn came she knew he would have many things to attend to, signals to the Land's End, the arrangement of supplies, which he had already mentioned to her, and a host of other matters. Four o'clock in the morning was an unconventional hour for an interview, but time itself was topsy-turvy under the conditions prevalent on the Gulf Rock.

"I will ask him," she went on hurriedly, with an uncomfortable feeling that Mrs. Vansittart resented her judicial pause.

"Thank you."

To the girl's ears the courteous acknowledgment conveyed an odd note of menace. If the eyes are the windows of the soul surely the voice is its subtle gauge. The more transparently simple, clean-minded the hearer, the more accurate is the resonant impression. Constance found herself vaguely perplexed by two posting abstractions. If they took shape it was in mute questioning. Why was Mrs. Vansittart so anxious to revive, or, it might be, probe, long-buried memories, and why did her mobile smile seem to veil a hostile intent?

But the fresh, gracious maidenhood in her cast aside these unwonted studies in mind-reading.

"He has so much to do," she explained. "Although there are many of us on the rock to-night he has never been so utterly alone. Won't you wait inside until I return?"

"Not unless I am in the way," pleaded the other. "I was choking in there. The air here, the space, are so grateful."

So Constance passed her. Mrs. Vansittart noted the dainty manner in which she picked up her skirts to mount the stairs. She caught a glimpse of the tailor-made gown, striped silk underskirt, well-fitting, low-heeled, wide-welted expensive boots. Trust a woman to see all these things at a glance, with even the shifting glimmer of a storm-proof lantern to aid the quick appraisement.

As the girl went out of her sight a reminiscence came to her.

"No wonder I was startled," she communed. "That sailor's coat she wears helps the resemblance. Probably it is her father's."

Then the loud silence of the lighthouse appalled her. The singing had ceased, or was shut off by a closed door. One might be in a tomb as surrounded by this tangible darkness. The tremulous granite, so cold and hard, yet alive in its own grim strength, the murmuring commotion of wind and waves swelling and dying in ghost-like echoes, suggested a grave, a vault close sealed from the outer world, though pulsating with the far-away existence of heedless multitudes. Thus, brooding in the gloom, a tortured soul without form and void, she awaited the return of her messenger.

Constance, after looking in at the hospital, went on to the service-room. Her father was not there. She glanced up at the trimming stage, expecting to see him attending to the lamp. No. He had gone. Somewhat bewildered, for she was almost certain he was not in any of the lower apartments, she climbed to the little door in the glass frame.

Ah! There he was, on the landward side of the gallery. What was the matter now? Surely there was not another vessel in distress. However, being relieved from any dubiety as to his whereabouts she went back to the service-room and gave herself the luxury of a moment's rest. Oh, how tired she was! Not until she sat down did she realize what it meant to live as she had lived, and to do all that she had done, during the past four hours.

Her respite was of short duration. Brand, his oil-skins gleaming with wet, came in.

"Hello, sweethert, what's up now?" he cried, in such cheerful voice that she knew all was well.

"That was exactly what I was going to ask you," she said.

"The Falcon is out there," he replied, with a side nod toward Mount's Bay.

Constance knew that the Falcon was a sturdy steam-trawler, a bull-dog little ship, built to face anything in the shape of gales.

"They can do nothing, of course," she commented.

"No. I stood between them and the light for a second, and they evidently understood that I was on the look-out, as a lantern dipped seven times, which I interpreted as meaning that they will return at daybreak. Now they are off to Penzance again."

"They turned safely then?"

"Shipped a sea or two, no doubt. The wind is dropping, but the sea is running mountains high."

He had taken off his oilskins. Constance suddenly felt a strong disclination to rise. Being a strong-willed young person, she sprang up instantly.

"I came to ask you if you can see Mrs. Vansittart," she said.

"Mrs. Vansittart!" he cried, with a genuine surprise that thrilled her with a pleasure she assuredly could not account for.

"Yes. She asked if she might have a word with you."

He threw his hands up in comic despair.

"Tell the good lady I am up to my eyes in work. The oil is running low. I must hie me to the pump at once. I have my journal to fill. If there is no sun I cannot heliograph and I have a host of signals to look up and get ready. And, a word in your ear, Connie, dear. We will be 'at home' on the rock for the next forty-eight hours. Give the lady my very deep regrets, and ask her to allow me to send for her when I have a minute to spare, some hours hence."

She kissed him.

"You dear old thing," she cried. "You will tire yourself to death, I am sure."

He caught her by the chin.

"Mark my words," he laughed. "You will feel this night in your bones longer than I. By the way, no matter who goes hungry don't prepare any breakfast until I come to you. I suppose the kitchen is your headquarters?"

"Is Pyne there, too?"

"He is laundry-maid, drying clothes."

"I think I shall like him," mused Brand. "He seems to be a helpful sort of youngster. That reminds me. Tell him to report himself to Mr. Emmett as my assistant,—if he cares for the post, that is."

He did not see the ready spirit of mischief that danced in her eyes. She pictured Mr. Pyne "fixing things" with Mr. Emmett "mighty quick."

When she reached the first bedroom floor Mrs. Vansittart had gone.

"I thought it would be strange if she stood long in this draught," mused Constance. She opened the door. The lady she sought was leaning disconsolate against a wall.

"My father—" she began.

"I fear I was thoughtless," interrupted Mrs. Vansittart. "He must be greatly occupied. Of course, I can see him in the morning before the vessel comes. They will send a ship soon to take us off?"

"At the earliest possible moment," was the glad answer. "Indeed, dad has just been signalling to a tug, which will return at daybreak."

There was a joyous chorus from the other inmates. Constance had not the requisite hardihood to tell them how they misconstrued her words.

As she quitted them she admitted to herself that Mrs. Vansittart though disturbing in some of her moods, was really very considerate. It never occurred to her that her new acquaintance might have suddenly discovered the exceeding wisdom of a proverb concerning second thoughts.

Indeed, Mrs. Vansittart now bitterly regretted the impulse which led her to betray any knowledge of Stephen Brand or his daughter. Of all the follies of a wayward life, that was immeasurably the greatest, in Mrs. Vansittart's critical scale.

But what would you? It is not often given to a woman of years, a woman of volatile nature, a shallow worldling, yet versed in the deepest wiles of intrigue, to be shipwrecked, to be plucked from a living hell, to be swung through a hurricane to the secure insecurity of a dark and hollow pillar standing on a Calvary of storm-tossed bewilderment, to be confronted with a living ghost.

Yet that was precisely what had happened to her.

Fate is grievous at times. This haven of refuge was a place of torture. Mrs. Vansittart broke down and wept in her distress.

CHAPTER X.

PYNE'S PROGRESS.

A primrose light in the east heralded a chilly dawn. The little world of the Gulf Rock bestirred itself in its damp misery at the news. The fresh watch, delighted by the prospect of activity, clattered up and down the iron stairs, opened all available windows, unclamped the door when Brand gave the order, and busied itself exceedingly with the desultory jobs which offered to so many willing hands.

It was now, by the nautical almanac, dead low water on the reef, but the strong southwesterly wind, hurling a heavy sea completely over the rocks, showed that the standards of war and peace differ as greatly in the matter of tides as in most other respects.

As the light increased it lost its first warm tinge. Steel gray were the sky and water, sombre the iron-bound land, whilst the whereabouts of the sun became a scientific abstraction. Therefore, the heliograph was useless, and Brand, helped by some of the sailors, commenced to flaunt his flag-signals to the watching telescopes on the far-off promontory of the Land's End. The Falcon, strong-hearted trawler, was plunging towards the rock when the first line of gay bunting swung clear into the breeze. And what a message it was in its jerky phrases—its profound uncertainties—for communication by flag code is slow work, and Brand left much to an easier system of talk with the approaching steamer.

Chinook New York to Southampton—struck reef during hurricane—propeller shaft broken 78 survivors in lighthouse—captain, 201 passengers, officers and crew—lost with ship."

The awful significance of the words sank into the hearts of the signallers. For the first time, the disaster from which, by God's Providence, they had emerged safely became crystallized into set speech. Seventy-eight living out of two hundred and eighty who might have lived! This was the curt intelligence which leaped the waves to fly over the length and breadth of the land, which sped back to the United States to replace the expected news of a safe voyage, which thrilled the civilized world as it had not been thrilled for many a day.

Not a soul in the lighthouse gave a thought to this side of the affair. They were anxious to reassure their friends ashore, but, in their present morbid condition, they could not realize the electric effect of the incident on the wider world which read and felt with hearts to feel.

Even whilst Stephen Brand was signalling to the Falcon, with little bits of flags quickly extemporized as soon as she neared the Trinity buoy, newspaper correspondents ashore were busy at the telegraph-office, and the associates on the trawler were quickly transcribing the lighthouse-keeper's words wherewith to feed to excitement the sensation which the night had provided for the day.

Brand, foreseeing the importance of clearness and brevity, had already written out a full draft of his detailed message.

Faithful to his promise, Appleton was acting as signaller-in-chief on board the Falcon, so Brand might manipulate his flags as quickly as lay in his power, with chief officer Emmett reading the words at his elbow there was no fear that any mistake would be made by the driver.

The story, if condensed was complete. Beginning with an explanation of the liner's disablement, it dealt with her desperate but unavailing struggle to weather the reef, described Pyne's gallant and successful effort to get in touch with the lighthouse, the rescue of a fourth of those on board, the names of the survivors, and, finally, their predicament in the matter of food and water.

All this took long to tell.

Within the lantern, Mr. Charles A. Pyne, appointed supernumerary assistant-keeper, was burnishing brasswork as per instructions received. He little knew the use which was being made of his name by the tiny bits of linen tossing about on the exterior gallery. In such wise, helped by a compositor and dignified by headlines, does a man become a hero in these days of knighthood conferred by the Press.

Constance was scrutinizing the Falcon from the trimming-stage. Hearing Enid's cheery "Good-morning" to Pyne when that young lady raced upwards from the kitchen to catch a glimpse of the reported vessel she dropped her glasses for a moment

Secret of ood Pies

PIE CRUST, more than any other delicacy of the oven, ought to be tempting and appealing to the taste. You do not eat pie as a nerve tonic or to strengthen your appetite. You eat it for pleasure mostly.

Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour

You want it, of course, to taste good. At the same time you want the crust to be light, flaky, wholesome. Above all things you don't want it tough, indigestible and not safe to eat.

Now, pie crust properly made from OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is always good food, the absolute uniformity of this best of all flours eliminates failure entirely. You get the same delightful results every time—more healthful, digestible and nourishing than if made from ordinary flour.

And the reason is that ROYAL HOUSEHOLD having a larger percentage of high grade gluten, assimilates more readily and is more satisfying than ordinary flour, and comes from the oven flakier, more tender and more digestible.

Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour

Pies made from "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" are better and are better than pies made from other flour—much more delicious, better in every way.

Be sure to try "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" when next you make pies. It is the finest flour in the world not only for pastry but for bread and all family baking.

"OGILVIES BOOK FOR A COOK" containing 125 pages of tried and tested recipes will be sent free to any user of Royal Household Flour who asks for it.

SLEEP WAS IMPOSSIBLE

ALMOST DRIVEN TO DESPAIR UNTIL CURED WITH USE OF DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

No symptom of nervous prostration is more to be dreaded than the inability to sleep. Man can exist for considerable time without food, but without sleep, and the restoration which it brings, he soon becomes a mental and physical wreck.

When you cannot sleep and rest look to the nervous system and remember that lasting cure can only be obtained from such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which naturally and gradually restores the exhausted nerves to health and vigour.

Mr Wm Graham, Atwood, Ont., writes: "My wife had been ill for some time with nervous prostration and we had two of the best doctors we could get, but neither of them did her any good. She gradually became worse and worse, could not sleep and lost energy and interest in life. She was almost giving up in despair when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"From the first box my wife used we noticed an improvement and after using six boxes she is completely cured and as well as she ever was, eats well, sleeps well and feels fully restored. I cannot say too much in praise of this valuable medicine for I believe my wife owes her life to its use."

Every dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes to the formation of so much rich, red blood and is therefore certain to do you good.

At this season of the year, from nearly every home comes the savoury aroma of tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers, spices and vinegar, being in the process of manufacture into pickles, catsup and sauces for use during the year. No doubt you have heard of Mrs. So and So having such "luck" with her pickles. Have you ever thought that it wasn't luck, but perhaps a careful selection of materials? No doubt you know the importance of good tomatoes, but how about the spices and vinegar? Choate, of Warsaw, makes a specialty of pure goods and particularly spices and has only one quality of white wine vinegar, and that is the XXX brand.

During the past ten days he has been sorting up his stock to make room for extra large arrivals and as a consequence is daily placing on sale at reduced prices, goods of which he wishes to dispose quickly. He's not cutting legitimate prices; that's contrary to the principle of his store, nor does he charge you more than your neighbour, but in his system of experienced buying for cash he is constantly having advantages of which you get the benefit, though you may not realize it, as he does not always tell you.

"Co-operation, not competition, is the life of business." Try the co-operative principle with Choate of Warsaw.

WILD DEER KICKS MAN

He Tried to Capture It Single-handed and is Winner Now

Examiner Special.

SAN MATEO, Cal., Sept. 13th.—Carl Muller, a member of a party of politicians returning from Halfmoon Bay, tried to capture a deer single-handed near Aqua Lake. The deer kicked Muller on the chin, rendering him unconscious, and made its escape.

Five deer were in the road when the automobile party, of which District Attorney J. J. Bullock was a member, approached. No one in the party was armed, but Muller conceived the idea of capturing one of the animals alive.

He jumped from the automobile and sneaked up to the herd. As he got within striking distance of a young buck the animal let fly with his heels and caught Muller squarely on the chin. That ended the chase.

It was five minutes before the deer chaser could be resuscitated and the trip resumed.

The DAWN of a NEW LIGHT

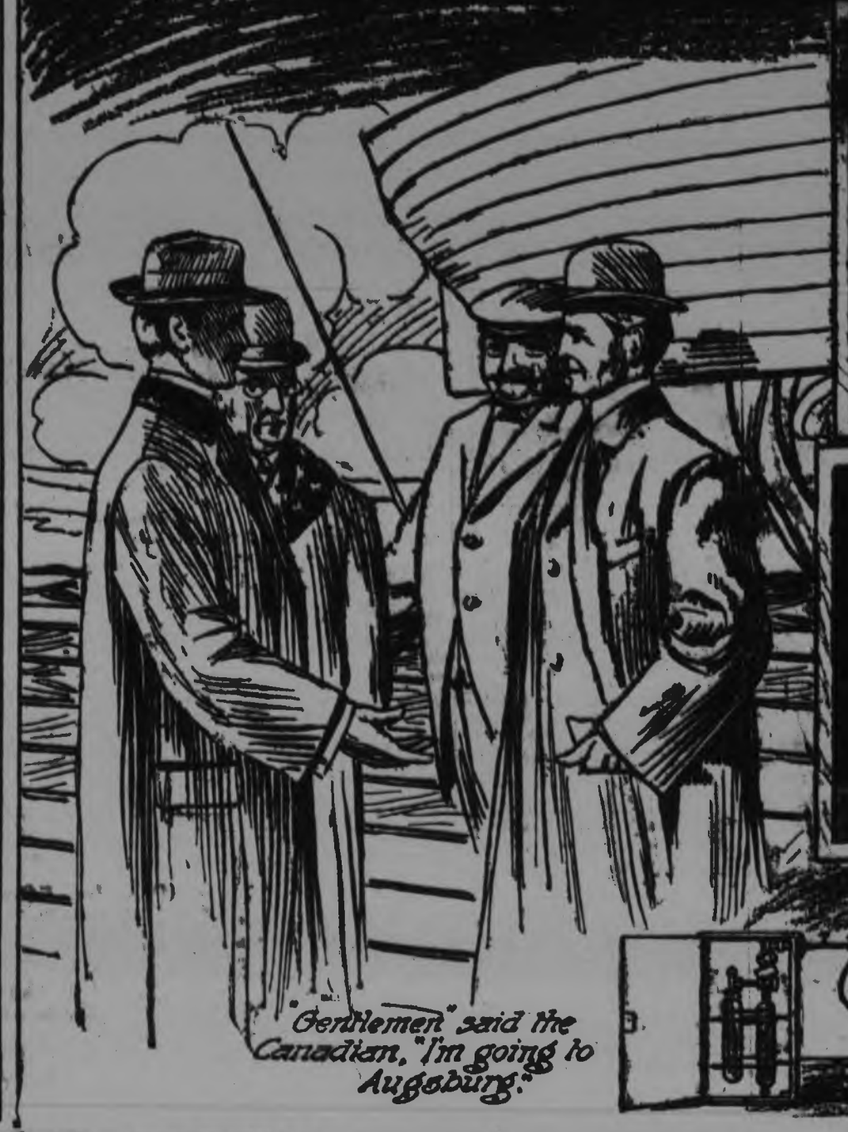
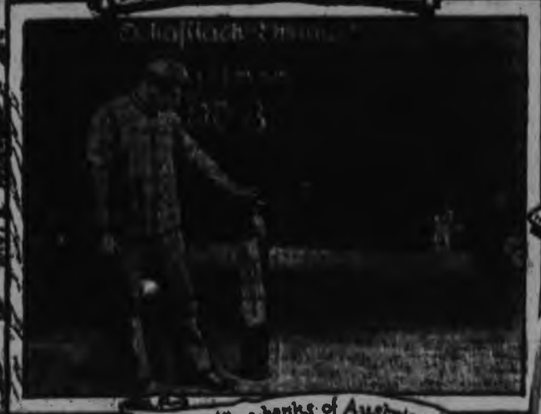
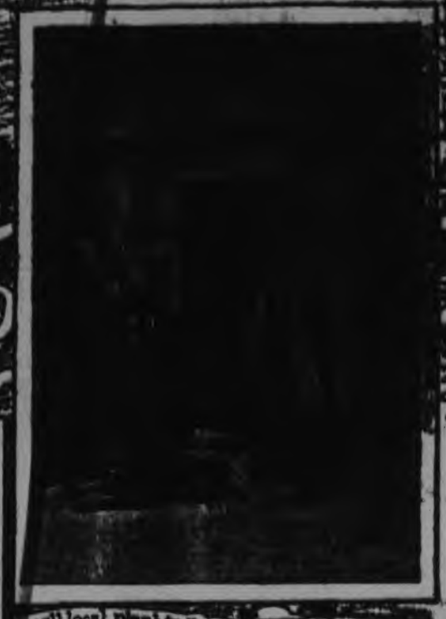
By J. Warman







NOTICE has been sent out by the Society of Chemical Industry of New York to men all over the American continent, to attend a lecture by Professor William Hallock on a new light that had been discovered, or rather invented by a German professor.

Professor Hallock, being head of the department of physics in Columbia University, had given much attention to illuminating methods. Among those who attended the lecture was a Montrealer.

The lecture by the learned Professor not only interested his hearers; it amazed them. Here was a new light, clear, clean and brilliant beyond anything ever seen. Only Coleman's sunlight could compare with it. The lecturer told how it had been discovered, how it was made, the cost, its uses and possibilities. To be sure there was no visible flame, save the light, but he, being specially interested, made them aware. The light had been in use in Germany, he said, for four years.

Finally he told the inventor's name and the city, Augsburg, where he lived and made his wonderful light. Instantly a number of his auditors drew notebooks and wrote down.

That night, when most of the audience had taken themselves to their respective hotels, the Canadian went down, booked for Germany and went to bed aboard ship. The steamer sailed away at dawn and the Canadian woke on the high sea, smiling up at the ceiling at the thought of being first in all Augsburg.

At breakfast, next to him, sat a fellow, he recognized as an acquaintance he had made the previous night at the lecture. After breakfast they strolled out on deck and bumped into another gentleman whom he recognized as a man who had made a note last night. While the three men laughed and chatted they were joined by a well-known Standard Oil man. Then they all laughed.

"Gentlemen," said the Canadian, "I'm going to Augsburg."

The three New Yorkers exchanged glances. One of them ventured the guess that they were all bound the same way. "And upon the same errand," another suggested.

On the way over the Canadian had planned his invention to buy the new light for America. He would be content to sell against each other the different countries. But now, in the light of what he had heard, he would be satisfied with a quarter interest, and it was agreed.

Upon their arrival at Augsburg, the four investigators put themselves under lock and key. They slept and ate for two days and two nights in the building where the wonderful light was made. No man was allowed to enter or leave the building. At the end of two days they knew how the light was made and what it cost to make it—in Germany. With the help of the oil expert they figured that it could be made even cheaper in America. At the end of a week they had convinced themselves that this was the cheapest and best lighting the world had ever brought the American rights.

When the New Yorkers sailed for home the Montrealer went over to Budapest, the beautiful capital of Hungary, where the new light was being made and used by the Government railways, for lighting their offices, stations and railway carriages. He talked with the railway officials and found them enthusiastic over the new discovery. The powerful headlights pierced the darkness and lit up the line for half a mile. He talked with the drivers on the Orient express, which runs between Paris and Constantinople. The one dread of these drivers for years had been the sleeping herds of sheep that haunted the Bulgarian hills or brooded around Belgrade. The new light showed them up.

Returning to Augsburg the Montrealer picked up the Canadian rights, then sailed for home—

[illegible]

[illegible] Professor Hallock stated that a 20-lb cylinder, costing about $1500, would supply sufficient gas to give a 50 candle-power light for four months, provided it was used four hours per day. The cost of installation is very small, and [illegible] installed there is no work of any [illegible] whatever attached to [illegible] the gas.

Blaugas is obtained from the distillation of crude oil, and in fact possesses properties calculated to render it safe under which to liquefies to 1-200th of its original volume. As a result the gas is then transferred into steel cylinders of sizes to suit the varying needs of the consumer, and in that form it is distributed with the facility of milk, kerosene, or any other commodity that is sold in general. Its specific gravity is about one-half that of water.

Although as yet practically unknown to the American people, Blaugas comes to us not as an experiment, but as a fully developed commercial product. In Germany it has been successfully used for all purposes for which gas is adaptable, for the past few years. There, as well as in Hungary, hundreds of railroad cars are equipped with Blaugas tanks, house and factory lighting is well established, and the rights for international coast lighting have been acquired. In addition, contracts have been closed for furnishing Blaugas to the Bavarian Government.

The National Contractor and Builder (New York) predicts that the welcome Blaugas receives from the consumer "will be a genuinely hearty one."

A plant for producing Blaugas has just been completed at Long Island City, and one at Montreal by the Canadian Company. If the new light proves as popular here as in Germany there will be scores of plants in Canada within the next few years and gas trains leaving the city daily will be as common as milk trains coming in. It is bound to be the coming light for small, new towns, summer homes, hotels and cottages. Blaugas will not freeze, neither will it explode.

It is not fair to Blaugas to speak of it as a competitor with electricity, acetylene, city gas or gasoline. Blaugas is in a class by itself. It will succeed because every housewife will be a walking advertising agent for it the moment it is introduced in Canada. She can 'phone the grocer for a two-pound cylinder, a five-pound cylinder or a 20-pound cylinder, as she wills. The meter-man will no longer tramp in over her clean kitchen floor. Moreover she can rest assured that she is not being "done" by a leaky meter. When she goes to the seaside she will not find the usual gas bill in the vestibule when she returns. Waste with Blaugas is impossible.

Every man in the freight department of every railway in the country will be a booster for Blaugas, because it will be a heavy shipper. At all centres such as Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Prince Rupert there will be a factory, and almost every train leaving these stations will carry Blaugas out along the line. Even farmers in the treeless west will use it, not only for lighting, but for cooking as well, because it is clean, and safe and cheaper than other fuel. It will be possible, according to Professor Hallock, to have in your house light equal to 50 candles for the infinitesimal cost of one-third of one cent per night, and burn it 4 hours. It is cheaper than ordinary bottled sunshine, if you had to pay for your bottles, and really that is what it is, for it comes nearer to sunlight than anything yet invented by man.

In case of a wreck on a railway the steel cylinders which hold this gas would be about as hard to "explode" as a yard of ninety-pound steel rail.

The light is a mantle light, and you can "blow it out," if you're from the country, and it won't hurt you.

The apparatus for the individual house is extremely simple and of low cost, and with these conditions prevailing it is easy to comprehend what a tremendous factor Blaugas is to become in the art of illumination, a field for which it is eminently fitted. Among its many uses may be mentioned the following:

The lighting and heating of railroad cars and vessels of all kinds, city residences, country houses, club houses, casinos, schools, churches, factories, public buildings and isolated villas; the illumination of streets, parks and playgrounds in cities, large or small, and for technical purposes in soldering, welding, etc., and the generation of great heat for any purpose.

Not alone is Blaugas available for all purposes for which ordinary gas is used, but it can be had at places where it is now impossible to secure a supply of gas because of the remoteness from the generating plant. This is likewise true in respect to electricity, which is not available for some localities because the consumption is not sufficient to either support a local central station or to warrant the installation of wires and poles over great distances.

The fact that Mr. E. C. Benedict, President of the Commercial Acetylene Co., is president of the American Blaugas Co., and the board holds such names as Judge Gerry, of the U. S. Steel Corporation, Theo. N. Vail, Pres. American Telephone and Telegraph Co., Theo. P. Sheets, Pres. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., General Chas. Miller, Pres. Galena Signal Oil Company; Howard Page, President Continental Rubber Co., and other equally well known men, show that there is something in Blaugas.

My own notion is that it will beat city gas as the telegraph beats His Majesty's mails.

Wonderful Wheat in answer to Prayer

The Star Wheat as it Grows. Where the Wheat had its Origin.

THERE is one man in the United States, at least, who believes that prayers are answered. He also believes, and will offer to show you proof, that the age of miracles has not passed.

In answer to the prayers of many years, he says, he has been rewarded with wealth—nothing less remarkable than a mysterious kind of wheat which grows in poor ground and yields many times as much grain as the ordinary varieties.

H. B. Stoner, a farmer of Fincastle, Botetourt county, Virginia, grows a wheat which, dozens government experts, yields two to three times as much as any variety grown in the country, which they acknowledge a wheat from an unknown source.

"A wheat from an unknown source." Mr. Stoner calls it "miracle wheat," and when you ask him whence it came he will look heavenward, and then tell you the following story:

During the Civil War the farm owned by him was devastated, the buildings razed and he was left in an impoverished condition. Year after year he labored, and there was small return for his work. The land was poor, and it refused to give a profitable harvest.

With implicit faith Mr. Stoner began to pray. He prayed that the Lord might show him a way to redeem his fortunes, and retrieve himself. He had a little girl, younger than himself, and he knew that, in case he died, she would be unprotected. Then two children came, and the farmer prayed the more devoutly and intensely.

Nearly four years ago, Mr. Stoner will tell you, the answer came to his prayers.

While plowing the land, in the spring of 1904, he observed a little green, luxuriant plant in the field. His son, then 6 years of age, rushed before the plow, and, with an exclamation of delight, fondled the green bit of grass.

"Let it be, please, papa," he pleaded. "I want this little bit of grass. Please, papa."

Mr. Stoner plowed about the stalk of grass, and forgot all about it. Naturally, Mr. Stoner carefully year sowed the seed, continuing to do this each year. For he realized he had discovered a phenomenal brand of grain. And each year his amazement increased.

That first year after discovering the plant he got 2000 grains. In 1906 he got sixteen bushels, and has now raised the crop of wheat, all carefully preserved for seed, to 800 bushels.

"The wheat, which came from an unknown source, has been grown in the nursery every year since that time, and also has been grown under field conditions the last two years, giving excellent results. The yield has been from two to three times the yield of other varieties grown on the farm under the same condition of culture, except the rate of seeding, which was two pecks to the acre, while other varieties were sown at the rate of eight to ten pecks per acre, which is the common practice of farmers in the vicinity.

"Milling tests have been made of this wheat, and its quality seems to be as good as, if not superior to, other varieties of winter wheat."

The average height of the wheat, according to the report, is four feet, four inches.

It is said that the Austrian government has secured an option on the wheat, and will buy a consignment of 90,000,000 bushels when this quantity shall have been secured. During the next year the seed will be distributed among farmers in Virginia and North Carolina, who will raise it, and preserve the seed, keeping the grain only for planting until the required amount will have been produced. By next fall, it is believed, 60,000 bushels will have been produced.

It is singular [illegible] wheat seed discovered near the spot where, many years before, Cyrus

Travels 3[illegible] Miles From Montana To Witness A Baseball Match

Examiner Special.

DES MOINES, [illegible]13th.—Few people would travel [illegible] miles to see a ball game, yet [illegible] the record of M. E. Milner, [illegible]na, Mont., who was in the [illegible] visiting his friend President O[illegible] Longwell, of Highland Park Coll[illegible] Mr. Milner is one of the largest [illegible] owners into Montana and is in[illegible]d in Des Moines by reason of t[illegible] that one of the boys he is edu[illegible] is attending Highland Park C[illegible]

It would seem "[illegible]do about nothing to some p[illegible] to travel practically clear acro[illegible] continent to see a ball game," [illegible] Milner. "But the fact is that n[illegible] appeals to me so much as a [illegible] of clean league ball. I was dis[illegible]ded that I did not get to see D[illegible]s play. I am going on to C[illegible] in the morning, and after a f[illegible] in there will go to New York a[illegible]nd the Summer lolling around [illegible]thing beaches for coons and [illegible] into town to see the ball g[illegible] in the afternoon. You see, out [illegible] we've got practically everything except major league ball games, and they're the greatest thing in the world to me."

But they are not the only things in the world to Mr. Milner, as his record shows. He owns seven large ranches in Montana, the smallest containing 8,000 acres. He went West a quarter of a century ago, lured to the trans-Mississippi region by reading Captain Mayne Reid's Western novels. He invested heavily in cattle and became known as one of the largest cattlemen in all the West. He rode the ranges himself and is as skilled a cowboy as there is left in the cattle country to-day. When the influx of settlers caused the cattle industry to disappear, Mr. Milner disposed of his herds and took to buying land and land script, and is to-day the largest land owner in his part of the country. He is known at home as "Governor" Milner, having the distinction to refuse the Democratic nomination for Governor at one time.

Fifty-Seven Years Of Age And Is Father Of Thirty-Four Children

Examiner Special.

Boston, Sept. 10th.—[illegible] A. Sears, of No. 19 Hillside avenue, East Dedham, is believed to have [illegible]paternity record which cannot be equalled in New England, if anywhere.

He is fifty-seven years old, and has thirty-four children; including four sets of twins; twelve of them already [illegible] and several have homes and children of their own.

He has been married twice. He had eighteen children by the first, Mrs. Sears and the second wife has brought him sixteen.

He is a Canadian carpenter and has been in this State about twelve years. He was married when seventeen years old.

When a Boston American reporter talked with Mr. Sears he was building a six-room addition to his dwelling.

"I need extra room for my family," he said, "and I am going to get them all I can. I like children. I was fond of them when I was a boy. I liked to play with other people's children before I had any of my own. I have had some trouble in bringing up my family. When you have children you must expect sickness in your home. Sometimes I was out of work. But I always managed to get along. And the only thing I regret is that all my children are not alive now. I never saw a time when my children did not have plenty of food and a good home. I have had to work hard to provide for them all, but it was a pleasure to me to work for my children.

"My youngest child is a four-year-old boy. I tell you it is a pleasure to me to get hold of that boy and play with him when I get through work. When a man has a large family he does not spend his money foolishly. Many couples are selfish. They will not have children because they want all the money to spend on themselves, and are not willing to give up any pleasures. But I never felt that way. I have had people say to me, 'You ought to be ashamed of yourself to have so many children.' But I always tell them that I'm glad of it and that I can hold my head higher than some that haven't got any.

The industrious carpenter from Canada picked up one of his children, a girl named Alice, and began to fondle her with pride.

"I would not sell the child," he said, "for all the money in the world. What is money worth to a man who has no child of his own to kiss and hug? I pity some people who have no children. They are old before their time. They have no one to work for.

"Why, I think of my children with every nail I drive. I think I am doing it for them. They are my fortune. It is better to have them than to have money. When you have a large family you never grow old. You play with little ones and they keep you young. I am the father of thirty-four children and have four sets of twins. But I'm so young that I ran in Labour Day in the fat men's race at the Hibernian picnic at Oakland Grove here at East Dedham. I'll bet that there are few men of my age as young as I am."

A Delightful Hair Dressing That Makes Hair Grow

Favourite With Men and Women the Country Over

There is a reason for the phenomenal sale of Parisian Sage in the Dominion since it was first introduced into Canada.

And the reason is plain to all. Parisian Sage does just what it is advertised to do.

Ask Wm. Mastill about it. He will tell you that he rightly guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

There is no reason whatever why any man or woman should fail to take advantage of the above generous offer.

But one thing that has made Parisian Sage so famous is its peculiar power to turn the harsh unattractive hair that many women possess into luxuriant and radiant hair in a short time. Women of refinement the country over are using it and it never disappoints.

I procured Parisian Sage and found that it was a great hair tonic and cleanser. I have used other preparations but Parisian Sage Cleaned the scalp, stopped all irritation, made my hair fluffy, silky, and left no trace of stickiness as some other hair tonics had." Mrs. Sarah Sanderhoff, 1403 N. Washington St., Owosso, Mich., June 25 1909.

Examiner Special.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 13th.—This is a story of a real merry widow and exactly 1,001 men. Each and every one of the 1,001 begged for a chance to marry her. The 1,001st man is the lucky one and the wedding will occur shortly.

The merry widow is Mrs. Rilla May Dike, a phone operator. It is questionable if Mrs. Dike ever saw more than a scant half dozen of the 1,001 suitors. But that did not detract from the ardor of their love epistles. They wrote from the north, the south, the east and the west. They were old and young men, tall and fat. They kept up such a bombardment that the pretty little widow was forced to leave her claim in South Dakota.

Mrs. Dike was formerly an Iowa girl. Ottumwa being her home. Three years ago she married, and with her husband went to South Dakota. He was killed in a wreck, and Mrs. Dike bravely faced the world and took up a claim.

She called her place Ottumwa, and it is still known by that name in South Dakota.

At the state fair in Huron, S.D., in 1908, Mrs. Dike was awarded the prize for being the prettiest young woman in the State. Newspapers devoted columns to her photo and beauty.

At first letters came by twos and threes, but finally the rural delivery man had to put on an extra mule to aid in hauling the mail out to Ottumwa.

Mrs. Dike has a bungalow on her 160 acres. There she opened and read every one of the proposals. Did she file them carefully away, tied with pink ribbons? Not Mrs. Dike.

Her house needed papering. Nothing would better serve for the purpose than a ton or two of love letters. Mrs. Dike plastered the walls and the ceiling, and used the photos for roofing and with the surplus built a chicken corral. Over all she pasted this large sign:

"Love letter shack. Tack new proposals on vacant space."

INVESTIGATION OF SHEEP AND WOOL INDUSTRY

From Farm and Dairy.

An investigation of the sheep and wool industry in the United Kingdom has been undertaken by the Live Stock Commissioner's Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. A committee of two men has been appointed and they are now pursuing their investigations in Great Britain. The personnel of the committee consists of W. A. Dryden, Brooklin, Ont., and W. T. Ritch, Manchester England.

The census of sheep in Canada reveals the fact that the Dominion as regards the number of sheep kept compares not at all favorably with other great agricultural countries of the world. Indeed, as compared with them it has permitted sheep-raising to become a somewhat insignificant phase of its agriculture, notwithstanding its great adaptability both as regards soil and climate for the growing of mutton and wool. In 1909 according to Agricultural returns there were in the United Kingdom 31,838,833 head of sheep, in the Argentine, 67,211,754 head, in Australia 87,018,266 head, in New Zealand 23,180,707 head while the latest returns for Canada place the number at not more than 2,705,390 head.

The reasons for the decline in the sheep industry in Canada have been the subject of much comment in various ways and while these need not be discussed here it may be well to state that the Live Stock Branch has had its attention very urgently directed toward the present unsatisfactory status of the business and in recognition of its importance to the country generally, has decided that the time is ripe for the Canadian Government to consider a comprehensive policy and to undertake definite and extended measures likely to operate toward the encouragement, improvement and development of the industry as a whole. To that end the committee, as above noted has been appointed.

Canada has wonderful possibilities and large opportunities in connection with development of its sheep population. The present investigations have been undertaken as preliminary to the adoption of a permanent scheme for the encouragement and upbuilding of the industry. In the belief that Canadian agriculture must of necessity suffer severely while sheep remain so few in number in the country, the Minister and his officers will not be satisfied until statistics show a return of at least 10 times the present estimate and until sheep raising has established itself as a recognized factor in promoting the national prosperity.

THE APPLE PROSPECTS

From Farm and Dairy.

There has been no improvement in the prospects for apples during the month of August. The apples that are on the trees have grown well and there is a prospect for a medium quantity of very fine fall and winter fruit in all orchards that are reasonably well taken care of, according to the government report from Ottawa. In the orchards where the apples are not well cared for, the codling moth appears to have concentrated upon the few apples that are left. The scab is as bad as usual. There has been a change in individual varieties which will not seriously affect the general report. The Fameuse in District 4 will be much lighter than was anticipated, and of poor quality. Southern Ontario has harvested a fair crop, of good quality, of Red Astrachans. The crop of winter apples is very light. Only two correspondents in District 1 report a full crop of winter apples. Western Ontario will scarcely have enough apples for home consumption. A few sections, however, may export small quantities of rather poor sample.

The conditions north of Lake Ontario show no improvement in quality, but the quality is somewhat better than was reported last month. Georgian Bay District prospects show an improvement. No correspondent reports a full crop. In Eastern Ontario, the St. Lawrence Valley and the Eastern Townships of Quebec, a falling-off in the quality and quantity is reported as compared with last month. The crop of McIntosh Red, Fameuse and Alexandras will be below the average.

Nova Scotia and New Brunswick show no improvement, the crop of apples will be very light. Prince Edward Island will not supply home demands. British Columbia will harvest the largest crop in its history. The specimens in some cases are smaller than usual owing to the dry weather. In estimating the quantity of apples, it must be borne in mind that in no part of Canada are there so many orchards coming into bearing as in British Columbia, so that not only the yield per tree is above the average this year, but the bearing acreage has increased proportionately much more.

Girdle Empire With Cheap Cables.

London, Sept. 15.—At the conference of the Institute of Journalists, Robt. McMillan of Sydney, Australia, moved a resolution expressing the view that the time had arrived for binding the Empire together in a girdle with cheap cables.

Henniker Heaton, in supporting the motion, contended that the cables were now in the hands of operators of a cable ring. They should be bought out at the market price by the Governments of the world.

The first step was to call a conference of the postmasters-general of Europe and then another with the United States. The resolution carried. carried.

Fear He Has Suicided.

Detroit, Sept. 15.—The police were asked yesterday morning to find Geo. Millman, aged 22, a salesman from Toronto, who disappeared from his rooming house, Sixth street, Monday afternoon. Friends fear that he has drowned himself, as he was separated from his wife.

Died In Harness.

Leamington, Sept. 15.—Rev. Jasper Wilson of Hespeler, who was stricken with paralysis in the pulpit last Sunday, died yesterday morning.

Coronation June 21.

London, Sept. 15 Circumstantial evidence points to the date of King George's coronation as Wednesday June 21, 1911. This conclusion may be deduced from the fact that when the stewards of the Jockey Club, in fixing the date of next year's meetings, decided upon June 20, and the three following days for the Ascot meeting, they were privately instructed by Lord Marcus Beresford, who is to control King George's racing stable when the cessation of court mourning will permit him to remove his horses from the care of the Earl of Derby, to choose a different date. It was suggested that a week earlier, June 13, would meet with the requirements of the court.

When the arrangements for the coronation of King Edward were completed in 1902, it was decided that the ceremony should take place on the first Wednesday after Ascot.

Already the Earl of Norfolk is busily engaged in preparing a list of the "eligibles" for invitation to the ceremony in Westminster Abbey, and attending to the thousand and one other details in connection with the ceremony.

Tried to Smuggle Strikebreakers.

St. Catharines, Sept. 15.—It cost Moses Levinsky, supposedly a Toronto pedlar, a pretty penny to try and get two Buffalo tailors, Max Badiner and Benjamin Doctor, across the line into Canada. They wanted to go to Hamilton to act as strikebreakers. The two men were sent back by the inspector at Bridgeburg because they could not produce $25.

Meeting Levinsky in Buffalo, he took the men across on the ferry, but inspectors all along the border had been notified, and the three were immediately arrested and Badiner and Doctor each assessed $20 and Levinsky $100.

To Fool Suicides.

Pittsburg, Sept. 15.—At the twelfth annual convention of the National Retail Druggists' Association, in session here yesterday, an anti-suicide resolution recommended the restriction of the sale of carbolic acid to a mixture of one-third each, acid, glycerine and water—"a preparation that may be taken by would-be suicides in large quantities without causing death"—while another, having for its object the suppression of the "dope fiend," demanded that proprietary medicines containing cocaine, chloral, morphine, codeine and other drugs be sold only upon prescription.

Tried to Do Customs.

New York, Sept. 15.—Eugene Higgins, the millionaire carpet manufacturer of Yonkers, who ran foul of the customs authorities on Monday, when he returned from Europe, arrived at a settlement yesterday, by which he was allowed to pay the foreign value of the articles seized, plus the duties. In all, it cost him about $3,000 to regain possession of the goods for which he had paid originally $1,960.

Dr. Adolph Menn of Chicago, a passenger on the same liner, who fought Monday to declare jewelry appraised at $1,000, paid an additional duty of $70 yesterday on wearing apparel declared at $300, and on which he had already paid $18 at the pier, but his jewelry is still held by the Government.

Canada Scores Here.

EVERYTHING IN RE ESS FOR OPENING OF I STRIAL

Exhibition Park is To-day a Scene of nd Activity, Tents Springing Up Everywhere-- Flying and Exhibitors Busily Engaged Indicate To-morrow Will Mean---Prospects Were Never B and Attendance Record Will Go by the Boa

OPTIMISM FEATURE OF THE DIRECTORS' ON TO-DAY

Light to moderate winds, fine to-day, and on Friday, with stationary or a little higher temperature.

The probabilities indicate that the weather man is going to favour the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, which opens to the public to-morrow with the best in his repertoire. If the advance notices are lived up to on his part the success of the Exhibition of 1910 is assured.

To-day is "get-ready" day, and Exhibition Park has been a scene of activity since 8 o'clock this morning. The perfect weather lent itself to the aims of the directors and no better opening day conditions could be asked for. There was a steady stream of vehicles pouring into the grounds, as farmers from all parts of the district arrived with their exhibits. Superintendent J. J. Bennett and his assistants have been worked over-time to see that the displays were placed in the space allotted to them, but proved masters of the situation, and have everything now in good shape for to-morrow.

Everyone was busy when an Examiner representative dropped in at Exhibition Park this morning, but President Leary stopped long enough to say, with a broad smile, that the prospects never looked brighter. Certainly the first day never saw such a bustle on the grounds as was in evidence this morning. On the Midway, situated, as usual, just west of the main building, tents were springing up everywhere. Refreshment booths, dining tents, special exhibits, games of skill, amusement devices of all kinds were being erected, and by to-morrow afternoon there will be a veritable street, lined with amusements.

As one goes in at the main entrance the first display to attract attention will be the poultry exhibit just inside. The poultry will, as during the past few years, be housed in a huge tent, and the Directors in charge say that the display beats all other years.

The miniature railway, owned and operated by the Canadian Miniature Railway Co., is situated toward the centre of the Lock street end of the grounds, and has a pretentious plant, with a station, model engine and train of cars, with accommodation for forty passengers.

Special exhibits in tents are being arranged all along the grounds, near the main building, and on the west way. Local manufacturers, merchants and agents of outside firms evidently come to realize the importance of the Fair, and the advertising benefits of an exhibit there.

In the Main Building.

The main building is crammed [illegible] of attractive features and the exhibition visitor who does not spend some of the time here will miss a good deal. Unprepossessing as the building may be from the outside, the displays within are worth more than a passing visit. There is a splendid collection of amateur photography, paintings and drawings, while Tees and Mendel studios demonstrate the advances professional photography has made, by magnificent displays. The Brinton Carpet Company, J. J. McPherson, and the Quaker Oats Company are among the firms who have attractive displays in the main building. The showing of grain, fruit, home-made bread, etc., is of a nature to delight the heart of the housewife and tickle the palate of the true epicure. Upstairs the needle work display surpasses the best efforts of other years. Mrs. (Dr.) Gilchrist has a collection of wild flowers that should be seen.

Acrobats Are Here.

The Japanese troupe of acrobats who are to give a sensational performance in front of the grand stand this afternoon arrived, and the bright little men attracted a lot of attention on the grounds this morning. The Japanese troupe, marvellous performers as they also here ready for to-morrow's events, there will be no hitch in the programme in front of the grand stand. In connection it may be mentioned that the track in front of the grand stand was oiled this morning and there will be no blinding clouds of dust to affect the vision of the spectators.

Knox church and All Saints' church are both represented on the grounds with a refreshment booth, and the latter with a dining tent. Rev. H. J. Keith and Rev. H. R. Trumpour were both hard at work this morning when the Examiner reporter happened along.

The dining tent privileges are in charge of All Saints' church and the enterprise of the ladies will undoubtedly be rewarded with complete success. Certainly the quality of the meals that are [illegible] served, should guarantee a liberal patronage. The ladies of the All Saints' tent together in the morning and were unanimous in praises of the menu provided.

INDIAN BURIAL PLACE DISCOVERED IN SMITH

Workmen Engaged in Securing Gravel From a Mound on Bank of Lake Katchewanooka, Uncover Skulls, Arrowheads and Other Relics of Ancient Races.

A DISCOVERY THAT IS OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE

Workmen engaged in procuring gravel from a loaf-shaped mound in Smith township, for construction work on the dam at Burleigh Falls, have encountered parts of human skeletons. The mound is on the Smith side of the river, about a mile and a half from Burleigh. The workmen pushing a drift in the river side of the mound at a depth of 18 feet, encountered the remains. The mound has long been regarded by many as an Indian burial place. The remains discovered prove the correctness of this supposition. Among the remains were found jaw bones, still containing teeth and one skull, from its size, indicated that the man whom it surmounted, must have been of gigantic stature. From the relation of the skull or skulls found to the other bones, it seems that the bodies to which they belonged, had been buried in a sitting posture. From this fact and the depth at which the remains were found, it is thought they represent burials of a prehistoric race, that inhabited this continent previous to the Indians known to us. It is probable that, if this is the case, excavations nearer the surface of the mound, would reveal the remains of what is known as "intrusive" burials as contrasted with those made at a much earlier period, and naturally found at a greater depth. With the human bones were found stone axes, chisels, arrow heads, etc., such as are commonly found in Indian burial tumuli. It is suggested, in archaeological interests, that the government take steps to prevent further excavation for commercial purposes.

THE EAST CITY PEOPLE ASK FOR A PARK

Petition Signed by One Hundred Ratepayers Sent to City Council —Discussed by Special Parks Committee Last Night—Options on Property at Hunter and Mark Streets.

TO LOOK INTO MATTER

The special Parks committee held a meeting last evening, but nothing of a definite character transpired. It was decided to endeavour to have the options on certain properties extended and in the meantime the committee will look into other sites. Those present were Ald. Graham, chairman, Mayor Morrow, Ald. Turner, and Bradburn.

A petition was read, signed by a large number of the ratepayers of Ashburnham, asking the council to buy the property at the corner of Mark and Hunter streets, for park purposes. The petition pointed out the necessity of a park in that part of the city. The Clancy estate offered an option on their portion of the property of $2750 and Mrs. McGregor placed an option on her share of it at $2000. This property includes a frontage on Hunter street of 220 feet and a depth of 192 feet.

"How are they going to pay for this property?" Ald. Bradburn asked.

Ald. Turner thought it would be best to decide on the purchasing of the property first. He believed that the location in East City was a desirable one, and was a piece of property that would for all time be valuable to the city. If the time ever came when fire stations were required in the sub- Ald. Turner was sure it would be a suitable sight. The park could be maintained at a very small expense. Ald. Turner was sure i twould be good buying. The committee looked at the old drill shed property and it was quite undesirable.

"Well, as I understand it," said Ald. Bradburn, "a place is needed for tired pedestrians going to and from the lift lock. How about Nicholls Oval. There is plenty of open space there and room to rest."

"It is too far away," Ald. Turner said. "It is five blocks away."

Ald. Bradburn didn't think it was too far away.

"I don't know where the money will come from," the Mayor intimated.

Ald. Turner moved that the city council arrange to buy this property for park purposes. There was no seconder to his motion.

"I think that if you are going in to buy parks," remarked Ald. Bradburn, "I think it would be best to buy Mr. Best's property and make one large park, where the boys can play baseball. You see them playing on the roads all over the city now."

Ald. Turner moved, seconded by Ald. Bradburn that the committee endeavour to have the option on these properties extended until February the first next, with a view to purchasing them and submitting a by-law to the ratepayers in connection with the same. The motion was carried, after which the committee adjourned.

THE BOY SCOUTS AT EXHIBITION

The Scouts, under the leadership of Scout Master D. Oscar Waring, will parade from the Armouries at 2 o'clock, headed by the 57th Regimental Band, and will march to the grounds. The Scouts are asked to be on hand sharp on time.

SAYS DETECTIVES ACTED AS GHOULS IN OPENING GRAVE OF SISTER-IN-LAW

Special Wire to the Examiner.

CHICAGO, SEPT. 15—That the United States Secret Service men acted as ghouls, opened the grave of his sister-in-law, and ripped open her shroud to recover the money he is supposed to have had, is one of the charges made by George W. Fitzgerald, formerly sub-supt. of the United States Treasury here, who is locked up, accused of the theft of one hundred and thirty seven thousand dollars from Uncle Sam. Fitzgerald declared that his family have been subjected to unthinkable espionage and that he is absolutely innocent. The district attorney says the evidence against the prisoner is positive.

RESCUED A MILLIONAIRE NOW GETS HIS REWARD

Special Wire to the Examiner.

MONTREAL, SEPT. 15. — When Capt. Eugene Turnavick, owner and commander of a fleet of fishing vessels on the Labrador coast, reached this city to-day, he received a cheque for a thousand pounds reward from Bartlett Coutts, a wealthy land owner of the Shetland isles. Last July, during a terrible storm off Labrador, Turnavick picked up Bartlett Coutts and his bride in their sinking yacht. They were on a honeymoon and ran into bad weather. Their crew of three were swept off the decks. The couple were clinging to the rigging when Turnavick saved them and sent them home.

Peterborough Canoe Co. Will Extend At Once---Request Granted By City

At a meeting of the Manufacturers' committee of the City Council last evening the request from the Peterborough Canoe Company for a small strip of land jutting out on King street in order that they might make certain extensions to their factory, was granted, the company to give in exchange, fifty feet of a right of way on a piece of property belonging to the company on the south side of King street, and on the east side of the railway, separating two pieces of city property. Those present were Ald. Gillespie, chairman, Mayor Morrow, Ald. Turner, Duffus and Bradburn. Industrial Commissioner Duggan and Mr. C. Rogers of the Canoe Company were also present. The company requires more floor space, and since their request has been granted, it is their intention to proceed at once with the proposed extension, the particulars of which have been previously announced in this paper.

Old Confederate Sympathizer Fights Men Who Tried To Shave Him

Examiner Special.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 13th.—Refusing to part with his long flowing whiskers, untouched by shears since Lee surrendered at Appomattox, Robert Dedman, eighty-six year old, stood off a corps of surgeons at a local hospital who desired to remove the beard in order to perform an operation upon Mr. Dedman's eye.

Mr. Dedman, who is a wealthy resident of Lawrenceburg, Ky., was brought to the local hospital some days ago for treatme . Explaining to the surgeons his reasons for refusing to be shaved, he said:

"When the war trouble broke out I was an ardent sympathizer with the Southern cause. I came in contact with a bunch of Yankees, and, as young men sometimes do, I talked too much, with the result that they chased me ten miles and in addition to shaving me, gave me a sound thrashing.

"I swore right then that a razor should never touch my face again till the South had won her cause.

"There doesn't seem to be much chance of this coming true, so I reckon you will have to get along without shaving me this time.

The surgeons gave in and the operation was performed, leaving the venerable old man's beard intact.

EARL GREY'S DANCING.

It is the cue of some straight-laced moral martinet, to demand the recall of Earl Gray for conduct unbecoming a Governor-General. Earl Gray visited incognito—as an ordinary tourist, and not as Governor-General—a part of Nova Scotia, and it must be confessed that he was gravely tempted. He called on a Mrs. Crawly, in Sydney, N.S., a lady 100 years old, who had no idea of the identity of her visitor. Seeing a violin hanging on the wall, Earl Gray told her that if she would play, he would dance. The spiritive centenarian rattled off "The Flowers of Edinburgh," and Mr. Grey frisked a hornpipe like a four-year-old. It is to the credit of our vice-regal ruler that so much of the kindlier and jollier part of humanity has survived the suffocating effect of gold lace and fuss and feathers. No matter how high we rise, or how low we fall, we carry some of the best traits of our humanity with us. A monotonous, unbending, and sustained sanctimonious serenity might suit a saint, but every day-humanity could not stand the strain without cracking at some point.

THE FISHERIES AWARD STANDS.

A despatch from the Hague states that the award of the International Court of Arbitration in the case of the Newfoundland fisheries became irrevocable and unchangeable on September 13th. Five days having elapsed from the promulgation of the award and neither Canada and Great Britain nor the United States entering a protest against the findings of the tribunal its award, ipso facto, becomes confirmed and binding.. It would not be expected that after such an exhaustive inquiry such a result would ensue. None of the parties got all they demanded, but the decision was doubtless just, and it was imperative that its conclusions should be respected. Canada and Great Britain came out of the ordeal pretty well satisfied, but the United States, or rather, perhaps, the special interests concerned, are by no means satisfied. But the discontent with the award did not go to the extent of the filing of a protest, which is prima facie evidence that the tribunal made a finding acording to the facts and the merits of the contentions advanced; for our United States friends are inclined to be tenacious of their rights or perhaps, to be exact, more insistent on getting the big end of a bargain than to submissively acquiesce if there is the least chance of securing a more favourable decision. The success of Canada and Great Britain is so important that we cannot be too grateful for the services which the custodians of Canadian interest in the controversy—Hon. A. B. Aylsworth, Minister of Justice, who prepared the case, and Mr. Ewan, who so successfully presented it at the Hague—have rendered us. A summary of the advantages Canada has gained by the award will be found clearly and concisely summarized on another part of this page.

THE LAWN COMPETITIONS.

It is not too late to refer to the lawn competitions, in which awards were announced on Tuesday, and the suggestions they involve. It is to be noted that the entries in the competition include only a very few if the hundreds of actually and potentially beautiful lawns in the city. This indicates that the range of the competition is too limited. The object of the Horticultural Society in holding these competitions, is assumed to be to stimulate taste in floriculture, and the care of lawns and premises. There is no doubt that they have had a large and wholesome influence in these directions, but the competition is too sporadic—not concentrated enough—to accomplish the real object to be aimed at, the general beautification of the city. More than once reference has been made to the excellent proposal of Mr. John Riddell, Homewood avenue, who suggests that better results would come from making the competition include streets, or sections of streets, in addition to lawns, if thought desirable. Thus there would be a rivalry and concentration of effort created that would be far more widespread than the competitions between individual and widely scattered lawns, with, as is now the case, frequent intervals of badly-kept lawns and untidy streets. The proposed form of competition would involve the neatness and tidiness of streets, which is now so sadly lacking. This competition would also bring pressure to bear upon the city authorities, and force them by the pressure of public opinion to do their share, which they do not now do, in making our streets tidy, and as they can be made, beautiful, as to surface, as they are in the matter of trees and abutting lawns. The Society should also urge upon the city authorities the restriction and removal of the weed nuisance. There are streets passed every day, two or three times, by two or three of our myopic aldermen kho fail to see the rank growth of weeds, waist high, that flourish on some parts of some streets. Vacant lots are literally cushioned with dense growths of weeds, flourishing in defiance of the police, and the law, and by-law enacted on behalf of their extinction. Instead of spending time and money and offering prizes to make parts of the city beautiful, let us enlarge our ideas and activities, and seek to promote a general co-operation as a step to general beauty of effect.

CONSERVATIVE TARIFF TURN-OVER.

(Winnipeg Tribune.)

If the persistenetly presented and unanswerable case that the settlers of the west placed before Sir Wilfrid Laurier in favour of wiping out the iniquitous tariff duties that have long been weighing them down and handicapping them in the race of life have borne no visible fruit with the premier and his followers in the press and in the ranks, it has certainly caused the Conservatives to sit up and take notice. This party, which was the author of the National Policy but which, to do it justice, yielded to public opinion twenty years ago and lopped off some of the "mouldering branches" has ever since the advent of the "Liberal" administration stood patiently by, like a stubborn, stupid, old mule, and accepted all the jibes of its opponents (suffering at the same time the fatal public prejudices of being unalterably linked to the damning policy of high protection), jibes indulged in by a party that was in reality practising a worse and less excusable brand of protection than it practised, considering that the industries were in their infancy when there was some excuse for fiscal assistance. And, in addition, the old mule has witnessed the spectacle of the solid phalanx of manufacturers being ranged on the side of this same "Liberal" administration. And little wonder that the manufacturers should so act, for, reckoning confidently upon the loyalty of the old beast of burthen, they were so fickled with the capture of a great party which they meekly led into the fold of protection, that they felt that they could afford to grapple said party to their soul with hooks of steel, and spurn the old mule, which has been standing mutely away out on the moor for years, with its nethermost parts exposed to the political blizzard, a rather pathetic picture of pity and contempt. But the truth of the matter, that every worm will turn is emphasized by the present development, for the old mule, in the person of its prototype, The Telegraph, than which it would be difficult to find a more slavish supporting organ of the party, is at least showing signs of animation and an inclination to kick, and kick vigorously, against the compromising, humiliating and impossible position which it occupies. It is beginning to realize that a party in opposition must be virtuous and be on the side of the people if it hopes to win. It has fourteen years adopted the fool question of negative criticism, with the inevitable result that it has drifted into a position when few outside of the old partisan guard take it seriously. Indeed, the mass of the people have reached the conclusion that as the official "Liberal" party is impossible, and as the official Conservatives are still joined to their idols, relief, if it is to come, must come through a new political organization, along the line of the great insurgent movement in the States. It looks, however, as if the Western end, at least of the Conservative party, is beginning to realize exactly where the party is at, and has determined to take the bit in its teeth and embark upon a policy of tariff reform. If the insurgent movement within the Conservative party thus inaugurated is maintained it may come about that the "two great historic parties" will change places on the tariff question.

Advantages To Canada Of Hague Tribunal Decision

Weekly Sun

In 1818 a treaty was made between Great Britain and the United States relative to the rights of American fishermen on the Atlantic coasts of British America. Under that treaty Americans were given equal fishing rights with British subjects in certain specified waters. The waters so specified extend: (1) From Cape Ray, at the south-east corner of Newfoundland to the Romea Islands, which lie off the northern coast line of Newfoundland; (2)) along the western and northern coast line of Newfoundland from Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands, which lie off the northern point of Newfoundland; (3) on the shores of the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence; and (4) on the coast of Labrador from Mount Jolly indefinitely northward. By the same treaty the United States forever renounced any liberty heretofore claimed or enjoyed "to fish within three marine miles of any coasts, bays or harbors of Mis Britannic Majesty's dominions in America, not included within the above-mentioned limits."

Almost ever since the framing of the treaty there have been differences of opinion as to the respective rights conferred under it, and these differences were sometime since referred to an international court, sitting at The Hague, for settlement. The diverse interpretations of the treaty centred mainly around the regulation of fishing in those waters in which American and British subjects have common rights and the delimitation of the areas within which Americans formally and forever abandoned all rights of fishing. In the dispute first named Newfoundland was chiefly concerned; in the second Canada had, if possible, a greater interest than the Ancient Colony.

The misunderstanding as to the interpretation of that part of the treaty which gives equal fishing rights to both parties in certain specified territorial waters became acute when Newfoundland passed certain laws, for the regulation of American and Newfoundland fishermen alike, in these territorial waters. These laws included prohibition of the use of certain kinds of fishing tackle, prohibited Sunday fishing, and so on, the apparent and professed object of these particular regulations being to prevent the depletion of the fisheries. The United States contended that the right to fish in these specified waters carried with it the right to share in the power to frame the regulations governing the fishing; a purely commercial right, it was contended by the United States, carried with it the right of joint sovereignity as well. The American contention on this point was rejected by the tribunal to which the case was referred. This tribunal affirmed the sovereign rights of Great Britain, and declared consequently that the sole right to make regulations governing the fisheries in these waters rested with Great Britain and her dependencies. At the same time, it was stated that British or colonial regulations governing such fisheries must be appropriate or necessary for the preservation of the fisheries, or desirable or necessary on grounds of public order and morals; in other words, the right to regulate fishing does not, it was ruled, carry with it the right to place the Americans at a disadvantage as against their Newfoundland rivals, in those waters to which both parties havejoint agress.

The other chief point of difference arose as to the interpretation of the word "bay." Americans had, it will be remembered, forever renounced the right to fish within three marine miles of any coast or bay, on the Atlantic coast of British North America, outside of the limited areas on the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador already specified. The Americans contended that a bay more than six miles wide or three miles deep was not a "bay" within the meaning of the treaty, and they asserted the right to fish within any bay of greater area up to within three marine miles of the actual coast line. This claim has been set aside, and the exclusive rights of British subjects are maintained in all bays on the coast lines of the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland outside of the limited areas within which joint rights are granted under the treaty. This part of the judgment is important to Newfoundland, but is still more important to the Maritime Provinces which are now assured exclusive fishing rights in the best parts of their extensive coast line.

Other minor differences have been adjusted at he same time. Newfoundland has also been denied the right to exact light or harbour duties from American fishing vessels in treaty waters unless the same are exacted from Newfoundlanders.

The judgment is in every respect an admirable one. It gives a common sense interpretation of the treaty of 1818, and gives to each their just rights, and no more, under that treaty. What is better still, the decision has been accepted in an admirable spirit by both parties to the controversy. Thus the deliverance itself, and the manner in which it has been received, will have a powerful influence towards the universal adoption of this method of settling international misunderstandings.

ENDS INDIGESTION IN A FEW MOMENTS

Gas, Heartburn, Headache and All Misery in Stomach Vanishes

Nothing will remain undigested or sour on your stomach if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally. This powerful digestive and antacid, though as harmless and pleasant as candy, will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you can eat.

Eat what your stomach craves, without the slightest fear of Indigestion or that you will be bothered with sour risings, Belching Gas on Stomach, Heartburn, Headaches from Stomach, Nausea, Bad Breath, Water Brash or a feeling like you had swallowed a lump of lead, or other disagreeable miseries. Should you be suffering now from any stomach disorder you can get relief within five minutes.

If you will get from your pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin you could always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and your meals would taste good, because you would know there would be no Indigestion or Sleepless nights or Headache or Stomach misery all the next day; and, besides, you would not need laxatives or liver pills to keep your stomach and bowels clean and fresh.

Pape's Diapepsin can be obtained from your druggist, and contains more than sufficient to thoroughly cure the worst case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. There is nothing better for Gas on the Stomach or sour odours from the stomach or to cure a Stomach Headache.

You couldn't keep a handier or more useful article in the house.

SILOS AND HOW TO BUILD THEM

From Farm and Dairy.

We intend building a silo in the corner of our barn. The space set apart for the silo is 18 x 15 feet, outside measurements. It is our intention at present to build a silo 14 x 16 feet with the part from the basement floor to the barn floor (nine feet) of cement and the upper part (19 feet) of wood. Is there anything better than a square silo? Please give directions for the construction of both concrete and wood work.—R. G. S., Glengarry Co., Ont.

A square or oblong silo will be satisfactory but we prefer to have the round form. In order to have no corn spoil in the silo it is necessary to have an even settlement which will exclude all air from the ensilage. This can be obtained better in a round silo than a square one. We have known square silos to have some spoil in the corners but not a large amount. If I were building an oblong silo in your building I would make the corners slightly round.

In starting a silo of this size a footing should first be dug about two feet wide and 10 inches deep. This footing will extend past the main wall of the silo eight inches on each side, thus giving it even bearing. Then start the main wall eight inches thick. It can gradually be reduced in thickness toward the top; six inches being sufficient at the top of the silo.

The proportion of cement and gravel depends somewhat upon the kind of gravel. With good clean sharp gravel a proportion of one to eight will make a first-class job. If it is desired to use large stone the main part of concrete should be mixed quite wet and the stones can then be pressed into the soft concrete. The stones should be kept a couple of inches apart and also should be kept away from the face of the wall.

CONCRETE PREFERABLE

We would not recommend putting a lumber top on this structure, especially as it is built inside of the barns. We know of one large dairy farm where this kind of a silo was built and the moisture from the ensilage rotted the timbers in the barn adjoining in five years. If lumber is used we would recommend cedar. This should be sawed to 4 x 6. The ends should have a notch cut out about half of its thickness. There should be a set-off made on the inside of the cement wall to receive the timber. At the top of the silo the timbers could all be bound together with another timber having a channel plowed out of the centre of it. It would also need two or three iron rods running across the centre at the top to stop its spreading.

The material used and the cost of this silo would be:

|---|---|
| 20 yds. gravel at 50c | $10.00 |
| 19 barrels cement, at $1.50 | 28.50 |
| Labor on concrete walls | 25.00 |
| 200 ft. lumber, $25 a 1,000 | 30.00 |
| Iron Rods | 3.00 |
| Nails | 1.00 |
| Labor | 12.00 |

Total approximate cost, silo $109.50

We would however advise building a round silo outside the building, say 16 feet in diameter and 35 feet high with an opening up one side. This silo would be much superior to the one contemplated and would not be occupying as valuable room as the other would inside the building.—H. Pocock, Mgr. London Concrete Machinery Co., London, Ont.

SEPTEMBER ATHLETIC WORLD

The September number of "The Athletic World" magazine has just reached this office. In up-to-date sport affairs and illustrations it is strikingly stronger than the August issue, which created such a favourable impression as a Canadian athletic and outdoor periodical, covering all branches of sport in Canada, with a liberal number of sport happenings over the world generally. We predict a full measure of success for "The Athletic World" in its able efforts to espouse the cause of good sport in this Dominion.

W. LANDRY WINS CHAMPIONSHIP OF CLASS A TENNIS SINGLES

Took Five Sets of Hard Fought Tennis Yesterday to Decide the Issue—Mr. Hall Put Up a Great Fight.

GALLERY WAS LARGE

After five sets (fifty eight games) of hard fought, brilliant [illegible] W. Landry, of the Y.M.C.A., [illegible]ed Sandy Hall of the same [illegible] the final game in Class A. of the [illegible] Tennis Association's singles [illegible] M.C.A. courts yesterday afternoon. The winner will now play off with H. O. Myers, winner of the city [illegible] championship of the city.

The astonishing growth that [illegible] has made in popularity in the city since the formation of the City Tennis Association was indicated by the very large gallery which followed the play in the final game yesterday. A score of ladies were among the most interested spectators and there was a notable attendance of tennis experts, comprising the cream of the mequet of the city. The play was followed with keen interest and pretty work on the part of contestants and was greeted with enthusiastic ap- plause that left no doubt of the appreciation of the spectators.

[illegible] was one of the most [illegible] long contests of the season and was marked by splendid, clean tennis, [illegible] the final game [illegible] was a battle of [illegible] required [illegible] to decide the issue. Mr. Landry won the first set after a keen [illegible] 8 game followed by a [illegible] victory. The third set proved [illegible] matter, for Mr. Hall made [illegible] ally and a [illegible] ved the third game to 6-4. The fourth set was [illegible] exciting. Mr. Landry had the [illegible] games to [illegible] favor and was within a point of winning the [illegible] ship. Mr. Hall rallied and won the next game, but they were [illegible] games. Mr. Landry won [illegible] game and again needed only [illegible] point to capture his seventh [illegible] and the set when once more Mr. Hall showed his skill and gameness under fire by rallying in the game. Once [illegible] repeat the sixth. Mr. Landry proceeded to make history repeat itself by winning his seventh, but Mr. Hall captured the next and they were [illegible] evens at seven. Mr. Hall won the next two and captured the set. Mr. Landry finished strong and won the last set and the game by 6-4, 2, Score Mr. Landry won 8-6, 6-4, 4-6, 7-9, 6-2. Umpire — Mr. R. J. Dovey.

Last And Best GAme Of The Season On Saturday

The fans are assured of seeing by long odds the best game here Saturday, at Riverside Park, when the champion T. A. S. team cross bats with the fast fielding and heavy hitting Kingston Ponies. Kingston has always been noted for its good ball teams and this year's bunch is no exception. This team has won eighty per cent. of its games this season, and is by long odds the fastest aggregation team in Eastern Ontario, only last Saturday defeating the fastest team in the Ottawa City League right on their own grounds. Their battery, viz., Saunders and Brown, have been working together now for two years and will make a grand effort to close the season of 1910 with a win over our boys. The T. A. S. with Wylder catching and Quinlan and Rahmel, an Ohio State Leaguer, doing the twirling, Connie Murphy at short and the balance of the team the best possible, will certainly take a lot of beating before they'll be satisfied with the small end of the score. They have come to considerable expense in bringing this team here, but trust to the patronage of the public, who will indeed get their money's worth on Saturday. The Kingston boys are running an excursion here for the game, promising to bring at least two hundred supporters to root for their team. Dan McCabe has consented to act as umpire, which is an assurance that the teams will have to play ball every minute. The usual admissions will be charged, viz., 25c. for gents and 15c. for ladies. The full line-up of both teams will appear in to-morrow's paper.

CRITICS SAY NATIONALS WON'T HAVE A CHANCE

NEW WESTMINSTER, SEPT. 14.—The Nationals arrived yesterday afternoon, very tired after their long trip, but expect that recuperation will follow the light practice which commenced later in the afternoon. "Newsy" Lalonde says the team is in high hopes of winning the Minto Cup. They were met at the train by Manager Welsh, of the Westminsters, and Con. Jones, of the Vancouver team, who accompanied them to Vancouver, where they will make their headquarters. The Westminster are preparing to give the visitors a fine time while at the Coast. Like other teams from the East the Nationals, in their limited [illegible] up last evening, did not like the grounds, which are sloping and filled with hollows. "It is a hay field," says one of the players. Dubuc's arm, which was injured a month ago, is improving, and he will play on Saturday.

Critics say that the Nationals appear to be the strongest team that has come West for the Minto Cup. They were even declared speedier than the Westminsters. Lalonde, when he played with Vancouver last year, was the premier scorer of the league, scoring more goals than any other player. The Nationals are expected to pile up more goals than the Montrealers did when out here. This will be needful as aid to their defence in keeping down the score of the West minsters. The locals believe that Lalonde is the brains of the Nationals, and they will, therefore, check him hard. Tom Gifford will probably have the task of holding him down, and may be counted on to keep Lalonde busy. The general combination of the Nationals is not so effective as that of the Westminsters, and it is problematical whether their play will work out to their advantage in the games. The public is keenly interested, and the prospects are for a record crowd on Saturday.

BEST LINE-UP OF THE YEAR

By far the best line up that has appeared on Riverside Park this year, will be presented by the all star Peterborough team against Kingston on Saturday. "Con" Murphy, of big league fame, and formerly a member of the Peterborough Midland League champs, will play short and incidentally will do some stunts on the coaching line. Murphy's only rival as a coacher is the now famous "Fish" Haney. There promises to be a lively time on the lines when the pair get working. Third base will be held down by Knould, of the West Ends, while O'Brien and O'Hearne will take care of 1st and 2nd cushions. This infield will take some beating, and with Wylder, the classy little catcher from Prince Edward county, doing the receiving, it looks like a hard day for Kingston.

FOOTBALL

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The first junior class of the season was held yesterday, there being a very fair attendance for this early in the season. This class promises to be one of the best classes in the Association this season.

The junior boys are going on a "hike" to Chemong Park next Saturday morning, leaving the building at 8.30 a.m. If you want to have a good time get your father to call you early. Then get mother to pack your "haversack" full of good things to eat, but be sure and bring something you will have to cook. Then get up to the "Y" on time, and then off you go with the "hikers."

READY FOR SHIPPING

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 13th.—George Dupont is in from the desert to announce that he has his mine ready to begin shipping ore. He was his own promoter of a group of claims away back in the hills that he located fourteen years ago. Instead of alluring language to investors he used his own strong arms with hammer and drill, and for all that fourteen years he has been developing his property alone.

Away up on the cliffs he located the ledge, and by sinking beside it uncovered a tale seam of high grade that was enough for his own wants and to buy powder and supplies.

As he needed money he gouged out enough to cover his needs, and sought civilization and an assay office, then back to the desert, for he was driving a tunnel to cut the ore body at depth. Year after year he worked patiently and alone. His adit into the mountain was in more than one thousand feet, and yet he had not encountered the ore. He was not discouraged; he merely figured that the ore body had dipped away from him, but couldn't get out of that hill and must be in there somewhere. He knew his apex rights protected him and he would keep on until he cut it.

Then came the day when he broke through the country rock and was in ore. But the patience of years that led him to it was not to be satisfied until he had crosscut the ledge and drifted on it in both directions far enough to prove it was the permanent ore body he sought.

He figures he has ore-blocks of more than six hundred feet, and is ready to begin production on a large scale, as he says the ore is rich enough to stand shipping charges until he can get sufficient returns to build a mill.

FRIENDLY CO-OPERATION NEEDED FOR SUCCESS

From Farm and Dairy.

If the cheesemaker or buttermaker and the patrons are to get the most from the dairy business, there should be a spirit of friendly cooperation between them. Each should do his best to help the other and take a sympathetic interest in the other's business. Farm and Dairy recently wrote to a cheesemaker in Ontario asking him for some information concerning the condition of the crops in the neighborhood of his factory. He replied as follows: "I would be pleased to give you the information you desire but must excuse myself on the plea of ignorance. I know nothing about the condition of the crops in this neighborhood and what is more, it is none of my business. I am a cheesemaker, not a farmer. attend to my business and let them attend to theirs."

Such an attitude on the part of the maker does not tend to increase the interest of the patrons in the success of the factory. If the maker takes absolutely no interest in the patrons' affairs how can he expect the patrons to take an interest in his affairs? The patrons go to a lot of trouble to take proper care of the milk, deliver it in good condition and so forth for their own profit, but it is at the same time to the profit of the maker. The maker can encourage the farmers in this line if he takes an interest in all the doings of his patrons and is able to discuss their problems with them intelligently. When he does this, they will be in the proper frame of mind to take his suggestions as to the proper care of milk. A maker has large opportunities for educating his patrons. His suggestions, however, will only be taken when he shows a corresponding interest in the work of his patrons.

WATERING ANIMALS ON OUR RAILROADS

From Farm and Dairy.

The Dominion Government should take action in the matter of watering animals on our railroads. Those in charge of cattle in transit are supposed to be given a chance to water their cattle at least once in 26 hours. The railroads should have watering facilities at every divisional point. But a case has recently come to light where cattle went 65 hours without a chance to drink. This not only entails a large depreciation in the value of the animal and loss to the shipper, but is the grossest kind of cruelty.

Everyone who has had charge of animals on a long railroad journey has experienced the difficulties of getting water. First the yard master has to be hunted up and begged to give what the law clearly demands. If the yard master is willing that the cattle shall get a drink there is usually more trouble in getting the car moved to the watering place. And then the chances are that enough time will not be given to water properly.

Breeders who take pure bred stock to fairs in the West or Western breeders who come to Eastern shows suffer particularly. It is almost impossible to transport the cattle to their destination in good shew form. It is the clear duty of the Dominion Government to compel the railway companies to give proper facilities for watering stock in transit. The various cattle breeders' associations and all interested, if only from a humane point of view, should see that this matter is laid before the Board of Railway Commissioners at the earliest opportunity.

THE MUZZLING AND TRANSPORTATION OF DOGS IN WESTERN ONTARIO

From Farm and Dairy.

The Veterinary Director-General, Dr. Rutherford, states that the department cannot relax before December 7 the regulation regarding the muzzling and transportation of dogs in western Ontario. The work of stamping out rabies has not proved an easy task. In spite of the stringent regulations and the strict enforcement of them a few cases of rabies continue to be reported from the west of the peninsula.

Just now tremendous pressure is being put on the department to relax the regulations, so hunters who live in the prescribed district can take their hounds to the woods for the deer hunting season. That is just the thing the department is determined not to do. It is stated that rabies among dogs is a difficult thing to handle, but if wild animals are once affected the trouble is ten times greater. At present Nebraska is struggling with rabies among the smaller animals, and, in spite of all that can be done, the epidemic is spreading. There is also a considerable district of Russia which is having great trouble with an epidemic of rabies among wolves.

TOMATO GROWERS SHOULD CONSIDER

From Farm and Dairy.

Tomato growers should go very slowly before adopting the suggestion recently made by Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, of shipping tomatoes to the English market. The fact that tomatoes sell in Ontario for 25 cents a bushel when the retail price in England is five to seven cents a pound makes the plan of shipping tomatoes to England appear fascinating and practicable.

There are certain difficulties in the way, however, which should not be overlooked. The tomatoes from the Canary Islands, which Mr. Wilson mentions in his report, are shipped at a season when the English tomatoes are not on the market. Later in the season when the Canadian tomatoes would reach the English market, they would be in competition with the home grown product. English tomatoes are grown for the most part under glass which give them a peculiar flavor and which the English consumer prefers to the flavor of the Canadian tomatoes which are grown in the open. It is stated by one of Farm and Dairy's correspondents who was once a merchant in Covent Garden that the Canary Island tomatoes are not sold in London when the home grown product is on the market. The only tomatoes then imported are from France and these only in small quantities.

The Ontario Government is making a trial shipment of tomatoes to the London market. Growers should go slow therefore in exploiting this market until the Government shipments have proved its possibilities. In the meantime, there is a large market nearer home, namely, the Canadian West, where immense quantities of tomatoes can be disposed of at remunerative prices if we have proper shipping facilities. It will pay growers better to develop this western market than to attempt shipping to the distant English market until experiments show that it can be done profitably.

BUTTER BEING CONSUMED IN LARGER QUANTITIES

From Farm and Dairy.

S. W. McLagan, Mgr. Director, Lovell & Christmas, Montreal

With regard to the demand for Lutter the noteworthy feature of it has been the large increase in the number of orders coming from the North-west Provinces, where last season closed bare of supplies and whose production this year owing to the hot dry summer has been considerably reduced. The local consumption here has also been good. Although it cannot be put in figures, the consumption appear to have been considerably larger than a year ago. The exportation to Great Britain has been trifling, about the same as last year, being in the neighborhood of 12,500 packages altogether.

QUALITY OF BUTTER ONLY FAIR

The quality has been fairly good but scarcely as high as usual, the chief reason being that most of our largest and best Townships factories have ceased to make butter, being engaged in the separation and shipment of cream to the States. There is a great deal to be done along the line of improving the quality of our butter production. We are still cursed with small factories, poorly equipped, and in the hands of inefficient makers, to whom milk is but milk and who make little effort to differentiate between of quality. As a result we receive a great deal of butter wrong in flavors indicating the use of unclean and overripe raw material.

A bolder policy on the part of our agricultural department is much wanted towards the encouragement of larger and better equipped butter factories which would be able to pay for a better educated and more efficient class of buttermakers. We are very long way behind such countries as Denmark and New Zealand in the practical organization of the dairy industry and another on the same

Magnificence Of Eucharistic Congress Never Before Surpassed

Rev. Dr. O'Brien, rector of the Church of the Sacred Heart, returned last evening from Montreal, where he had been attending the Eucharistic Congress. Rev. Father O'Brien, with Venerable Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay, were assistants to His Lordship Bishop O'Connor of Peterborough, in the grand procession on Sunday. In conversation with the Examiner this morning Dr. O'Brien stated that the Eucharistic Congress was the biggest cosmopolitan gathering he or even Canada had ever witnessed. It was the grandest assembly ever seen and possibly the largest religious demonstration that ever took place. The object, the reverend doctor stated, was to stimulate devotion to the Blessed Eucharist. This was done by extraordinary devotions during the week, and by sermons from eminent preachers, by conferences and by essays written by prominent men, both lay and clerical. Solemn High mass was said every day by either the Cardinal Legate or some of the Archbishops and bishops. The most solemn of these masses was that held on Saturday morning on Fletcher's field, in the open air, at which there were present thirty thousand people.

A fitting climax to the Congress was the splendid procession of the Blessed Sacrament on Sunday. In point of magnificence and in point of the number taking part and the number viewing it, this grand parade surpassed anything ever attempted anywhere, and especially in America. It is estimated that fully 250,000 walked in the procession. In this number were thousands of priests and ninety-nine Archbishops and Bishops, and three Cardinals. Among the Bishops was His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, of the diocese of Peterborough. The entire two and three-quarter miles of the walk, was flanked on either side by thick walls of people. Dr. O'Brien added that this immense gathering of people was not intended, as a demonstration of the numerical strength of Roman Catholics, but merely a devotion to the Holy Eucharist.

A STRONG PLEA FOR THE PETERBORO' CHIMES

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Anent the chimes project, I wonder if the giving of one bell has occurred to any person? This would be a tribute calculated to bring joy to the living, as well as to commemorate the memory of the dead.

Might it not also be a good idea, for those of us who wish to see the chimes established, but on account of the smallness of our donation, feel diffident about offering it as a contribution, to take up a subscription among our friends, who are similarly situated, and hand in the total amount to the treasurer?

Peterborough boasts no millionaires and a project so extensive as this, of the bells, can only be carried out by concentrated action. Every citizen, rich and poor, is appealed to (the pun is unintentional) because every one who is not deaf entirely may participate in the enjoyment of the music, which will be in a manner, the voice of the town-interpreting public sentiment.

In factories or large business places, should an enterprising employee ask for a twenty-five cent subscription from his fellow workmen, his plea would seldom be refused, and it is surprising how large a sum can be realized from a number of these small subscriptions, without the outlay proving irksome to the individual.

I know of a fine monument which was erected entirely by the pennies of school children. What do you say, boys and girls, of the town; will you take an interest in this matter? If you will do so, it would be easy for the school children of Peterborough to collect one hundred dollars. Think of the pride you would feel, you scholars, every time the bells rang, and how you could truly say: "I helped pay for them!"

Among the happy memories of their Ontario home, which this generation of Peterborough children may carry away (perhaps to a lonely ranch, or to a raw Western village) shall be that of the music of these chimes, and wistfully shall they relate to their children, how their young hearts thrilled, as they were awakened at midnight by "our bells" tolling for the dying year, and their joyously welcoming in its successor.

Associations are among the valuable assets of any country, and how much more in a new land, which, of necessity, possesses but few, should these be cherished and preserved.

It is the æsthetic which takes strongest hold of the mind and lingers longest in the memory of man, and the music of these chimes, ringing out from the belfry of the old grey church upon the hill, cannot help but have a refining influence upon the population.

Years ago, when a journey to Manitoba was an event, the poet, Whittier, made the trip, and the object which most impressed him, was not the boundless resources of that strong young province, but it was

The bells of the Roman Mission,
That call from their turrets twain,
To the boatman on the river,
And the hunter on the plain.

Surely, what Sarnia, Cobourg, Oakville, and even little Campbellford, have accomplished, in this big town, can be made possible, by unanimity and enthusiasm.

Will Ask The Courts To Dissolve Her "Psychic" Marriage--Not Herself

Examiner Special.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13.—The second Mrs. Charles R. Drummond's real self having obtained forgiveness from the Rev Herman Dubberstein, her former fiancee, for the midnight elopement of her "sub-conscious self," she is in seclusion to-day at her father's home, preparatory to asking the courts to dissolve her "psychic" marriage.

Mrs. Drummond, who was Miss Charlotte J. Bente, has returned from a trip to Deerfield, Kansas, where the young Lutheran pastor is stationed. As the guest of his parents, she succeeds in persuading him, her relatives say, that she was not herself when she married Drummond.

The Rev. Mr. Dubberstein has promised to marry her, it is said, in case she wins her freedom in the divorce court. The preacher was graduated a year ago from Concordian Seminary, at which Miss Bente's father, the Rev. Frederick Bente, is a member of the faculty, and became engaged to his preceptor's daughter. She was a stenographer for the law firm which represented the first Mrs. Drummond in her divorce suit, and typed the petition.

She met Drummond and, his uncanny influence, she says, so affected her that she forgot her clergyman sweetheart, reverted to her sub-conscious self and married Drummond on January 26 shortly before 1 a.m.

They separated after two weeks and a half, when, she says, her real self resumed control of her personality. Mrs. Drummond has kept to the seclusion of her home and refuses to discuss her plans.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I must tell you of a remark I overheard on the street this morning," writes one of my letter friends. "A gentleman, evidently a stranger here, remarked to his companion, "The people in this town don't seem to know how to smile; I haven't seen anybody smiling yet.'"

I don't think that's a pleasant accusation, at all—do you?

Seems as if we needed to take some lessons of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young. At the N. E. A. convention this remarkable woman was telling how, when she had just begun to teach, she was appointed to the "bad boy" room that the older teachers had given up.

"And what did you do with them?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, I succeeded by using the upward curve method," answered Mrs. Young.

If the gentleman's comment is just, we certainly had better try the upward curve method for a while, if we don't want to be known as the sour city.

We have some beautiful public buildings and some splendid schools and other attractions too numerous to mention, to be sure, but if there are a lot of sour-looking people going about the streets our visitors won't carry away a very pleasant impression.

Of course you can't go about permanently smiling to yourself.

If you did you'd probably be considered not quite safe to have at large.

But you can look happy and cheerful all the time, and when you meet people or talk with anyone you can smile all you want without being suspected of anything but a happy disposition.

Or better still, take this advice:

So you're way down in the dumps—
Blue, you say?
Think you've played out all your trumps?
Oh, go 'way!
Life's not like a game of poker;
In this game you use the joker.
It's the card you hold the longest;
It's the one you find the strongest:
Laugh, and drive the blues away—
Laugh, I say!

—Jean Dwight Franklin.

• • • • • • •

I have a friend who can go to town and get through about twice as many errands in an afternoon as most people can do in a day.

I happened to accompany her on a shopping trip the other day, and I discovered the secret.

She always takes a little pad and pencil, and on her way to town jots down just exactly what she is going to buy.

Yes, I know a good many women do that, and that there is nothing remarkable about it.

It's the next step that counts.

Having jotted down all the errands she then proceeds to map out the campaign and numbers the items in the most convenient order.

Then, when she gets to town she simply consults the slip and does the errands in the order of their numbering.

The result is that she takes the least number of steps possible and does not have the exasperating experience of getting way up one end of the town and finding she must go back for some measly little errand.

If you think this sounds better in theory than it would prove in practice, please disprove that by trying it.

I have.

35 YEARS IN BED

Boycet is Successful in Business—A Strange Ailment

Special to The Examiner.

CLAY CITY, Ind., Sept. 13th.—It has been estimated that the average man spends one-third of his life time in bed, eight hours a day, or twenty-three and a third of his three-score and ten years. But there lives in Perry township, Clay county, a farmer who has doubled this estimate.

Joseph F. Adams, a native of Parke county, born in 1841, and who is now in his seventieth year, has been continuously in bed since 1875. Add to this thirty-five years, one-third of the first half of his three score and ten years and he has been in bed just two-thirds of his life, even more than this, if one takes into consideration the proportionately greater time spent in bed during childhood.

In his youth Adams was an apt student, in his earlier manhood a successful teacher in the public schools and in 1870 was elected trustee of Sugar Ridge Township. From the Fall of 1861 he served his country in the Forty-third Indiana Regiment until the close of the war, participating in many engagements.

During all the time if his confinement to bed he has managed and directed his affairs, buying, within the time, a farm of two hundred acres, now one of the most desirable and valuable in Perry Township, which, he says, can not be bought for less than $20,000. At no time has he shown any indication of mental weakness or incapacity for business.

His ailment seems to be merely physical disability to remain on his feet. He is not paralysed and when he went to bed thirty-five years ago he simply said he was unable to get about and work.

Adams's meals are served him in bed, and he has eaten regularly three times a day. Not at any time during all the thirty-five years has he called a physician to prescribe for him nor diagnose his case nor taken a dose of medicine of any kind.

REFUSES TO PAY HUSBAND'S BILLS

In a Unique Statement Wife Declares She Will Get Along Better Without Him

Examiner Special.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Sept. 13th.—People of this section of the State are warned to-day by Mrs. Theresa Rosengrant, a well-known resident of South Bridge Street, at Tunkhannock, not to harbor her husband. She declares she will not pay bills contracted by him, as he left her board and took his bed with him.

She says in the odd advertisement:

"Whereas, my husband, George Rosengrant, son of the late John Rosengrant and Maria Rosengrant, formerly of Forkston Township, has left the house rented by me, and for which I paid the rent, and has left my board and taken his bedstead along with him and sold it, this is to warn all persons not to harbor or trust him on my account, from this date, as I will pay no bills of his contracting."

"I shall continue to pay my rent and to keep up my table in the usual form in his absence and having one less to feed, I will be pardoned, I think, if I live in better style than formerly.

"There is a hard Winter creeping along and he may incite your sympathies to trust him on my account, seeing that I am doing very well, thank you, but you just keep in mind that you have received this warning and govern yourself accordingly."

A CROWN OF GLORY.

As Well as a Mark of Beauty is Luxurious Hair.

It has been truly said that the crowning glory of our race is a luxuriant head of hair.

It used to be thought that this was one of the blessings which the gods bestow capriciously, and it is only recently that scientists have discovered that its beauty is dependent upon the absence of a minute germ which flourishes in the hair follicles, where it destroys the life of the hair.

To restore this life and kill the germs which cause the mischief is the mission of Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide surely kills the germs, and is the best hair dressing on the market.

It contains no grease or oil, neither will it stain or dyeo

PLAYED WITH SNAKE

Baby Rescued by Mother When Reptile Was Coiled and About to Strike the Crowing Infant

Examiner Special.

NEVADA CITY, Cal., Sept. 13.—Missing her baby, Mrs. James Oxalli, of Blue Tent, went into her back yard to look for her and found the infant playing with a huge rattlesnake, the latter coiled up and hissing and rattling.

Each time the crowing child stooped over to pick up the reptile the snake would stick out its tongue and rattle, all of which served merely to delight the baby.

The mother was frantic and quickly drew the child away, later dispatching the snake with a stick. It measured three feet and had four rattles and a button.

A WOMAN MADE HAPPY

"I could scarcely get about. Am home to attend to my work and feel miserable again" by all the time," writes Mrs. Alex. Parkinson, Island Brook, Que. "After using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food my system is wonderfully built up. There is no further trouble from dizzy spells, backache, nervousness, and feel like a new woman for me"

IT SAVES YOU WAITING

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call, write, or phone for appointments, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

SEPTEMBER ROD AND GUN

With the opening of the bird shooting season the September number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., gives a number of delightful stories dealing with days amongst the ducks, geese, woodcock and prairie chickens — experiences which will cause many a thrill to sportsmen reading them. Numbers will be able to duplicate, in remembrance, many of these published experiences, and in this way live over again red letter times in their histories. Variety marks this production, every lover of the outdoors, whatever his particular taste, receiving attention. The story of two young moose, one of a pet raccoon, the efforts of an amateur to trap a bear, particulars of the American bison, the Alpine Club's last camp and some dog lore show the manner in which the magazine covers the wide variety of Canadian outdoor life. The verses in this number are excellent, and the Bohemian ring of Fishin's Good" will find an echo with many even of the most staid. "My Little Fisherman," with his wonderful story of the monster that got away appeals to the sympathies of all, while the "Evening Chorus" is equally good. The issue should be found with every shooting party this season.

FOUND INTOXICATING

Redlands Shocked When New Liquor Law Fails to Stop Sale of "Hop Soda"

Examiner Special.

REDLANDS, Cal., Sept. 13th.—The City Trustees of Redlands are planning an amendment to the liquor ordinance that will bar temperance beer from sale in Redlands. Recently the sale of "hop soda" has greatly increased, and the trustees were among the purchasers, buying two bottles that were sent to a Los Angeles chemist for analysis. The report of the first showed 3.51 per cent. alcohol, while the second bottle went astray in the mails and has not yet reached its destination.

The Redlands liquor ordinance prohibits the sale of liquors with more than 3 per cent. of alcohol, hence the near-beer can be placed under the ban. The new ordinance has been in effect in Redlands for two months, but several temperance beer emporiums have sprung up since, some of them in private residences. The officers brand them as nuisances, and say they can trace cases of intoxication to the drinking of the near-beer.

BOYS' SECRETARY OF Y.M.C.A. RESIGNS

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. the resignation of Mr. B. W. Sharpe, boys' secretary, was received. Mr. Sharpe has been with the local association only a few months, but in that time he has made a host of friends among the boys and young men. As Mr. Sharpe wished that his resignation should take effect on the first of October there was only one course open and his resignation was accepted.

The reports from the several departments were very encouraging and the directors were delighted to learn that the younger men are doing their part of the Association's work with vigour. The secretary's report gave evidence of something doing wherever the young men were given responsibility. This is very evident in connection with the preparations from the Membership Campaign, which will be held during the last ten days of this month. There will be a members' banquet next Tuesday evening when an address will be delivered by Mr. George Warburton, the General Secretary of the Toronto Association, and at that banquet the inspiration will be given for the campaign.

The directors again faced the financial problem and every man promised to do his part in putting the Association on a good financial footing. There is plenty of work for the directors along this line and they feel their responsibility very keenly.

The report of the Penman games was handed in by the chairman of the Physical Work committee and was of the most encouraging nature.

The Association now faces a season of great opportunity and the directors feel that they are in a better position this year than ever before in the history of the work to handle a big important work.

THE ANNUAL DOWNEYVILLE PICNIC GREAT SUCCESS

Addresses by Hon. A. G. Mackay Leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature was a feature of Rev. Father McGuire's Gathering Yesterday---Large Attendance.

The annual picnic under the auspices of St. Luke's Roman Catholic church, Emily, took place at Downeyville, yesterday, in Hurley's Grove, and was in every way a gratifying success. There was a large attendance of the public from the parish and surrounding district, who greatly enjoyed the amusements and recreations common to such occasions. During the day an excellent programme of games and athletic sports of all kinds was run off. The ladies had provided a bountiful supply of eatables and the dinner and tea were greatly appreciated by those in attendance. The excellent arrangements which characterized the management of the picnic was the subject of comment throughout the day.

About three o'clock the platform erected for the speakers, was taken charge of by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore, who performed the duties of chairman. Addresses were delivered by Hon. Senator McHugh, Lindsay, Mr. Thos. Stewart, K. C., Lindsay, Mr. D. O'Connell, Rev. Father McColl and Hon. J. R. Stratton, Peterborough, and by Rev. Father McGuire, himself. The speech of the day was delivered by Hon. A. G. Mackay, leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature. His address was an eloquent tribute to Canada's resources, privileges and opportunities. He sketched the growth of the various provinces of the Dominion, and especially that of Ontario. He emphasized the exceptional educational possibilities that the Province of Ontario possessed, and the advantages they represented to the rising generation and their influence on the future prosperity of the province. He thought no country in the world presented greater opportunities and advantages to its people than Canada, and that in no country in the world was there a greater prevalence of general prosperity or a higher standard of general good citizenship and intelligence than prevailed in the Province of Ontario, which had no greater asset than the growing youth of the land. All the addresses were of a patriotic character, pointing out the progress and prosperity of Canada, the opportunities for good citizenship and advanced nationhood.

At the conclusion of the address Rev. Father McGuire congratulated his parishioners upon the great success their efforts had met in promoting the success of the picnic in the interests of the parish, and heartily thanked the people from all parts of the county and the neighbouring counties for their appreciated presence on the occasion.

At the conclusion of the speaking, and the hearty cheers for the King, the games and sports were renewed and continued.

All over the picnic was a very pleasant success and the general report is that it have been a handsome one.

Hon. A. G. Mackay, who at the request of the committee in charge came from Owen Sound to address the picnic, caught the G.T.R. train at Omemee, on his return to Owen Sound, where the annual exhibition takes place today.

Additional Particulars Of Death Of Mr. Murphy

Was struck by Motor Car While Passing Another Automobile and was Thrown Some Distance Sustaining a Fracture of his Skull.

The Montreal Herald gives the following additional particulars of the death of Mr. David A. Murphy as announced in a special despatch to the Examiner yesterday:—

As a result of severe injuries received in a collision between an automobile and a motor cycle which he was riding while returning from work yesterday evening, Mr. David B. Murphy, chief of the mechanical department of the Dominion Bridge Company, Lachine, died at the Montreal General Hospital this morning without regaining consciousness.

Mr. Murphy left his office at the close of work yesterday afternoon and started for his home at 420 Prince Edward avenue, Westmount, on his motor cycle, as was his usual custom. Driving into the city in front of Mr. Murphy was an automobile, travelling at a moderate rate of speed. Wishing to get ahead of the car in front of him according to the story of a witness of the accident, Mr. Murphy swerved to the left with the intention of passing it on the left side. Another automobile coming towards Lachine just reached the clear half of the road as Mr. Murphy crossed from behind the car which he had been following.

There was a crash and Mr. Murphy's machine was torn from under him and he was sent hurling into the air falling on his head in the centre of the roadway. When picked up he was unconscious and remained in that condition until death came this morning, ending his suffering.

At the General Hospital, from which an ambulance was summoned, a superficial examination of Mr. Murphy's injuries revealed that besides several cuts and bruises he had also sustained a broken jaw and a fracture of the skull.

The chauffeur of the car is known and will be called as a witness at the inquest, which is to be held to-morrow morning.

Mr. Murphy, who was a mechanical engineer of no mean ability, was thirty-nine years of age. A McGill graduate and a B.A.Sc. of the class of '93, he had gained the greater part of his practical experience at the Dominion Bridge Works. Besides a wife and young family, the eldest of which is a son, Allen, aged thirteen, and three little girls, whose ages range from twelve months to eleven years, deceased, who was universally liked and respected by a large number of friends in the city and whose demise will be deeply mourned, leaves a widowed mother, Mrs. D. A. Murphy, who lives at 6 Lincoln avenue, two brothers, Mr. A. M. Murphy, who is manager in the firm of John Gurd & Co., mineral water manufacturers; [illegible] Murphy, manager of the East End Abattoirs and three sisters, Mrs. W. M. Reid, Miss H. Murphy and Mrs. Ethel Murphy, all of whom reside in the city.

The late Mr. Murphy occupied a high position in his profession. He was the chief engineer in charge of the construction of the Soo Canal locks and had received flattering offers to take charge of the work on the Panama Canal.

WEDDING BELLS

SHEPHERD—DIXON.

At the Methodist church, Maple Creek, Saskatchewan, the marriage of Miss Mildred Stewart Dixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dixon, formerly of Peterborough, and Mr. Stinson James Shepherd, Lethbridge, Alberta, was solemnized by the Rev. G. W. Johnson. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in ivory duchesse satin, en train, over soft taffeta, with deep tunic of [illegible] net, finished with pearls and silver fringe. The glimpse of fine silk net was outlined with seed pearls and from the shoulders fell a quaint diaphanous cape of real Venetian and duchesse lace. The wedding veil of tulle was caught in the coiffure with a coronet of pearls and lilies of the valley. The bride wore a handsome pearl and emerald necklace and pendant, the gift of the groom, and carried a beautiful shower of white lilies, bride's roses and maidenhair fern. Miss Grace Hatsic, the maid of honour, wore handsome pale blue satin, with fine and white osprey and plume. She carried Killarney roses. Mr. Shepherd was assisted by Mr. Arthur Barnsley of Lethbridge. A reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, "The Maples," [illegible] and Mrs. Shepherd left the same evening for [illegible] where they will reside in the future. On [illegible] they were tendered a charivari by the [illegible] of the town.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 16.—Premier Hassard, Hon. H. J. Palmer and A. W. Warburton, M.P., of P.E.I., and Acting Premier McLean of Nova Scotia are the guests of Premier Hazen, and will discuss federal representation. It is feared that as a result of the redistribution of seats following the taking of the census next year, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick may each lose two seats and P.E.I. one seat. Mr. McLean said the question of representation of the Maritime Provinces in the Federal House was getting to be a very serious one, and he felt the action now being taken was very necessary.

Botha Is Defeated

Former Boer Commander Promises on Eve of Polling That He Will Unite the Races—Dr. Jameson Has an Easy Victory—Sir James P. Fitzpatrick Defeats the Nationalist Leader In Union Elections.

Johannesburg, Sept. 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The first general election in the new South African Union took place yesterday. Returns are still very incomplete, only 66 seats out of 121 having reported. The indications, however, are that the Nationalists, led by Gen. Louis Botha, the Premier, have triumphed, although Botha himself is defeated. Returns up to midnight give the Nationalists 33 seats, the Unionists 26, the Independents 6 and the Laborites 1. Gen. Botha was defeated by Sir Percy Fitzpatrick. Hon. H. C. Hull, the Finance Minister, was beaten by Sir G. Futrar. Cape Town went solidly Unionist. Dr. Jameson, the Unionist leader, defeated his Nationalist opponent by 1,414 to 62.

Addressing a crowd at Pretoria after learning of his defeat, Gen. Botha said: "I shall do my utmost to stamp out racialism."

The final result will probably be as follows: Nationalists, 64; Unionists, 40; Natal Independents, 12; Labor, 4; Independent 1.

Throughout the entire campaign the Premier has set his face against all attempts to stir up race trouble. He severely condemned a reference made by the Opposition leader in a speech at Durban to the Jameson raid, and expressed the hope that neither side would attempt to make capital out of the unfortunate differences that arose before the war. The issue of the election, he said, was not between race and race, but whether the electors were prepared to hand over the management of affairs to the heads of the mining houses, who were the Unionist leaders.

Elections were also held Wednesday for the Cape and Transvaal Provincial Councils, but returns are not sufficiently complete to give any indication of the results.

The constitution of the Union of South Africa, which went into force on May 31 last, provides for a House of Assembly and a Senate. To the Assembly the Cape of Good Hope sends 51 members, the Transvaal 36 and Natal and Orange River Colony 17 each. The Senate consists of eight members elected by the Legislature of each province and eight nominated by the governor. Only persons of European descent may sit in either House.

It was intended when the act of Union was passed that the first Union Parliament should be opened by King George. The death of King Edward made the carrying out of this plan impossible and the duty has been delegated to the Duke of Connaught.

Gen. Botha, it will be remembered became commander-in-chief of the Boer forces after the death of Gen. Joubert in the South African war, and fought valiantly against the British to the close of the war. Dr. Jameson, leader of the Unionists, is best remembered as leader of the famous "Jameson raid" which ended miserably for the raiders and almost brought Britain to war at the time with the Transvaal and with Germany, too. He fought in the South African war, with the British forces, of course.

Discussed Lemieux Act.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The Lemieux Trades Dispute Act was the chief subject of discussion at yesterday morning's session of the Canadian Federation of Labor, it being both commended and criticised.

Some of the delegates wanted the scope of the act extended so as to cover all classes of labor. Some delegates on the other hand, thought the act needed amendment in other ways, as it was, at present, cumbersome, and of very little benefit to the workingmen.

Falling Birth Rate

In Address Before the Toronto Empire Club the Noted Jesuit Priest Says Protestants Are Better Than Their Religion—Race Suicide Is "Treason Against the Majesty of God," Says London Priest.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Father Bernard Vaughan, S.J., London, England, addressed an audience of about 250 at the Empire Club last night with several ladies seated in the gallery. He kept his hearers interested and elicited a generous amount of applause by his dexterous twanging of thrilling chords. He had some good stories of Yorkshire dialect, and a fine Irish ballad all his own, when he alluded to the Empire's children begotten by their mother.

It had been the ambition of his life to come and see the Dominion which had so shown its patriotism and loyalty and love for the mother that bore them.

"They all knew the character of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, of Sir Robert Laird Borden, and last, but not least, Sir James Whitney," he proceeded as the applause graduated itself from Laurier to Shaughnessy.

"Statesmen, men of honor, men of prudence, with nothing merely local, merely provincial in them, but with aspirations extending all around their world-wide Empire," was his characterization of these gentlemen.

"You know there are dangers, and unless our sympathy goes forth expressing itself in service, service will never attain its highest in sacrifice," he advised.

"Any blooming idiot can be vicious, but it takes a hero to be good," was an explosive period that brought down the house. Then he quoted Josh Billings, "I guess once you get on this inclined plane everything is greased for the ascension."

"Beware of race suicide," was the next point. "Men might say what they would, and they said things they would have been astounded to hear a generation ago. They were told there was no such thing as sin. Men were told there was no more blame attaching to them for not reaching a high moral standard than for not reaching a high physical standard."

When men and women pledged their troth at the altar they must live up to their sacred and sublime, nay—sacramental duties. They shook their fist in the face of the divine decree to multiply and replenish the earth. That was racial suicide, and that was "constructive treason against the majesty of God."

A great danger to the Empire was lack of religion. What a difference the old country presented to-day as compared with a generation ago! He would not say there was not a grand body of religious men, but the test was whether religion entered into life. If their characters were to be fair, sweet, strong and sublime, they must be policed, trained, influenced and finished by religion.

He dare not tell them how few went to church in England. When they remembered that the birthrate had fallen from 38 to 24 they could understand that religion was failing. The religion that did not regard the sacrifice of Christ on the cross was not of much use. Only through that could men learn to fight their passions. Unless they had the strong arm of the Son of God to lean upon and his sweet heart to draw from, he did not know what they were to do in a moment of trial and temptation.

"I do not want to advocate one religion more than another, but I want you to live up to what you believe to be true. Take care when men tell you to live up to the moral law without telling you about a moral Law giver. They are trying to do that in France to-day and the result is hell."

"Not only the oldest, but the greatest association on earth you will acknowledge, whether you like it or not, is the Catholic Church. She can't die. She won't die. She is youthful and vigorous. Let her do her work with her powers. Patriotism is the finest bloom that rises from the tap root of religion," was the essence of a strong appeal.

"I think that Protestants are infinitely superior to the religion which they profess. I admire them, their zeal, their energy, enterprise, their philanthropy, their extraordinary generosity, but I can't admire their religion. Why you ask, the reason is that while I think Protestants themselves fine, I think their religion very thin, poor nourishment for the support of the soul."

Will Abolish Death Penalty.

Madrid, Sept. 16.—In reopening the Cortez yesterday Ruiz Valarino, the Minister of Justice, announced the early abolition of the death penalty, and said that numerous modifications would be adopted for the purpose of simplifying the civil and military codes.

Jumped Overboard.

Quebec, Sept. 16.—Discouraged because he had been deported by the local immigration officials, Jas. Rae, an Englishman, jumped from the Empress of Ireland, which was taking him back to England, and was drowned in the gulf off Fame Point.

Fired at a Policeman.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 16.—As Policeman Walter Coughlan was patrolling Wednesday night four shots were fired from an alley. One hit him on the leg, another went through his coat at the shoulder.

Hand Was Cut Off.

Brantford, Sept. 16.—Edward Van Camp, a well-known foreman of the Massey-Harris Co. here, had his hand cut off while at work on a joiner yesterday.

Alleged German Spy Arraigned.

London, Sept. 16.—Lieut. Helma, the alleged German spy, was arraigned yesterday, charged with having committed a felony in obtaining information concerning the Portsmouth defences, for the purpose of communicating the same to another state.

The case was adjourned to Sept. 20.

Killed When Almost Rescued.

Mahoney City, Pa., Sept. 16.—After being entombed for twenty-four hours in the Knickerbocker colliery, and on the point of being rescued alive, John Korisky, a miner of Shenandoah, was crushed to death by a second fall of roof. All of Wednesday, the entombed man talked to the rescuing party.

Thieves Cleaned Him Out.

Kingston, Sept. 16.—J. Geverson of Brockville was robbed of $105 and a gold watch by two strangers.

The Cause

of Eye Troubles is usually not disease, but defect in the structure or muscles of the Eye.

Consider the incessant work of the Eye, the instantaneous and exact adjustment demanded that sight may be always equal, single and ready to every change in position, distance and light. The nerves compel and control the mechanism in these instant adjustments. The mechanism may be defective, that is—

There may be defects in the structure, or focus of one or both Eyes;

The Muscles may be imperfectly balanced, so that both Eyes do not work in harmony;

There may be inability to focus for close work;

There may be strain through overwork, abuse, poor lights, bright reflections, etc.

"THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracey, (Copyrighted)

"Jack is on board," she announced. "Of course he would be there. And there is such a lot of other men—half Penzance, I think."

Enid joined her; Pyne, too, thought he could polish a burner up there as well as on the floor of the service-room.

Stanhope's stalwart figure, clad in oilskins, was clearly defined as he stood alone on the port side of the Falcon's small bridge, reading off the signals and sending back spasmodic twitterings of the flags which he, also, had procured, to indicate that each word was understood.

"Who is the skipper of the tug" inquired Pyne, quietly.

Both girls laughed.

"You mean Jack," cried Enid. "He is not the captain. He is an officer of the Royal Navy, our greatest friend."

"Jack is his front name, I suppose," went on Pyne, breathing on the copper disc in his hands to test its clearness.

"We will introduce you, even at this distance," said Constance airily. "Mr. Pyne—this is Lieutenant John Percival Stanhope, only son of the late Sir Charles and Lady Margaret Stanhope, of Tregarthen Lodge, Penzance, one of the best and dearest fellows who ever lived.'

"It must be nice to be a friend of yours, Miss Brand, if you always talk about the favoured person in that way," said Pyne, rubbing industriously.

Enid, to whom the mere sight of the steamer had restored all her vitality, giggled joyously.

"You know, Mr. Pyne, we all love Jack, as the song says. It was a mere accident that he did not accompany us to the rock yesterday. Connie would not let him come."

"Ah," said Pyne.

"I forbade him," explained Constance, "because he has only three days' leave from his ship, and I thought he should give the first afternoon to his mother instead of playing poodle for Enid."

"How dare you call Jack a poodle?" was the indignant exclamation.

"Allow me," drawled Pyne. "I'm very glad your sister classified him."

Constance suddenly felt her neck, and face aflame. Pyne was standing on her left, Enid on her right. The quiet jubilation of Pyne's voice was so unmistakable that Enid, for one instant, withdrew her eyes from the distant ship. A retort was quick on her lips, until she bethought her that the American's statement might have two meanings.

Being tactful withal, she chose her words whilst she bubbled forth:

"He promised to take us for a drive to-day. That is the dot and dash alphabet father and he are using. If dad requires all the dots I'm sure Jack is monopolizing the dashes. He must be furious about this gale."

Constance, who wanted to pinch Enid severely, had reverted to her normal healthy hue by this time. She dropped her glasses.

"We are shamefully wasting precious minutes here," she said. "Enid you and I ought to be in the kitchen.'

Then she glanced with cold self-possession at Pyne, who was whistling softly between his teeth as he plied the duster.

"As for you," she said, "I never saw anyone work so hard with less need."

He critically examined the shining burner.

"We Americans are taught to be strenuous," he said smilingly. "That is the only way you can cut in ahead of the other fellow nowadays, Miss Brand."

She almost resigned the contest. That unhappy explanation had delivered her bound into his hands. Yet she strove desperately to keep up the pretence that their spoken words had no ulterior significance.

"Such energy must be very wearing," she said.

"It is—for the other man."

"But in your case it is unnecessary. My father believes we will be here at least forty-eight hours." Then she became conscious that again she had not said exactly what she meant to say. "So you, at any rate, need not wear your fingers to the bone," she added hurriedly.

"Guess it must be a national vice," he said with irritating complacency. "Just now I feel I have a regular hustle on."

"Your example equals your precepts, Enid, tear yourself from the attractive spectacle. There are eighty-one ravenous people to be fed."

"Sorry you haven't hit upon the real reason of my abounding industry," said Pyne, who skipped down the ladder first to give the girls a helping hand as they descended.

"Please tell us. It may be inspiring," said Constance.

"I'm going to ask the boss if I can't take a turn as scullery-maid when I'm through here."

"Then I veto the idea now," she answered. "Enid and I have had a most comfortable nap, and I am certain you have not closed your eyes all night. I will make it my personal business to see that both my father and you lie down for a couple of hours immediately after breafast."

"Or else there will be a mutiny in the kitchen," chimed in Enid.

"Connie" she whispered, when they were safely out of hearing from the service-room, "I never saw a worse case. Talk about the young men suddenly smitten you read of in novels—"

Her sister whirled round.

"How can you be so silly?" she blazed forth.

"Why did you libel Jack so readily?" tittered Enid.

The other, utterly routed, went on in dignified silence. She did not speak again until they surveyed the store apportioned for the coming feast.

"Eighty-one!" she murmured. "What a monstrous deal of people for a half-penny worth of bread!"

"What is the use of repining?" sang Enid, with a fortissimo accent on the penultimate syllable. "For where there's a will there's a way. To-morrow the sun will be shining, although it is cloudy to-day."

But Constance was not to be drawn a second time. Her clear brain was troubled by a formless shadow. It banished from her mind all thought of a harmless flirtation with the good-looking youngster who had brought a blush of momentary embarassment to her fair face.

How dreadful it would be to meet hunger with refusals—perhaps there were worse things in the world than the midnight ordeal of an angry sea.

Indeed, when Pyne did join them in accord with his intention, he soon perceived the extent of the new danger. The stress of the night had only enhanced the need of an ample supply of food. Everybody—even the inmates of the hospital—was outrageously hungry, and the common allotment was half a cup of tea and half a ship's biscuit.

For the midday meal there would be two ounces of meat or bacon, one potato, and another half biscuit with about a wine-glass of water. For supper the allowance was half a cup of cocoa and two ounces of bread, which must be baked during the day. Not quite starvation, this menu, but far from satisfying to strong men and worn-out women.

The Falcon, knowing the uselessness of attempting to creep nearer to the Gulf Rock, had gone off with her budget to startle two continents. Stanhope's last message was one of assurance. He would do all that lay in man's power. The lighthouse soon quieted down to a state of passive reaction. Pyne, refusing to be served earlier, carried his own and Brand's scanty meal on a tray to the service-room.

The unwearied lighthouse-keeper was on the balcony, answering a kindly signal from the Land's End, where the coast-guards were not yet in possession of the news from Penzance.

He placed the tray on the writing desk and contemplated its contents ruefully.

"I guess that banquet won't spoil for keeping," he said to himself. "I'll just lay round and look at it until the boss quits making speeches by the yard."

A couple of minutes passed. Brand was hoisting the last line of flags, when the American heard faltering footsteps on the stairs.

"Don't follow so close, Mamie," said a child's voice. "My arm hurts just 'nuff for anything when I move."

A towzled head of golden hair emerged into the light. It was one of the little girls, whom Pyne had not seen since they were swung aloft from the sloping deck of the Chinook.

Their astonishment was mutual. The child, aged about eight, recognised in him a playmate of the fine days on board ship. She turned with confident cry.

"I told you so, Mamie. It was up. You said down. Here's the big glass house—and Mr. Pyne."

She quickened her speed, though her left arm was in a sling. Pyne, dreading lest she should fall, hastened to help her.

"I'se all right, Mr. Pyne," she announced with an air of great dignity. "I make one step at a time. Then I ketch the rail. See?"

"You've got it down to a fine point, Elsie," he said. "But what in the world are those women-folk thinking of to let you and Mamie run loose about the place."

Elsie did not answer until Mamie stood by her side. Judged by appearances, Mamie was a year younger. Apart from the nasty bruise on Elsie's left arm and shoulder, the children had escaped from the horrors of the wreck almost unscathed in body and certainly untroubled in mind.

"Mamie came to my room for break fast," explained Elsie at last. "We're awful hungry, an' when we axed for 'mother bizit Mrs. Taylor she began to cry. An' when I said we'd go an' find mamma she cried some more."

"Yes. We're awful hungry," agreed Mamie. "An' please where's mamma?"

HECLA FURNACE

—And The Feature That Made Them Famous

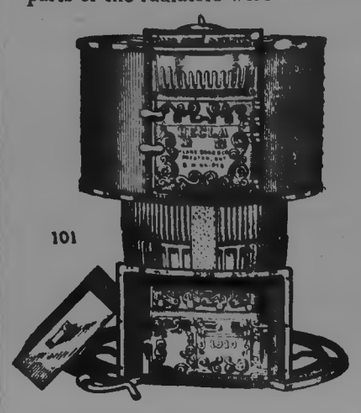
The discovery of FUSED JOINTS made possible the perfect system of warm air heating.

When we first began to build furnaces, some thirty years ago, the various parts of the radiators were bolted and cemented together. No matter how tightly the iron and steel were fastened, the difference in the expansion and contraction of the two metals eventually pulled the bolts loose, ground out the cement and left openings through which gas, dust and smoke escaped into the house.



About 20 years ago, we discovered and patented FUSED JOINTS.

Instead of bolting and cementing steel and iron together, we fused the materials at a white heat.

The joints thus formed are permanent and indestructible.

Twenty years use has proved the value of Fused Joints. They will not leak—they are absolutely gas, smoke and dust tight—and will always remain so as long as the furnace is in use.

Fused Joints insure "Hecla" heated homes being always supplied with an abundance of fresh, warmed air, untainted by gas or dust.

"Hecla" Furnace is the only furnace with Fused Joints.

Fused Joints are only one of the patented features of "Hecla" Furnace that mean so much to every man who is going to put in a new furnace this season. Our furnace book describes and illustrates them all. Write for free copy.

Send us rough diagram of your home, and we will plan the heating arrangement and give estimate of the cost of installing the right "Hecla" Furnace—free.

The STORY of PONTIAC RAGAPPLE

H. DOLLAR'S $8,000 Cow and How She Became the Nucleus of a Dairy Herd That Is Famed for Living Up to Its Owner's Name

BY EDWARD HUNGERFORD.

(Copyright, 1910, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

LISBON, N. Y., Saturday:—

ST. LAWRENCE is the largest of all the counties of New York. For a great many years she has reigned supreme over them in agriculture—in fact she is to-day, despite the great advance of Western farms, one of the leading agricultural counties of the nation. Of large cities or towns she has none, but her broad, level acres have sent many and many a successful man out into city life. That in itself has been a drain upon her vitality, and agriculture has not particularly prospered there recently.

Because of the nature of the soil and of their location St. Lawrence county farmers long ago turned to dairying as their occupation. How poorly some of them have done in that in recent years may be quickly shown by a single illustration, fairly typical:—

A farmer who admits he is discouraged and sees no hope for New York State agriculture has a rented place within a dozen miles of Canton, the county town of St. Lawrence, upon which he keeps a herd of seventeen cows. These cows only give him eighty pounds of milk to draw to the factory each day, and eighty pounds would be no great daily record for a couple of Holsteins fed and kept in best condition.

As the matter stands, that farmer would to-day do best to sell these seventeen cows, as not one of them is worth her keep to him. Every one is a loser, and that farmer could far better afford to shut up that farm and go over to Ogdensburg to get a job on a trolley car or a lake boat. A good many of them are doing that very thing. They are tired of working a farm—hard, hard work every minute of it—only to find at the end of the year that they are a little deeper in debt than at the close of the preceding twelvemonth.

Against such cases, altogether too many of them in Northern New York, the very practical agricultural college of St. Lawrence University at Canton is struggling. That little college is essentially a poor man's college, and is mighty proud of that. Lacking endowments or any other sources of heavy income, the men who feel a vital interest in the agricultural future of the North Country are working in a simple and practical way to gain the best end with its resources cheapest at hand. A farm almost gone to weeds right at the gate of the college campus has been bought and redeemed.

The farmers' boys go to the school at Canton—for a few weeks, if they cannot make a full year out of it. They are not raised with any of the regular collegiate traditions, but they are turned loose upon that fertile soil under that they may see for themselves the astounding readiness of that lime-rich soil of St. Lawrence to respond to a little cultivation, a little decent care. Last year that farm raised cabbages of a grade that fairly astonished the agricultural sharps of the North Country. Those cabbages were of themselves educational. They sent the farm boys back to those great, broad acres with a zest and a real inspiration for better things.

Miss Dollar has a reputation in her to-day of her most practical sort. She has Dr. Gunsaulus's very practical distinction there at Canton—and she has brains.

E. H. Dollar has turned his back squarely upon the farm, and has other and elsewhere. As a boy he was discouraged by every one of the doleful tales that were told him. This farm after that was sold. He could drive that three hundred acres of land to the limit of its possibilities, and when Mr. Dollar was called home a dozen years ago to the deathbed of his father a promise was asked of him. He was an only son, and he was asked to stay upon the farm and take care of his mother. That promise was given and kept to the letter. Mr. Dollar said goodby to his dreams of city success.

The broad farm, which had been in the possession of the Dollar family for seventy years was his immediate problem. It had not been a money maker for some years. The elder Dollar had made a profit for himself by occasionally selling a fine horse and selling it at a good round figure. That was not real farming, though, and the market for all such draught horses, with the development of the automobile, has been getting poorer all the while. Young Mr. Dollar eliminated the horse question and squarely faced the problem of that two hundred acres of unprofitable land. It was his plan to make those acres yield a profit—there were no two days' out of it—and if you not an easy problem—for the man turned to city ways.

He decided that it must remain a dairy farm—and conditions were enough to direct that. There were fairview cows in his herd, all of them like what the farmers of the North Country and and the same thing was dinned into his ears. There was nothing in farming, all the clever boys on those North Country farms and in the villages were going down to the city. One had become a big publisher, another had risen to the highest point in the Post Office Department—the list of city successes of St. Lawrence was spun at length.

The March Cityward.

Do you wonder, then, that young Dollar left his old farm home there at Heuvelton and joined the march cityward? He went down to a business college in Albany, and there they taught him stenography and typewriting. It was far better to have a good job as stenographer in New York city at $25 a week than to be grubbing on a lonely farm—and going deeper in the hole every year. It was going to be city business for young Dollar.

But things do come that shape men's lives anew,

The Dollars' Big, Generous Barn

One of the Prize Bulls of the Dollar Farm

Mr. Dollar has forty cows that he considers only medium in his herd which give 1,500 pounds of milk a day. But that anticipates.

He knew the herd was losing, because the books balanced wrong at the end of every year, but for a time he could not put his finger upon his loss. Then he decided that the books themselves were wrong. The average farm method of keeping accounts would put a schoolboy to shame. Those accounts tell no story whatsoever, and this is a day and generation when scientific accounting presses its delicate and discerning finger upon the weak points of any business.

Mr. Dollar found that few farmers had any system in their bookkeeping. He had been working in several, well systematized offices in New York, Standard Oil among them, and he decided to take a few of the modern city office methods to bear upon his farm. For an early step he decided to keep an individual record of each cow—what she ate and what she yielded. That made constant and tedious weighings of forage and of milk and meant many aiding Mr. Dollar's farm help, but he stood his point, and before he had been on that Heuvelton farm—he calls it Fairview—two years he knew the cows that were extravagant to keep. He took good care to get rid of that unprofitable to buy cows in their place that promised to give decent returns.

"It isn't so hard," he told the other day, "to figure upon a cow, being sure her food—and a little more, too. So do that to be sure personal, let me tell you of a neighbor of mine who has also adopted common sense methods, by which he is proving his worth to every cow he owns. He has a small farm, a small herd. There are fifteen cows in it, and the average yield last summer was $100 each. [illegible] he knew that each cow eating her winter's keep was bringing him in about fifty cents a day profit. The cow herd netted him, in milk [illegible] for the summer, $750. And his farm had given him its living. That was only a very small herd, as I told you, but it shows how the possibility of a big herd."

Mr. Dollar has one herd of thirty-two cows that [illegible] in the county of every farmer in the North County. "Only two thirty-five cows in the county," he says, "and they are the envy of their neighbors. You could sell a cow from the [illegible] for any price almost the cow [illegible]

Agure of 12,000 pounds. The cows are milked three times a day, to the distress of the farm help, but that is one of the things that contribute to the great yield of Fairview, and the farm help must stand it. Mr. Dollar pauses in the midst of his talk to speak of the farm help.

Help the Big Problem.

"That problem of farm labor is the great problem of North Country agriculture to-day. We are hard pressed for help to-day one of my neighbors tells me that a man has quit him. Yesterday a similar complaint came to me from over in the next town. Our work is hard, but it is neither grinding nor killing. Men grow strong and live to great age under it. We pay $30 a month and give a man his board. When he comes to figure out his cost of living he will have to have a pretty good job in the city to beat that. And yet we fairly have to beg workmen to come to us."

He pauses to call attention to the milking machines that lie on a shelf in the cellar of his big, comfortable barn.

"There is a clever idea—the milking machine," he tells you. "But half the time they lie idle because they require competent help, and I've told you that competent help is not always to be had here for the asking."

You narrowly scan this farmer—this big-minded farmer who brought the intense business methods of the city to bear successfully upon his native acres. You wonder if he is getting discouraged again. He must read your suspicion question intuitively, for he laughs and says:—

"I am convinced that the labor question is going to solve itself for us. Mr. Brown, of the New York Central, is even now working out a plan to discharge immigrants to go straight out into the fields to seek employment as soon as they reach the United States. My conviction is strong enough so that I have bought the farm next to this and thrown it into Fairview."

You ask questions and find that Fairview now has 340 acres—a big, practical working proposition for a farm east of the Appalachians. Mr. Dollar begins to tell you his ambitious hopes for a well planned set of new farm buildings close to his comfortable home.

"This old barn," he says, "has been home's gold many years."

You look cleverly up from the solid floor cellars and ably make that statement fact. Rough hewn, they bear testimony to the honest master builders of the North Country farmers a full half century ago. But [illegible] You could eat a meal from the immaculate floor, [illegible]

All of which reminds one of a famous meal that was once eaten upon the floor of a big dairy barn down on Long Island.

That dairy had been refused a clean bill of health by the Board of Health authorities of the city of New York and its owner was in despair. He felt that the inspection had been a farce and that he was resenting the result of a refusal to indulge in a bit of "practical politics" in the shape of a cash gift. The average dairyman would have pocketed that refusal and perhaps started in to manufacture butter and cheese. But this Long Islander was more of a power in real politics than the inspectors had guessed. He brought pressure to bear just south of Central Park, Manhattan, and the Commissioner of Health and some of his subalterns went down on Long Island for supper. To their surprise that supper was served in their host's cow barn, not in the house. The Health Commissioner said flattering things about the absolute cleanliness of that barn. Then he was told of the action of his deputies. The Long Island dairyman was shipping his milk in to a distant city market within the next forty-eight hours.

Mr. Dollar leads you out of the immaculate cellar of that cow barn into his power plant, as he calls it. A small gasolene engine—there is hardly a worth while farm the whole length and breadth of New York State without one—operates a dynamo of sufficient capacity to light his house and his barns.

"I don't like kerosene around a house or a barn," he says, simply, "and I'm not entirely convinced, either, of the safety or convenience of a small generator for illuminating gas upon a place like this. This dynamo does the business. We keep it humming during the early evenings, when we are busy in the house, or here in the barns, and then during the 'wee sma' hours' we fall back on a storage battery that the dynamo can charge during a dull hour or two in the day. I'm sorry that I haven't some water power to generate my current, but we are doing the next best thing."

Pontiac Ragapple.

This competent man seems destined to do the very best thing. He leads you across to a long, low, neat structure, typical of the most modern sort of farm buildings in the State, and you peer within. Cleanliness and sunlight are there in abundance, and there are some fifty of the youngest Holsteins, in addition.

"Some of these fellows are the sire stock of tomorrow," he says, with a laugh.

You laugh too—then remember. When you are coming over the branch railroad that leads from De Kalb through Heuvelton to Ogdensburg Mr. Brixton, the conductor, with the inscrutable wisdom of some railroad conductors, has divined your errand and says:—

"Ask Dollar about that eight-thousand-dollar cow."

You ask. Mr. Dollar laughs once again.

"Pontiac Ragapple," he says.

Then you slowly worm out the history of the deal that put the young clerk out of the business office in downtown New York into the rank of [illegible] class agricultural men of the land. Pontiac Ragapple was one of a lot of Holstein heifers that [illegible] sold out of a herd over in Eastern Michigan—the State institution near Pontiac. An expert cattleman from the East had bought twenty-eight head out of that herd—and refused the Ragapple—even though she had been offered to him at $200. A little later Dollar went out to Pontiac and bought the Ragapple for $200; she seemed to have the fruiting of a good cow.

When four years ago she maintained an average of thirty-one and a half pounds of butter a week the farming experts throughout the country began to hear of Dollar and his Fairview Farm up in St. Lawrence county. One of them, with a big, showy Massachusetts place—D. W. Field, of Brockton—went up there and set a record mark by buying Pontiac Ragapple for $3,000. After that Dollar was established.

Nowadays he thinks nothing of five-thousand-dollar cows. Only the other day he sold a heifer to a Syracuse hotel man for something close to $4,000. He has a bull, Pontiac Korndyke, which is to-day the only living bull with four daughters each with a record of thirty pounds of butter a week. These four Korndyke girls—Lady Pauline De Kol, Pontiac Agnes, Pontiac Pet and Pontiac Darkness—are the inspiration of the North Country, a country famed for three-quarters of a century because of its dairying, four great lopes on which the [illegible] of its agricultural power may be laid.

"How do you do it?" asks Mr. Dollar.

"Cleanliness and care—and those things a-plenty" is his reply. "It is just as easy to keep a five-thousand-dollar cow as a five-hundred-dollar one, a matter of attention, a little care given as to bedding [illegible] as early a development, a little care in feeding, and—three mittings a day."

You take to go. As you turn a message comes out from the village. It is a telegram that has flashed all the way across the continent from far distant British Columbia. The British Columbia farmers' agent wants to buy one of Mr. Dollar's little heifers. It is going to pay $1,500 for the downy little animal, and after without ever a sight of her. So much for good reputation.

"Good reputation does matter," the city bound farmer admits.

Good reputation does matter! Good reputation is laying the very foundation stones of the career of a North Country farmer, who is laying out of the gates of his fortune [illegible]

HUMOUR OF BRITISH ARMY MANOEUVRES

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Aside from the rage if there is anything that England is being surfeited with it is "army manoeuvres." Already hostilities have been waged over half the northern counties involving regulars and the volunteer forces alike, and the conflict will continue through September. This is why the Queen's Own Rifles, of Canada, will have a thorough knowledge of the tenacity of real British mud before they finally break camp at Aldershot, where they were first brigaded on their arrival, to take the boat for home.

Of all the varied manoeuvres, however, the most discussion has followed in the wake of the three days' movements on Salisbury Plain, where the doctors and members of the Royal Army Medical Corps were especially rehearsed in their specific branch of the war game. The imaginary casualties accruing from shot and shell were dealt with just as they would be in actual conflict. Medical units pitched their field hospitals on the lines of march, and the aforesaid casualties were supposed to range from grazes and flesh wounds by shell splinters to fractures by bullets, the exact nature of each supposed injury being marked on the casualty label issued by the umpires.

UNHURT, BUT DISSATISFIED

The surgeons promptly bandaged and splinted each case in the field, according to the label's diagnosis, and then the perspiring ambulance bearers had the pleasing duty of conveying healthy passengers miles, in some cases, to the central hospitals. Small wonder is it that stories continue afloat.

"Say, driver!" yelled one "victim," who was being borne in an ambulance that bumped him about like a cork in a mill race, "don't yo know I've broke my leg? Can't ye put some grease to the springs to ease the jolting?"

"Shut up!" roared the driver. "I reckon you've got a mighty soft job being a 'casualty'! You ought to be handlin' horses over these roads and then you'd know what work means!"

A soldier marching along was suddenly pounced on, given a ticket stating his injuries and told to fall out while army surgeons dressed the wounds. Then six men of the Field Ambulance Corps were assigned to a stretcher to carry him four miles over a rocky road to the field hospital.

"Lovely country, isn't it-" commented the comfortable stretcher passenger as he smoked a cigarette complacently while the bearers swore and perspired up and down the hills "Most pleasant for walking!"

"Just for that," roared the disgusted bearers, when they thought there were little chances of being detected "you can get out and walk a spell," and the "casualty" was forthwith dumped out in the roadway.

DIDN'T MIND "SHELL"

"I was shattered in the right leg by a shell splinter," complained the victim, when the hospital was reached, he having been restored to the stretcher for the last half mile, "but please have the surgeons look after the corns on my feet and they will be nearer to the real base of injury."

At one hospital six dusty, foot sore "Tommies" struggled up with a "casualty," whose label read, "Abdomen, rifle bullet through stomach; patient not sick, but very thirsty." The injured man, grinning broadly, was taken to the operating tent, where the "bullet was extracted." Five minutes later the surgeon who had handled the instruments came out, looking grave.

"How is the patient?" asked an officer.

"Dead—died of hemorrhage; didn't have a chance," returned the surgeon. Then the "dead man" was carried to an adjacent tent, where he made such a lusty meal of beef and potatoes as would have done credit to a farmer who had just followed a plough over the "west eighty." It was high speed surgery with a vengeance, but British army men insist that it was worth while and recommend the same.

RIVER CROSSING CONTEST

The other day there was a river contest at the Hythe military canal. Various devices were utilized by the troops involved to make a fording. One regiment set afloat bundles of bedding straw, wrapped in the waterproof sheets used for bivouacking. About a dozen of these bundles were lashed to poles in rows of three, giving floating and carrying capacity to bear four men. Then a soldier swam with a rope to the other side, and this improvised raft was worked back and forth as a miniature ferry to carry men over.

The Oxfordshire Light Infantry brought numbers of table tops and poles from the barrack rooms. The table tops were lashed to the poles and a most effective bridge was quickly made and thrown across the canal. The Oxfords put the other contesting regiments down and out for when this impromptu equipment was set in order they were enabled to send a continuous stream of troops across.

BLOOD IS NEEDED TO SAVE THIS MAN'S LIFE

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Unless someone volunteers, and volunteers quickly, to give one-half of a pint of blood for transfusion, Adam Witzak, a patient in the Hudson Street Hospital will lose his life which has been ebbing away slowly since yesterday morning when he was found unconscious from inhaling illuminating gas. Up to a late hour there was no volunteer.

Witzak is thirty-two years old, and was taken from the Stevens House, No. 27 Broadway. He registered at the hotel after he had arrived from Milwaukee, Wis., on his way to Europe. He had engaged passage on board the Celtic of the White Star Line, which departed yesterday.

One of the attendants at the hotel smelled gas and traced it to the room occupied by Witzak. The door was forced and Witzak was found in bed unconscious. It is supposed the gas was flowing as the result of an accident. A window was open. It is supposed the wind blew out the light.

It was decided late in the afternoon that the only treatment which might save Witzak would be the transfusion of blood. The physicians say that unless blood is supplied in a few hours Witzak will die.

SHOOTS MAN WHO REFUSED TO WED

Examiner Special.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 16.—Mrs. William Krauss, divorced wife of a prominent physician of Memphis, and a professor in the University of Mississippi, to-day shot and slightly injured Frank H. Griffith, a mining man, whom she pursued from New York to the coast a year ago, accusing him of swindling her. The chase included several sensational scenes in various cities where they met.

The shooting to-day occurred in Mr. Griffith's office. Mr. Griffith was hurried to the Receiving Hospital, where his injuries were dressed, and later was removed to the Clara Barton Hospital. One bullet lodged in the right arm above the elbow, and the second struck the collar bone and glanced off to the side. A third bullet was flattened out on the cement floor of the office.

While admitting the shooting, Mrs. Krauss asserts it was in self-defence. "He slapped me, and I was forced to protect myself," she said.

It was about two years ago that Mrs. Krauss and Mr. Griffith met. Mrs. Krauss said "Dr. Krauss is about twice as old as I am and I was unhappy, but we lived together for seven years and then I came to California. I had already made a contract with Dr. Krauss, agreeing to get a divorce and he was to give me $20,000, and $1,800 a month alimony. Mr. Griffith knew this and he asked me to marry him, and I agreed to become his wife as soon as I got a divorce."

Mrs. Krauss says she went to Mr. Griffith's office to ask him if he intended to marry her. Mr. Griffith says when he learned she was not separated from Dr. Krauss he attempted to sever all relations with her. He denies inducing her to invest in a worthless mining proposition.

HAS GONE TO SUNDAY SCHOOL 2495 TIMES

Wonderful Record Accomplished by a Man Who Has Not Missed in 45 Years.

IS STILL GOING

Unless he is overcome by a desire to taste the to him unknown joys of truancy, Samuel Winterton, the champion "good boy" of Keyport, N.J., will tuck his little leather bound Bible under his arm this morning, bid his mother farewell and with eager steps pursue his way to the little First Baptist Church, where will rise proudly to his feet and answer "Present" for the 2,496th consecutive time.

Nor is Samuel Winterton likely to succumb to the temptation of a morning dip in the nearby ocean, for he has a record to maintain, and to him the path to Sunday school is a path of pleasure which he has followed unerringly for forty-eight years.

When Samuel Winterton was five years old his mother's sister, now the wife of the Rev. Francis Calthopper, of Flatbush, carried her young nephew to the little church, which had just been built a few months before, and placed him in the infant class, of which she had charge. From that day he became a regular attendant.

UNDAUNTED BY BROKEN ARM

When the first Christmas came around the youngster was called to the pulpit to receive a book as a reward for faithful attendance. He still treasures the volume. That moment was one of the proudest the boy had ever experienced, and then and there he resolved that unless physical disability interfered he would win a book every year.

He never waited to be reminded to hurry for fear he would be late. None of the thousand and one excuses the average small boy can conjure up to shirk what becomes an unpleasant duty when the midsummer foliage invites fatal comparison with a stuffy room and hard seated, high backed benches ever occurred to him. Ministers and teachers came and passed to other fields or to another world, but Samuel Winterton was never missing from his accustomed place.

Even his immediate family was not aware of the record the lad was making, and when the minister announced one Sunday that the young man had not missed a session in fifteen years no one was more surprised than his own proud mother. Twelve years ago Mr. Winterton fell from a wagon and fractured an arm. That broken bone meant a broken record also, opined the neighbors, but they had reckoned without Mr. Winterton. The following Sunday he appeared in his usual place with the injured limb done up neatly in splints.

In 1897 the late Dr. Louis Klopsch, editor of the Christian Herald, offered a fine indexed and illustrated Bible as a prize for the person who could show the best authenticated record for attendance at Sunday school. That Bible, with a suitable inscription on its flyleaf, occupies a position on the centre table in the Winterton parlor.

HE IS A BACHELOR

Although Sunday school has been Mr. Winterton's particular hobby, he also attends the regular service. Many times he has been urged to teach a class of his own, but has steadfastly refused, saying that he still has so much to learn that he would not attempt to guide others.

Mr. Winerton's parents were Baptists. His father was born in New York city, and his mother was the only daughter of Alexander Ellis, of Albany, N.Y., a brother of John and Edward Ellis, pioneer locomotive builders. The Wintertons settled in Keyport in March, 1856. Samuel Winterton, the first of the three sons, was born eighteen months later. Mr. Winterton, the father, died nine years ago. His express business now is conducted by his sons. Harry Winterton, the youngest of the sons, is married and has a home in Keyport, but Robert Winterton, the other brother, and the only Sunday school pupil remained bachelors and made their home with their mother, a pleasant little gray-haired woman of seventy-seven years.

Mr Winterton is unusually strong and active and belongs to the local hose company. With the exception of the broken arm he has always enjoyed the best of health, which he attributes to early rising and abstinence from tobacco and liquor. He looks forward confidently to adding many more years his record for attendance at Sunday school.

Usual Friday Night Finish of Gathering at Port Arthur Is Prevented by Moonlight Excursion — Big Fight Yet to Come on Socialist Resolution Favoring Co-operative Ownership of Public Utilities.

Port Arthur, Sept. 16.—The Congress of Labor adjourned last evening an hour late, after a strenuous session. William Glockling, Toronto, was elected president, over James Watters, Victoria, and James Somerville, Moose Jaw, Glockling having a plurality vote in the first ballot. R. P. Pettypiece of Vancouver was elected fraternal delegate over Samuel Hadden, Toronto, and E. W. A. Odell, Hamilton. Calgary beat Guelph for the next session of the congress.

The sessions will not likely finish, as in past years, on Friday evening with a night session, as the delegates have accepted an invitation to a moonlight excursion to-night, and there are still to report the most important committees.

Delegate Joseph Gibbons of the Toronto Street Railway Employes, made an appeal yesterday for an amendment to the Railway Act, to compel street railways to provide centre aisles in cars and abolish running boards entirely.

Delegate J. H. Barnett of the Toronto Iron Moulders made a strong plea on behalf of better sanitary conditions in foundries, and his resolution carried.

The principal resolution to be discussed yet is the usual "Socialist resolution," which asks that the constitution be amended by striking out clause six, which pledges the congress to public ownership of street railways, telephones, gas and electric light plants, etc., and to insert in its stead a paragraph calling for the co-operative ownership of all means of wealth production, distribution and exchange. This resolution may take several hours, but will hardly pass.

Purse For New Professor.

London, Sept. 16.—To-day the Rev. Griffith Thomas sails for Canada to take up his work as a professor in Wycliffe College.

An illuminated address was presented to him containing the signatures of the Bishops of Durham, Oxford, Newcastle, Liverpool, Sodor and Man, and Ossory, Bishop Taylor-Smith, Bishop Ingram, the Dean of Canterbury, Archdeacon Maden, Prebendary Webb-Peploe, and Canons Barnes, Lawrence, Christopher, Girdlestone, Streatfield and Denton Thompson, Prof. Dawson Walker, Principal Guy Warman, Lord Kinnaird and others, expressing on behalf of Rev. Mr. Thomas' many friends in England very deep regret at parting with him, and sincere appreciation of his great service rendered.

He was presented with a purse of 500 guineas, while his wife was given a gold pendant.

Tried to Burn Dormitory.

Andover, N.H., Sept. 16.—An attempt to burn the girls' dormitory at Proctor Academy Wednesday night, was frustrated after a blaze had been started. Mrs. Eugene Sawyer, the matron, is in danger of death to-day from a blow delivered by the incendiary, in making his escape. Mrs. Sawyer, on entering the basement suddenly at about 8 o'clock, discovered a strange man in the act of applying a match to a pile of wool.

Understanding Is Reached.

Tokio, Sept. 16.—Asserting that it has the highest authority for denying the report that the visit of Herr Dernberg to Japan presages a German-Japanese convention, The Osaka Mainichi declares that the Japanese Foreign Office believes the German Crown Prince's visit to China is the outcome of an alliance or intimate understanding between Germany, America and China, which will probably be announced in March, 1911.

Stomach Troubles
OFTEN COME FROM WEAK, EXHAUSTED NERVES — GREAT RESULTS FROM USING.
DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

When the nerves become exhausted the first sign of trouble often comes from the stomach. The nerves which control the flow of digestive fluids fail and the result is loss of appetite, indigestion, nervous headache and sleeplessness.

Opiates and narcotics cannot possibly do more than afford temporary relief, and aids to digestion are merely make-shifts. To get well you must get the nervous system back into condition by such treatment as Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. Here is a letter which illustrates the point.

Mr. John McLean, 316 Hunter St., W., Hamilton, states: "My trouble was principally with my stomach. As a result of weak nerves my appetite was poor and I had severe attacks of indigestion. I found that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food relieved me and since using it regularly for some time my digestion is excellent, my appetite is good, my nerves strong and vigorous and I feel an altogether different person. I feel very grateful for the benefit I have derived from this medicine."

If you are in earnest about a cure why not make it thorough by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food regularly and persistently until the whole nervous system is restored and you can know again the joys of living."

Windsor's Case on Tapis.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Active steps are being taken by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to give effect to the application of Windsor for 15,000 horse-power.

Hon. Adam Beck, chairman, yesterday had notices sent to the different municipalities (1) who have signed contracts for power with the commission, and (2) who have passed resolutions and bylaws but have not signed contracts, to send representatives to a meeting at London on Sept. 22, to discuss the terms and conditions under which power shall be supplied to Windsor.

This proceeding is necessary under the hydro-electric legislation, that all municipalities interested shall be consulted when an outside corporation railway or distributing company makes application for power.

The following municipalities have passed bylaws: Windsor, Mitchell, Seaforth, Dundas, Amherstburg, Bothwell, Chatham, Caledon, Dresden, Elmira, Essex, Leamington, Port Stanley, Ridgetown, Tilbury, West Lorne.

The municipalities who have entered into contracts for power at Toronto, Brampton, Weston, Hamilton, Guelph, Berlin, Galt, Hespeler, Waterloo, New Hamburg, London, Norwich, St. Marys, Stratford, Woodstock, Ingersoll, Tillsonburg, St. Thomas.

Father Vaughan Not Misreported.

Montreal, Sept. 16. The newspapers of this city are not very well pleased at the charge made against them by Father Vaughan to the effect that he was grossly misreported while delivering his addresses in this city against the Protestant sects.

As a matter of fact, the famous Jesuit priest appears to have softened, and for cause, as it is a well known fact that the highest episcopal authority of a certain archdiocese cubed the sensational preacher to time, and plainly intimated that no more attacks were to be made on the same lines as the former addresses.

As a matter of fact, the newspapers in their generosity, left out several of the most objectionable passages. The three statements which left so much soreness amongst the non-Catholics were: "Soulless religion," "galvanized corpse," and "if the Protestants do not like it, they can lump it," the latter being suppressed by The Gazette, although the statement, which was perfectly true, was sent all over the country.

Legate Leaves Montreal.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—The cardinal legate said adieu to Montreal yesterday morning, when his eminence, accompanied by Mgr. Bruchesi and Mgr. Tamperi, went up to Valleyfield, where four thousand people welcomed him with Mgr. Emard at their head. All the chief church institutions were visited in detail, and after dining with his lordship the cardinal left for Ottawa. At half-past six his eminence said mass at the cathedral, said adieu to all the priests at the palace and drove to the C.P.R. depot, where a great many people had gathered to wish him bon voyage.

Legate Cheered at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—Cardinal Vannutelli, papal legate, who arrived in Ottawa by special train at 7 o'clock last evening, was accorded an ovation by thousands of citizens, who had gathered at the Central Station to get a glimpse of the celebrated churchman.

A private dinner was given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his honor last evening.

Tim Candy Will Hang.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—Tim Candy, who shot and killed two constables because they tried to recover some rubber boots he had stolen, was found guilty yesterday afternoon and sentenced by Justice St. Pierre to be hanged on the 18th of November.

Candy made a long plea for mercy, saying that the second-hand man tempted him to steal them. The revolver was pointed low and he did not intend to kill.

ON DUTY 21 HOURS.

Jury Investigating Watchman's Death Censures Grand Trunk.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Indignation that a man should be expected and required by the Grand Trunk to work twenty-one hours at a stretch was shown by the coroner's jury enquiring last night into the death of Watchman Edward Thomas Crane, killed at the Dunn avenue crossing on Sept. 12.

At the conclusion of the evidence, the foreman announced that it would not be necessary to retire to return a verdict, but he would like to know if it was a rule of the company that compelled deceased to work for nearly 24 hours straight, or was it an agreement between the two watchmen when changing shifts.

"I want to know this, because we all feel pretty strongly on that point, particularly when the Grand Trunk makes it a boast of not permitting their drivers to work more than so many hours," he said.

Coroner Lynd informed that the company fixed the schedule for watchmen, and agreed that it was a hardship to the men. A rider could be attached to the verdict censuring the company on this point.

"Well, Mr. Coroner, I would like to see the wording of that rider made pretty stiff," said the foreman.

The result of the deliberations was a finding "that deceased came to his death by being struck by an engine on the G.T.R., that it was an accident, but we consider the company censurable for requiring or allowing watchmen to be on duty for 21 hours."

May Lead to Crisis.

Helsingfors, Sept. 16.—The Finnish Diet reassembled yesterday, and re-elected President Svinhufvud. The latter, who is a judge, is persona non grata to the Russian Government.

When the Diet last adjourned its members were in an ugly mood. They had received and promptly returned without action the reupon, to the Emperor, the imperial measure providing for joint legislation by the Douma and Diet, but which in effect extended the authority of the former over the Finnish body and paved the way for the elimination of the grand duchy as a law-making Government. Subsequently the bill was adopted by the Douma and the Council of the Empire.

The present deliberations of the Diet ultimately may lead to a crisis resulting in its summary dissolution.

Bright sunshine and smiling blue skies with the tang of autumn in the air hailed the first public day of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition this morning and with the promise of fine weather confirmed all doubts of the success of the big fair, for if there were any, were swept away. The exhibition is a record breaker, making all the efforts of past years seem pitiful in comparison. The attendance this afternoon has undoubtedly set up a new mark, and there is every indication of a huge crowd for to-night's performance which will give the citizens of Peterborough a splendid opportunity to see the many attractions of the fair.

Peterborough took on a gala holiday appearance early to-day. The morning trains brought in crowds from the towns and villages of the district, the congested appearance of the business section suggesting a circus day crowd. Norwood, Havelock, Hastings, Lakefield, Millbrook, Port Hope and Lindsay and other points in the surrounding section were represented by large crowds, while every road leading into Peterborough saw a stream of vehicular traffic of every description from the sturdy Bain wagon to the lightrunning buggy. All roads led to Peterborough to-day and few homes in the country are not represented in the crowd that has set a new mark for attendance.

No wonder President Leary and his associates are hilariously happy. The way in which the crowd poured into the grounds this afternoon is sufficient cause for their happy smiles as it meant that their work of months was being crowned with magnificent success. There was a big crowd on the grounds this morning but the real rush did not commence until shortly after 12 o'clock. Then it came then and with a vengeance. From that time until late this afternoon the wickets have been literally besieged, the ticket-sellers finding themselves face to face with a exceedingly arduous task in handling out the paste boards fast enough to accommodate the crowd. Every south bound street car is loaded down to the guard-rail despite the fact that the Radial Railway Company realizing the fact that the crowd was a record-breaker, has placed every available car in operation. All the trailers and open cars are in use and the best service possible under the circumstances is being given.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

RICHARD HALL & SON.

With a showing that surpassed every previous millinery display in the history of the big store the annual sale millinery re-openings of Richard Hall & Son Limited, an event that is of supreme importance to feminine Peterborough, took place successfully on Thursday. Never in the annals of the firm has been an exhibition so auspicious of an opening day marked by more sales. This season's styles, of which Messrs. Rich Hall & Son Limited make a complete showing, are so becoming that customers had little difficulty in quickly securing a hat that satisfied and pleased and the result was that Thursday's sales were in advance of any first day millinery re-opening in the career of the firm.

The commodious and handsomely appointed show-rooms on the second floor have been thronged every moment since the opening on Thursday, and the display has been the subject of a host of complimentary remarks. Nothing as shown that does not display the stamp of fashion's approval of the markets of the world are represented.

A glance over the stock of Messrs. Hall & Son reveals the fact that dominating the season's fashion is the becoming mushroom brimmed hat in all sizes, from the very large Rodney effects, through many medium-sized models, to the little droop-affairs that remind one of Kate Greenway pictures and the quaint of the Empire. Most of the new hats roughrooms are long in the back and have a little poke effect, while a variety of sizes is shown the large hats as a rule are side effects. Charlott Today hats with rolled brims of and ribbon are very popular for very dressy and big turbans such as this set by plaited ribbons over their shirred brims.

Velvet and satin again stre the dominant note in material as shown Messrs. Hall & Son's display Velvet and satin combinations while all new, are exceptionally appropria and all this season be carried out in several ways. Popular amon the trimmings used will be found velours and gobelin tapestries into some of which are interwoven with fine gold thread, making a very effective trimming. Messrs. Hall & Son are making a special feature of a pretty part autumn style cap of a new model that seems destined to be popular. The firm has only expert designers in the millinery department and one of the finest millinery plants in Canada.

SOME MAGNIFICENT RUGS.

The coming autumn, indicated in the millinery section, is again attested to in the carpet and rug department of the store. Here the lover of the beautiful will find a display that is indeed magnificent. Among the features in this section, and French Wilton rugs that are copies of antique Oriental rugs sure to attract attention These splendid rugs were shown at the Toronto Exhibition. The very latest lines in carpets, rugs and draperies are on view. The Richard Hall & Son firm prides itself, and reasonably too, upon this department, which is certainly a credit not only to the store but to the city. There are some Axminster imitations of ancient rugs that are well worth seeing. Another feature is the showing of Scotch Axminster seamless rugs, which are exclusively controlled by the firm in this city. Some of these are shown in the very latest innovation, some in three shades of green and others in three shades of brown. This effect is carried out in the draperies that are also shown. The firm designs and cuts draperies for different windows and doors, giving the customer the benefit of years of experience in this line of work and the services of experts in designing.

Popular in the drapery lines may be mentioned a French poplin, beautiful material which is shown in a wide range of colorings. Another dominant material that is much in vogue is the Chantecler scrim, used for over curtains in dining rooms and sitting rooms. Still another popular and artistic draping material is Jaspe stripped velours, sold in many different shades. All these lines are the very latest designs selected with the utmost care and are commended to those who appreciate artistic and beautiful material.

The ladies' ready-to-wear department, always an important feature of the firm's business, also shows the effects of the coming of cooler weather, and is one of the busiest sections of the store. So rapid has been the growth of this department that its capacity has had to be increased and just now the showing in ladies' ready-to-wear garments is the largest ever made by the firm. The stock, carefully selected by experts in this line, is the largest and finest that Messrs. Hall & Son have offered to the public. The ladies' fashion centres have been ransacked, to stock this section, and the most critical customer finds a ready response to her demands. The latest designs in ready-to-wear garments—opera cloaks, etc.—are to be found here. It is learned that shadowed effects over satins will be the most popular for afternoon and evening gowns through the present season.

One gets an introduction into the spirit attendant upon the annual re-opening before one enters the store. A magnificent window display, probably the most ambitious and artistic that the firm has ever made, is an indication of the splendid stock within. The main window is devoted to millinery, the window south of the entrance to exploit the ready-to-wear end of the firm's business, and the north window is devoted to the carpets and rugs. The two south windows especially show an originality and a grasp of the artistic that have called forth enthusiastic commendation from all who have seen them and who among the ladies of Peterborough has not? The main window represents a lady gowned and hatted according to Fashion's latest commands, passing through the gateway of a mansion. The effect is begin out by massive-looking stone walls, and the result is a charming window, filled with the spirit of autumn.

Throughout the big store every department is thoroughly equipped and ready for the rush of fall business. Everything is new and modern with the best that the world's markets offer, and a visit to Peterborough without a thorough inspection of the establishment of Messrs Rich. Hall & Son would not be complete. To Peterborough people it is not necessary to dilate at any length upon the advantages this huge, well-managed store affords its customers. In its autumn dress, as it is just now, and with the showing in every line it makes, however, the store will surprise even its most regular customers.

The Daylight Store.

The Peterborough Exhibition, without an exhibit from the J. T. C. Lang firm (formerly Lang and Maher) would not be complete, and as usual the famous Daylight Store is well represented on the grounds. Mr. Lang and his genial assistant, Mr. Geo. Wesley, have been kept busy shaking hands with their hundreds of friends and acquaintances, among the big crowd at Exhibition Park to-day. For the fame of the Daylight Store is more than local, the excellent, sterling quality of the goods sold are known from one end of the district to the other, and there is no more popular headquarters in men's clothing in the Midland counties.

This is the seventh year in succession that Mr. Lang's firm has had an

RESCUED BRIDE AND GROOM FROM WRECK IN MID-ATLANTIC---ROMANTIC TALE OF THE SEA

Examiner Special.

A short despatch, concerning the following episode, was published in yesterday's Examiner:

MONTREAL, SEPT. 15.—A thrilling tale of the sea, with heroism in life-saving and a reward of $5,000 received this morning in recognition of timely services, was told at the C.P.R. offices by Capt. E. Turnavick, the owner of a fishing fleet on the Labrador coast.

The captain is a seasoned salt, wearing a suit of blue cloth, with shaggy brown hair and beard, and he told his story with all the gusto that might be expected from a man who has dropped into the possession of a cheque for a thousand pounds.

The captain's headquarters are Byron Bay, a good way north of Hamilton Inlet, but it was while cruising in his fishing sloop around Mokkavik Cape, beyond the strip of coast over which the Government of Newfoundland has jurisdiction that he came upon the wreckage of the yacht Freda, with a young man and woman clinging to it. It was Mr. E. Barclay-Cutts, the son of a wealthy London banker and his wife, a young lady in London's smart society, to whom he had been married six weeks previously, and with whom he had started for a yachting tour as their wedding trip, from the northern home of the family, Culla Hall, on the Shetland Isles. The crew consisted of three other persons, who attended to different duties on the yacht, and who were all drowned.

It was on the morning of July 29th that Captain Turnavick observed the couple with a portion of the wreckage which had been lifted on to a shelf of rock on the precipitous coast. It was apparent that the yacht had been dashed to pieces against the cliffs, and it seemed as if by miracle the young couple had escaped being carried to the bottom by the angry seas that had been raging the previous night. They were both drenched and shivering, but were unhurt by the tempest. It was with very considerable difficulty and at some personal risk that he got them from where the wreckage was perched and he took them on board his own vessel and down the coast to his residence, where they remained for a few days until a fishing steamer left for England. On this they were taken home. Mr. Coutts told the captain before he left that a reward would be sent to Montreal for him, and here he found a letter with many expressions of gratitude and the sum of a thousand pounds.

Examiner Special.

LYNN, MASS., SEPT. 16.—The wedding took place here to-day of Frederick W. Nicholls of Toronto, son of Mr. Frederick Nicholls, wealthy manager of the Canadian General Electric Co., of Peterborough. This wedding was the culmination of a romance, which began years ago in St. Catharines, when Mary Hennessy, the bride, a girl at school, met young Nicholls, who was a student at Ridley College. She was then attached to the convent school at Niagara Falls. Rt. Rev. Monsignor Wheeling performed the ceremony. The bridegroom's father and many Canadian friends were present. The happy couple departed on an European wedding tour.

WAS PULLING IN BIG 'LUNGE WHEN CANOE CAPSIZED AND ONE OF OCCUPANTS DROWNED

Mr. Thomas Blois, 265 Rubidge Street, Met Death Near Jubilee Point Last Evening---Had Been Spending Some Holidays at Hatrick's Point With His Brother From Toronto---Had Been Resident of Peterborough for Fifteen Years---Death Was Apparently Due to Shock.

Another to the already long list of drowning fatalities that have occurred in the vicinity of Peterborough during the past summer, was added last evening, when Mr. Thomas Blois, 265 Rubidge street, met his death at Rice Lake. With his brother, Walter Blois, of Toronto, and S. W. Rose, of this city, the deceased had been camping near Jubilee Point. Early in the evening they went over to the Point, and it was when returning about twenty minutes past six, that the unfortunate accident occurred. On leaving Jubilee they put out a trawling line. Mr. Walter Blois was paddling and the deceased was holding the line. Feeling something tugging at the line, he gave it to his brother to pull in. A large lunge had been hooked and Mr. Walter Blois just about had it in the canoe, when, in some manner, it upset the boat and the two men were thrown into the water. The deceased was a good swimmer, but, strange to say, his brother, who survives, was not a swimmer. After the canoe overturned the brother got astride it and then held on to Mr. Thomas Blois. But, apparently, his death was due to shock, as he was rescued before sinking for the last time. His brother held on to him until assistance came.

About twenty-five minutes later two young men were on the scene in a launch. They brought Mr. Walter Blois and the deceased to the cottage at Hatrick's Point.

The remains were later brought to the city by Messrs. Comstock, undertakers.

The late Mr. Blois was fifty-three years of age and had been a resident of Peterborough for the past fifteen years. He came here from Port Hope. During that time he has been signalman at the G.T.R. diamond, and this morning to an Examiner reporter, his fellow watchman, Mr. S. Penrose, paid a glowing tribute to the deceased. He felt keenly the loss of such an estimable friend. With his brother and Mr. Rose he had only gone down to Hatrick's Point on Monday, to enjoy a week's rest and fishing. He was a member of All Saints' Anglican church, and of the Woodmen of the World. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and one daughter, Miss Molly, of this city. He is also survived by two brothers and two sisters, namely, Messrs. Walter of Parkdale, and John of Toronto, and Mrs. Ellerby of Uxbridge, and Mrs. George Pearson of Chicago. The funeral will take place from the family residence, 265 Rubidge street, on Monday afternoon, at 2.30, to the Little Lake cemetery.

Motive For Which Woman Was Murdered By Her Husband May Never Be Known

Examiner Special.

VANCOUVER, SEPT. 15. The motive for which Mrs. George Reid was murdered in a shack last Tuesday at Clayburn will probably never be known until the alleged murderer and husband of the deceased, is captured and locked in a cell.

At the present time insanity seems the only substantial theory, with a possibility that the deed was committed as the result of a long cherished jealousy, but the former reason seems to hold sway at the present time.

Mr. William Howden, brother of the murdered woman, stated to a World reporter this morning that he had known George Reid for years, having met him first at his home near Midland Ontario, and that to his knowledge the murdered had never shown any symptoms of jealousy. "My sister and her husband seemed to understand each other and they always got on remarkably well together," said he, "and during the month which George Reid stayed here with us I am sure that I would have detected any signs of jealousy."

That both Mrs. Reid and her husband were on excellent terms the night before the tragedy is shown in a letter which was written by Mrs. Reid while her husband was standing beside her dictating it. This was brought out at the inquest when two line men who were boarding in the house stated that the couple were writing together Monday evening.

The events of the letter showed conclusively that trouble was the last thing either of them were thinking about. Mrs. Reid described the village of Clayburn, its disadvantages, the house they were living in and also extended an invitation to Mr. Howden and family to visit them in the near future. The completion of the Chilliwack line was also spoken of, showing how easy it would be for her and George Reid to go to Vancouver. In the last paragraph Mrs. Reid called attention to the fact that her birthday was on the morrow and closed by sending love from both George and herself. C

This letter was never posted and was found by police officers, who searched the house after the murder. The letter was opened at the request of the coroner and was then mailed to the brother in this city. Other letters have been received recently from the deceased and all went to show that both George and herself were living happily. It is this fact that leads many to believe that if the husband is guilty, the hideous crime was committed while Reid was temporarily demented, the cause probably being the death of their infant son about a month ago.

"They had been married fourteen months and I do not think the murder was committed through jealousy," said Mr. Howden, this morning, "for I know my sister was not the kind of a woman who would cause her husband to harbour a jealous thought."

It is now four days since the murder, and until the present time Reid has made good his escape. Bloodhounds have been put on his trail, the country has been searched by the police of British Columbia with the assistance of United States officers, but he has eluded them all so far effectively.

Local Suspect Released.

Mistaken for George Reid, a man named L. B Case, who bore a striking likeness to the alleged murderer, was arrested on Carroll street last night, but allowed to go by Magistrate Bull to-day, who was satisfied that there had been a mistake.

Police constables were informed that a man answering to the description of Reid was making enquiries about Clayburn and coming across Case they considered they were justified in arresting him, because he gave unsatisfactory answers to the questions put to him.

Called upon to give evidence on his own behalf, Case said he had obtained an employment ticket from an employment agent, and had work to go to at Clayburn. He produced the ticket in court and proved that he had a roll of blankets and other necessaries at the C. P. R. wharf.

A FLOURISHING RAILWAY AND A FLOURISHING COUNTRY.

The Canadian Pacific Railway corporation is to be congratulated upon its splendid showing in traffic earnings. A revenue of $94,849,000 for last year is stupendous; it is nearly three times the total revenue of the Dominion three-quarters of a score of years ago. While such an outcome is a tribute to the enterprise and energy of the railway management, it is no less a tribute to the growth prosperity and commercial activity of Canada, which has made it possible to compile such a formidable total of income. This becomes all the more significant when it is remembered that the United States railways as a preliminary to giving better transportation service are clamoring for increased rates. With the Canadian Pacific as a standard in this country, a reduction of rates might well consist with paying traffic.

THANKSGIVING.

The flag streaming in the mild September breeze, from the ivy-hid tower of St John's church, yesterday, indicated that it was the day of the parochial harvest festival; but to the thoughtful had an import beyond the one church upon which the flag was displayed. It suggested that under that flag we enjoy blessings, privileges and opportunities, greater and more important in high national life than good crops. We enjoy absolute and unchallenged civil and religious liberty; we enjoy the protection of justly administered laws, which hamper no good man in the enjoyment of legitimate living. In thanksgiving we act the part of Christians and gentlemen. We recognize and acknowledge our dependence upon the universal Giver, as in human intercourse a courtesy conferred demands courteous acknowledgment. If we feel in our hearts the stirrings of gratitude, an expression of them is demanded. A harvest festival service is a corporate way of giving expression to our gratitude. It is to be noted with regret that occasions of this kind are marked by a very scant attendance of men. The Thanksgiving congregations are composed overwhelmingly of women. We should naturally expect a predominating attendance of, especially business, men, to whom, as to no other class, a thanksgiving service, to acknowledge a bountiful harvest, should appeal. In business, banking and financial circles the annual inquiry is as to the probable outcome of the crops. Upon this is based the course of action of these interests. Their success is absolutely dependent upon the bounty of the Divine Husbandman, who grows all our crops. Business men as such are, therefore, under strong moral compulsion to show their gratitude. Some old poet says: "He that's ungrateful has no crime but one; all other vice may pass for virtue to him."

THE REAL BOND.

We set up monuments to men who have murdered a few thousand other men and spent a few million dollars in the interests of a nation, or in the interest of national aggrandizement, or in the interest of national pride, or obstinacy. How much more deserving of credit and acclaim is the warrior who, by peaceful military methods and through national and patriotic spirit, confers a great imperial benefit without the sacrifice of a single life, or the spending of a cent of anybody's money, but his own. Sir Henry Pellatt's action in taking the Queen's Own to England at his own expense and a hundred thousand dollars will by no means meet the bill serves more than one great purpose. In the first place it is a splendid advertisement for Canada, it shows the patriotic stuff of which Canadians are made. It gives our insular cousins an idea of the manner of men of which our militia is composed, for, while the Queen's Own has acquitted itself splendidly all along the line, the greatest point is this is that they are but a type in spirit and discipline, in physique and efficiency, of scores of other Canadian regiments. These things combined serve to emphasize, promote, and confirm the unity of the Empire. While pocket patriots and filthy lucre loyalists are trying to make trade profit the measure of the loyalty that answers as imperial cement, in a large way, the visit of the Queen's Own to England gives point to Hon. Rodolph Lemieux's sentiment, that the real bond of imperial unity is one of heart and affection. It demonstrates that Canada has, as she can have, no higher, no other aspiration than to become a greater nation within the empire. Family affection does not depend upon the state of the larder, fat or lean, the family love binds the family together. In the family of empire, the bread and butter bond is not the thing.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Question for a school boy: What public man in Ontario does this Shaksperean sentence suggest?—"I am Sir Oracle?"

Mr. W. H. Taft, who was president of the United States till Mr Roosevelt "came back," was fifty-three years old yesterday.

Washing dirty linen in public shows questionable taste; washing soiled linen in public—institutions is—a little more modest, anyway.

Sir James Whitney, in England, with vociferous assurance undertakes to run the Empire and keep John Bull straight; but Sir James Whitney, in Ontario, refuses to touch technical education with long tongs, unless the Dominion Government supply the funds.

"TIN-POT" CANADIANS REBUKED

(London Advertizer)

The contemptible, unpatriotic spirit which has prompted the sneering and jeering at Canada's naval enterprise has been sharply rebuked by an Englishman, an experienced officer of the Royal Navy, Commander Roper, who has been appointed chief of staff in the Canadian naval department.

Speaking at the Ottawa Exhibition, he deplored the practice of flinging such epithets as "tin-pot" at the proposed Canadian navy, and asserted the practical utility of the new vessels. In his opinion, shared by Lord Charles Beresford, Great Britain has made ample provision for Dreadnoughts, and mostly needs cruisers and destroyers to strengthen the intelligence department.

Commander Roper said if he were asked as to the relative importance of the various items composing a navy he would place them as follows: men, ships, docks. Canada would be doing a great service to the empire by training and supplying seamen. It would take years and more money than Canada felt like spending at present to build Dreadnoughts, but a considerable naval force could be trained in a few years, and would be capable of rendering the mother country great assistance in time of war. The im*perial navy was not built in a day*, and the Canadian navy must be given time to grow.

The representatives of the people have declared for a Canadian navy, and even those who preferred the alternative of paying tribute to another country, and allowing it to do the fighting for Canada, if need be, should accept the law of the land, and cease decrying a Canadian undertaking. The Canadian navy will some day put its detractors to shame.

A N IMPORTANT DECISION.

(Montreal Herald.)

At a conference held in Toronto last week, Hon. Mr. Mackay, leader of the Liberal party in the Ontario Legislature, definitely declined to commit the party to the advocacy of prohibition of the liquor traffic, as demanded by the extreme wing of temperance advocates. It seems to be agreed that the directing minds of the party support Mr. Mackay in the attitude he has adopted. On the other hand, Mr. F. S. Spence, in a letter to the press, challenges both the propriety and the wisdom of the decision. Mr Spence seems to feel that if the Liberals declared for prohibition the temperance people would restore them to power. That, however, is very much open to doubt; those who in their ordinary conversation put temperance first among practical issues have never shown, in the past, that zeal for the cause, furnishes a strong enough cohesive force to keep them from dividing just as other men divide on the matter of party preference. They have shown that they can be ungrateful; they have never shown that their support can be counted upon if their views are given effect. But even supposing a successful prohibition party could be evolved out of the Liberal party—and the party would have to undergo great changes before that happened—the question arises whether the cause is one which a political party should make its own. Grant that liquor is a curse; grant that treating leads to moral and physical breakdown; grant that the existence of places where liquor can be bought tends to make easier the descent; still, there is a strong case to be made against the remedial crusade being undertaken by a political party whose real object is to get possession of the reins of government. Persuade the boy, dissuade the man, let the majority in any municipal entity take its own choice of measures for securing the local good; but it does not follow that the advisers of the Crown must all be committed to the enforcement of prohibition as an agency of social, moral and religious good. If it be true that a majority of the people are committed to the belief, it makes no difference. Here in Quebec, as we have just had a forceful reminder, an enormous majority are committed to the belief that the Roman Catholic doctrine makes for the highest social, moral and religious good; yet what would be said if it were argued that the whole force of civil government ought to be exerted, to give effect to that view? The formation of character is one thing, the business of government not at all the same thing. They bear upon each other, no doubt, but it is just as well that we have public men who are able to see where the line should be drawn and who are strong enough to draw it. Decrease in drinking is highly desirable, but it is also an object of some consequence that the Liberal party should be preserved, consistent with its many-sided past and equipped for the tasks the future has in store for it.

FOR THE KIDNEYS

A Guaranteed Treatment. Money Back If It Fails.

Kidney diseases are more prevalent than is generally supposed, and are not always recognized as such. What was at first but a slight derangement of the kidneys often results in indigestion, rheumatism, anaemia, chronic and very painful headache, neuralgia, eye weakness, and other diseases of a most aggravating type. Therefore it is highly important and absolutely necessary that the kidneys and the urinary system be kept in an active and healthy condition.

After a thorough experience with the most successful forms of kidney treatment we are confident that the one remedy which embraces the most desirable, safe and efficacious curative qualities, so necessary to the successful treatment and positive eradication of kidney diseases in general, is Rexall Kidney Remedy.

We are so positive that Rexall Kidney Remedy is unexcelled, and that it will do all we claim, that we will sell it with our own personal guarantee that it will not cost the user a cent if it should fail to give entire satisfaction.

We particularly recommend Rexall Kidney Remedy for kidney ailments that are chronic and which resist ordinary treatment. We believe, if taken according to directions with regularity and persistency for a reasonable length of time, it will positively remove all symptoms and effect a permanent cure.

Surely we could not more strongly demonstrate our faith in Rexall Kidney Remedy, and our generous guarantee should convince the most skeptical that we would not dare make such a statement except we know that we are talking about. We urge you to try Rexall Kidney Remedy at our risk. Two sizes: 50c. and $1.00 a bottle. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner of George and Charlotte streets.

TURNIPS ROOTS ARE POOR THIS SEASON

From Farm and Dairy.

My turnips are developing very poor roots this season. Instead of one large symetrical root, there are numerous small roots, the size of the finger. The tops also are poor and yellow. What is the cause of this?—J. M., Peel Co., Ont.

Your turnips are affected by a fungus disease commonly known as finger and toes or club root (Plasmodiophthora Brassica). This disease lives in the ground over winter and affects the turnip crop or any Cruciferous plant the following year. In order to get rid of this disease any Cruciferous plants, such as turnips, cabbages, or rape, should not be grown on this land for six or seven years as the disease will live in the ground for that length of time.

Turnips so affected should not be fed to stock. If, however, they are absolutely needed for feed, the manure should be kept separate and drawn back on the land on which the crop has been harvested. An application of lime will aid in ridding the land of this disease. If lime is applied, another crop of turnips might safely be grown in five years, otherwise it would be safer to allow the land to stand for about seven years.

The exhibit is in ... its usual place among the notables and no one should visit the Exhibition without dropping in upon the display. A visit there will prove profitable as well as interesting, and Mr. Longard has assistants who are on hand to supply courteously any information in regard to garments and their cost, as may be desired. And it may be mentioned, that this store has been kept busy. One cannot get away from the Daylight Store anywhere on the grounds. All through Exhibition Park, artistically painted signs call attention to the excellence of the firm's stock. They meet the eye everywhere around the place and the Peterborough Exhibition and the J. T. C. Lang store seemed inextricably interwoven.

Gillespie's Display.

An exhibit that appeals directly to farmers, particularly practical farmers, is the exhibit of farm and dairy machinery, made by Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, whose exhibit is always one of the features of the fair that is surrounded with eager visitors. The display is to be found this year, almost opposite the main building, in a position that attracts attention at once. Chief in the display is the favourite Simplex Cream Separator, which possesses valuable improvements that no other separator has. The two most important of these are exclusively controlled by the makers of the Simplex and consist of the bukshide separating device and the self-balancing bowl. The Simplex separator is one that has friends all over the country, gained by the splendid satisfaction that it has given wherever used. A device that will attract the housewife is situated just outside the tent and consists of a patent clothes reel, simple and effective in its method of operation and a labour-saving device that will make every woman who uses it wild to possess one for herself. Another machine that will be admired is the Eureka sanitary churn, already widely and favourably known throughout the county. The up-to-date farmer needs no introduction to the merit of this splendid churn, it manifold advantages have not only made it familiar wherever enterprise is known. A patent folding bath tub is a novelty that will be appreciated by the fair sex as it provides him with the same advantages as his friend in the city.

Singer Sewing Machines.

Nothing attracts feminine eyes quicker or holds their attention longer than a sewing machine and naturally the display of the Singer sewing machines in the main building has been the centre of attention all day today, and will continue to be so throughout the Exhibition. Mr. J. W. Stuart, the wide-awake agent, is in charge and he has been kept busy in pointing out the advantages of his machines and distributing handsome souvenirs which are much in demand. Various types of these world-wide famous machines were on view, some shown in operation, and Mr. Stuart is to be congratulated upon his enterprise in arranging such an up-to-date and attractive display. No house-wife should fail to see the Singer sewing machine exhibit.

Churchill's Sectional Steel Ladders.

This light and durable ladder fulfils the requirements of insurance policies and complies with the law requiring fixture ladders on all village roofs. The manufacturers are showing it on the main building at the Fair and are canvassers in every township.

J. J. Turner and Sons.

As one reviews the importance of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition year after year, from the time of J. J. Turner and Sons' annual move to make it more complete and better for the exhibitor, Mr. J. J. Turner, at the head of the Exhibition and also at the expense he has been at to play that is befitting to the fair. That he has succeeded admirably in his aims is the unanimous verdict of all who come into the fair, even the visitor who is not far from the main entrance. The display is set off by attractive tent, which just hampers. Conspicuous interest is being taken in the exhibit on account of the novelty of some of the tents shown. Chief among these is a moveable fully equipped house tent, which would make an ideal summer home for a moderate sized family. Equipped with a kitchen and a veranah out-run, the tent is as comfortable as a cottage, and possesses the additional and important advantage that it may be moved about and set up anywhere at will. The tent was shown at the Toronto Exhibition this year, where it attracted much complimentary comment not only from the general public, but from the management of the Exhibition as well. Messrs. Turner and Sons are showing as well, a number of other tent novelties which are well worth seeing, and no one should miss this attractive display, which is a tribute to the enterprise and resourcefulness of the well known firm. Good use have been in the Turner exhibit in the past the showing of 1910 surpasses the display of every one year succeeding, keeping pace with the growth of the Exhibition.

Wesley Bros., Clothes Doctors.

Wesley Brothers, the clothes doctors, whose business place is at the corner of Bridge and Charlotte streets, and whose main occupation is to keep the people of Peterborough always neatly and well dressed, have an unique and attractive exhibit in a prominent place on the first floor of the main building. Their display is an indication of the completeness of the finished work of the firm. Two sections of the same coat, showing it "before" and "after" treatment by the clothes doctors, indicate that Messrs. Wesley Brothers are specialists in their line. An inspection of this feature of the display shows what up-to-date and modern methods can accomplish in the way of renovating clothes that have lost their first bloom. Samples of ladies' blouses and shirt waists as they appear after they come from the hands of the clothes doctors are shown and have convinced the ladies that they know what they will do after the ... with soiled garments. Messrs. Wesley Brothers have made many new friends for the modern by their showing in the main building. A large number of souvenir post cards are being distributed and are much in demand among exhibition visitors who are carrying them off as souvenirs of the big exhibition.

Plenty of Labor.

Winnipeg, Sept 16. William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, in an interview here, said his company had a plentiful supply of labor for the new lines under construction in British Columbia, and had no idea of attempting to secure Oriental labor. He considered Nelson preferable to Churchill as the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway. He hoped the Government would listen to his representations on the subject of operating that line, and give the Canadian Northern that opportunity. It would have built on from Pas Mission if the Government had not announced its intention of constructing the line.

He was arrested.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

How long is it since you've had your pictures taken?

If it is over five years, that means that you are morally due at the photographer's again, and consequently that to-night's chat may interest you a bit.

In the first place, as to what to wear.

Don't wear anything stiff and heavy that will not fall in pretty lines. Soft silks or satins, chiffon, crepe de chene, thin veilings or voiles, and soft muslins take best.

Don't wear anything stiffly pleated or shirred. Full, softly gathered things that can be gracefully and easily draped are much better.

Don't wear dark things. The shadows are too heavy. White ivory, pale blue, pink and yellow take the light the best.

If you wear a shirt waist be sure it fits perfectly, especially around the neck, and that it lies flat across the front.

If you prefer nobbiness to prettiness, a picture in a tailored suit and hat may please you. Such pictures are rather in favour just now. Only be sure that the the coat is perfectly plain tailored and fits you well, and have the hat a sailor, a very simply tailored hat, or a gainsboro. For a hat picture, gainsboro hats are always the best, both because they never go out of style and because they are the most artistic.

If you are anxious for a picture that will never look old fashioned, low neck and draped bust is the best, of course.

Do not be afraid of this if your neck is thin. The line of the thin neck no matter how thin it is, is artistic. Most photographers would rather work with a thin neck than with a fat one, because in a fat neck they have to "face off" the lines to make it look well, and it is much easier to fill out the hollows.

Don't have just head pictures. Your body is as much a part of you and a expression of yourself as your face. Many photographers would rather have a well poised, gracefully draped figure to work with than a pretty face.

Study yourself in a mirror beforehand and find whether you look best full face, three-quarters or profile, and give your findings to the photographer by way of suggestion.

When you are in the act of having the pictures taken, don't allow yourself to feel strained. As far as you can, while still keeping the pose the photographer desires, relax. Breathe naturally. Don't try to hold your breath. Consciously and fully relax.

Last, and most important of all, according to a prince among photographers, BLINK YOUR EYES. No, I haven't made a mistake. I don't mean the opposite. Unless you have very light eyelashes you can blink your eyes several times during the exposure and it will not spoil the picture. Quite the contrary. For if you let them blink regularly and just as you naturally would, instead of conscientiously trying to hold them open, you will eliminate that stare, stare, which has doubtless spoiled many pictures.

ST. JOHN'S HARVEST FESTIVAL AND THANKSGIVING SERVICE

Held Last Evening—Interior Was Beautifully Decorated With Flowers, Fruit and Grain—Eloquent Sermon by Toronto Divine.

MUCH CAUSE FOR THANKS

The annual Harvest Festival service of St. John's church was held last night. A large congregation assembled in the beautifully decorated church, in which abundant and tastefully effective trophies of the harvest grain, fruits, and flowers, were the chief features. Never, before, perhaps, has the church been so elaborately decked with such a profusion of flowers, fruits, and grain. The taste and devotion of the members of the congregation were equally given effect.

The service, in its bright and jubilant character corresponded. It was choral, and was conducted by Rev. Charles Carpenter, Assistant, with full choir, which was unusually strong in numbers and effective in its work. The procession to the chancel, on this occasion, by way of the porch, occupied the whole length of the central aisle. Mr Carpenter was assisted in the service by Rev W. R. Trumpour, rector of All Saints', and Rev. Dr. Lunnfeldt, rector of St Luke's, read the lessons. The psalms and hymns—those appointed for the harvest—were special, and the strong leading of the choir, as well as the spirit of the occasion, seemed to inspire the congregation, which took a very hearty part in the singing of the joyous and familiar hymns, as well as in the service. In the offertory the choir—Mr. H. W. Morphet taking the tenor solo—gave an inspiring production of a ringing and joyous composition. The sermon preached by Rev. C. A Seager, St Cyprian's, Toronto, was a most appropriate appeal to grateful recognition of the bounty of Divine Providence; logically supported by plain, but effective reasoning.

The service was conducted by Rev Mr. Seager, Rector for St. Cyprian's church, Toronto. He took his text from the second chapter, 5th verse of Isaiah "O house of Israel, come ye and let us walk in the light of the Lord."

Rev. Mr. Seager dwelt at some length discussing the fact that the harvest festival reminds us of our dependence on the Lord. The necessity of self reliance was needed in the battle of life.

We believe that God is the power of intellect, art and will; we acknowledge Him as a personal being. God Himself is manifested in the flesh and we know only a little of what He loved, what He did, and what He thought, but we do knew a little. It is one grand thing to have a revelation of divine faith and truth. Life is the great teacher by which God gives us a revelation of His own soul. Under the influence of all these facts we believe that God is the Father, if this is not so our prayers are foolishness. But we do know that God is a personal being and we believe in him as such. He has produced the harvest and we acknowledge this.

Now-a-days we can understand the idea in St. Paul's mind, when he said, "In Him we live, move and so do all things." The living is the principle of everything—God is living. And it is glorious to believe the fact that He moves in His glory. God is the life and all things are in Him. We acknowledge that God has active operations in all human affairs. We acknowledge our absolute dependence on Him alone. A harvest festival reminds us of our dependence in God. Here again we see that the necessity of successful self reliance is needed in the battle of life.

There is a great difference between self sufficiency and self reliance. Our sufficiency is of God who has given us our power. The worst sometimes surprises us. This is occurring every day. Just when we are in need of rain and no signs of it God sends it—He sends it when He sees fit.

The reverend speaker went on to say, in reference to the harvest, that the people of Ontario should give special thanks to God for the abundant harvest they had this year, as compared to other provinces. God's great generosity toward us. Everything man can do, he is responsible for, yet we are dependent on God. Sin is self-sufficiency, let us have that thought brought home to us. Let our faith be as simple and true as that of a little child.

Out of our festival comes a summons from God. To acknowledge our dependence on God and then refuse to serve Him is an appalling inconsistency. "Come let us walk in the revelations of the Lord." Most of us are willing to confess our belief in God, but when it comes to shaping our life we do not do it according to our belief.

Our knowledge is so advanced in comparison to what it was ages ago that we would not listen for a moment to the old religions. "Keep walking in the light."

"He that putteth his hands to the plough and turneth back is not worthy." Mr Seager in his concluding remarks, advised his hearers to search their own hearts and find if they are really deep in God, then, "be consistent." The church wants you, man calls her you, let us "walk in the light of the Lord," he concluded.

GOOD MAN COMING

Mr. Geo. A. Warbnrton Will Be Present at the Y. M. C. A. Banquet Next Week

Great enthusiasm was caused last evening, when the General Secretary announced to the campaigners the fact that Mr. George A. Warburton, of Toronto, would be present at the banquet next Tuesday evening, and would deliver the address of the evening.

Mr. Warburton is the leading Association man in Canada to-day. He has spent thirty years of his life in the work of the Y. M. C. A., and has been the General Secretary of some of the leading Associations of North America. No man is better known in Y. M. C. A. ranks than he is. He is a man of literary talent, having been the editor of one of the Y.M.C.A. publications for some years. He is also a poet of real worth. Only recently he composed a little poem called "Pass the Ball," which has been quoted very extensively in the papers. He is a splendid speaker and a promoter of the first quality. Every man who can be present ought to hear Mr. Warburton next Tuesday evening. A fee of twenty-five cents has been placed on this meeting to enable all men to feel free to come.

The work of the campaign is now well in hand and the chairmen of the committees are confident of success. The Boys' Cabinet has asked to have a hand in this campaign and their representative, Mr. Wallie Armstrong, was at last evening's meeting. The boys say that they can get in at least 150 new members and intend to prove this to the seniors.

A PLACE IN THE FAMILY

depend on one medicine, what would you choose? It is not difficult to guess what medicine Mrs James Gray, Sartella, N. B., would choose, for she writes: "For five years my husband and I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills for kidney troubles, billousness and constipation and find them indispensable as a family medicine."

AN ATTRACTIVE WINDOW

At the J. D. Tully Drug Store—Gave Away Dentyne Gum

The George street window of the J. D. Tully drug store is attracting much attention to-day by its very attractive appearance. It is very prettily arranged with a small cedar ribbed canoe, fitted out with a sail. The canoe is only nine feet in length, is a Peterborough Canoe Co. one, and has been shown all over Canada. The window calls particular attention to the new chewing gum, "Dentyne," five thousand samples of which were given away at the store this afternoon.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

MARKS BROS.

The Joe Marks Dramatic Company was greeted with a large audience at the Grand Opera House last evening, when a strong caste presented the thrilling play "Down Where the Orange Blossoms Grow." Each member of the troupe played their part in a most capable manner, and their renditions were greeted with frequent outbursts of applause. The specialties, too, were of a distinctly high order of merit. They will appear for the balance of the week at the Grand.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Y. M. C. A. men's meeting will open fro the season Sunday afternoon. The attraction for next Sunday will be the singing of the Southern Jubilee Singers. The big basso, Mr. E. S. Thomas, is the possessor of an unusually beautiful voice, of long range, and he knows how to use it. It is always true and mellow and wonderfully deep. He is known as the best jubilee singer in America, and is a man of high Christian principle. These coloured singers are singing for the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday, free of charge, and will be heard with pleasure by the men of Peterborough. Mr. Riddiford, the popular pastor of the Park Street Baptist church, will deliver the address. Not one dry moment from 4.15 to 5.15.

POLICE COURT

A man named Lynch was the only offender in the Police Court this morning. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly in a public place last night. He said he was only in the city about two hours, when he got into trouble, and it was his first time. He came here from Ireland some time ago and claimed to be working steadily. He comes from the lumber camps. "I only took a few glasses, your Honour," he said, "and it went to my head." However, as it was his first offence he was allowed to go on the promise that he would get out of the city.

SWEETNESS OF BRETHREN DWELLING TOGETHER IN UNITY

In addition to showing the devotion and good taste of the ladies of the congregation, the Harvest festival decorations of St. Johns, revealed a beautiful spirit of interdenominational kindness and good will. Citizens of other communions were most liberal in their contribution of flowers and other objects for decoration. A Welles street lady contributes and to insure safe delivery, conveyed a fair and a veritable dray-load of beautiful flowers to the church. A gentleman of another communion contributed, and with outsolicitation, an unique decoration, two huge loaves of bread, moulded and baked in the form of wheaten sheaves. Other instances of a similar kind were recorded that are a subject of appreciative and grateful comment. These things may be small in themselves compared with the great verities of religion, but they are eloquent evidence of the splendid spirit of friendship, good will and coopera-

IT'S WORRY THAT KILLS

Nothing so wastes the vital nerve force as worry. Nothing so certainly retards restoration to health. Get out into the sunshine, be cheerful, use Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food to rebuild the wasted, nervous system, and you will be surprised how quickly there will be a change for the better. This advice will be better than gold to you if you will but follow it.

Autumn Millinery Exhibit

Beautiful Creations direct from New York's leading Millinery Houses and many exquisite styles copied from New York and Paris models.

EACH SEASON has its own peculiarity of style and finish which is portrayed in women's headwear. This Autumn there are numerous features which call attention and which are most remarkable. One small yet prominent feature of our displays is the dainty hand-made flowers and foliage which adorn the New York creations imported by us direct from "Gage" and other New York millinery concerns. Our showing has been commented on favourably by many women of taste who viewed it the first two days of our Opening. All are invited to come and see our fine Exhibit on 2nd Floor. Come Saturday.

Our New J. and American Shoes for Women

The popularity of the American shoe is widely known—the styles are such that it is hard for other makers to compete with them and retain the reasonable prices you pay for the Yankee productions. J. and K. brand of Women's Shoes are one of the best American makes and extremely in favour on the other side.

We have stocked eleven of the swell lasts for the approval of the dressiest women in Peterborough. They're without doubt the most chic styles yet shown here at such a modest price. All lasts and all sizes shown in the different styles. Prices range $3 to $5.50

A SHOE SNAP FOR SATURDAY

Ladies' dongola kid Blucher Bals., three lasts, dull tops, extension soles, and all sizes for women. These shoes are very neat and dressy and particularly good for the "second best" wear. Saturday, very special price ..... $3

Ready-to-Wear Exhibit

Second Floor

Along comes the Autumn weather, faster and faster; cooler days will soon be here and warmer garments must become the most looked for of all wearables. The Autumn showing of Women's Suits and Coats is most elegant, the styles are the latest shown anywhere—not every style that has been brought forth, but, the cream of the market—both Canadian and American. Our Suits and Coats above the low priced garments are all exclusive both to us and to our patrons—no two suits or coats alike. Come and view our fine showing Saturday.

MISSES' AND LADIES' COATS $10

An unbeatable range of Autumn Coats—coats for wear for both Fall and Winter. They're made with the new high collar and are neatly trimmed. Shades: navy, green, brown and black, all sizes. Saturday, very special ..... $10

They come in lengths 2 to 3 yards, which are sufficient for boys' knickers, tots' suits, etc. A Snap for Mothers

WEDDING BELLS

HATHERLY—DRUMMOND

At the home of Mr. James Drummond, Keene, the marriage of Miss Edythe Drummond, third daughter of Mr and Mrs. J. M. Drummond and Mr. Wilbert Hatherly of Winnipeg, was solemnized by Rev. Mr. McDonald, Keene. The bride was given away by her father, and was gowned in white nuns veiling, with wedding veil, of tulle, was caught in the coiffure of lace of the day, and she carried a beautiful shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, bridal roses and maiden hair fern.

Mr. and Mrs. Hatherly left the same evening for Winnipeg, where they will reside.

DEPARTING STUDENTS

Are Handsomely Remembered at St. John's Church

Mr. Roland Palmer and Mr. Donald Denham, on the eve of their departure to enter upon Collegiate studies, were remembered handsomely by the interest to which their work in St. John's church has been given.

Mr. Palmer, who goes to Trinity University, has been a most faithful member of the choir and a worker among the boys. Last night after Harvest Festival services, he was presented by its members, with a framed photographic group picture of the choir.

To-day, on behalf of the Sunday school, of which Mr. Denham, who goes to Corpus University, has been for some time secretary, he was presented with an elegant portfolio of Canadian scenery.

Both young men have in their church relations been faithful workers and examples of good living. They will be much missed and followed by the good wishes and prayers of choir, Sunday school and congregation.

PEOPLE POURED IN EARLY TO-DAY AT THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS

The crowd at the grounds this morning was unusually large. People poured in early, taking advantage of the beautiful morning to look over the exhibits. The midway is larger than ever and the merry cry of the "barker" mingled with the shrill whistle of the miniature railroad, and the penetrating music of the steam organ of the merry-go-round, made an ensemble chorus that was deafening. Box-ball games, the ever familiar baseball game, the new hoop-la layout, Corelli's Big Mystery and Fun Show, and a score of other similar amusement devices are scattered along the midway.

"We haven't had time to figure the entries up," remarked Secretary Hall to the Examiner this morning, "but they are away ahead of last year. The showing in horses, cattle, swine, and sheep is better than ever and the poultry exhibit is fully as large."

President Leary and the directors were too busy to make a statement, but they remarked that the weather was all they had wished for and that the success of the fair was assured.

Among the attractions in the main building that is worthy of notice is a display of ladies' work, made by Mrs. W. S. Given, of Millbrook.

BROCKVILLE, SEPT. 16.—George East and Davis Graham, sectionmen of the Grand Trunk, were instantly killed in a dense fog near here this morning by the flyer, which ran into them. Both are married and leave families.

A SENSATIONAL STORY

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 16. Miss Mary Donnelly, formerly matron of the Queen's County Jail, publishes a sensational story to the effect that girls confined in that institution are permitted to be prostitutes by warders and prisoners, and that the crime of rape within the walls was frequent.

SLIGHT ACCIDENT

The locomotive on the G.T.R. flyer which leaves here at 7.10, happened with a slight accident this morning. Fortunately, it happened in the city, so that an engine was on hand immediately and all train left on time.

HAD A CALL

The fire brigade received a call this morning about 9.30 to the famous "dump," on Water street. They turned out in their usual prompt manner, and in less than thirty minutes had the fire extinguished.

SNAKES MILK COWS

The unusual spectacle of snakes milking a cow was witnessed recently on the borders of Oxon and Gloucestershire, England. A Mrs. Rice, living near the village of Oddington, keeps two cows, and it was discovered that the animals, although in perfect condition, were not giving the proper supply of milk that might be expected. The cowman was at first at a loss to find a reason, but one day he visited the cows in the meadow and found one of the animals lying down quite contentedly, while two large grass snakes were sucking at the udders. The reptiles had evidently found milk a thriving diet, for each was 3 feet 7 inches in length and over 7 inches round the thickest part of the body.

LIGHTNING'S PRANKS

During a thunderstorm in Brockton, Mass., a bolt of lightning entered a bedroom on the second floor of a house in which Edward Bolles was sitting. The lightning ripped up the bed clothing, burned the mattress and knocked the footboard through a window. A gold watch chain which was attached to a vest he was wearing was melted and his watch spirited away, and has not yet been found though a thorough search of the house and grounds has been made. A part of the roof of the house was lifted from its fastenings and tipped on edge. Bed clothing and curtains in every room of the house were set afire. Bolles was not even stunned by the lightning, though it played all around him.

MONOPLANE HAT

Considerable sensation was caused on the Paris boulevards the other afternoon by a lady with a monoplane hat. The hat, which was exactly the shape of a Blériot monoplane, was fastened on with two large pins having ebony propellers turned in the wind. The new fashion obtained so much recognition that the owner of the hat called a taxicab. But to the crowd's intense amusement, the lady could not get in through the door, and the hood had to be lowered before she could enter.

AN AERO SPRINKLER

George T. Holsizer, of Livingston, N.J., has successfully applied the science of aviation to agriculture in a manner that may be adopted by other grangers in that section to offset the effect of the annual dry spell. Holsizer's plants suffered severely during the recent dry weather, so, being of a mechanical turn of mind, he rigged up a biplane "glider," the dimensions of which about equalled an old style Wright machine. To this he attached a 100-gallon boiler and equipped it with a sprinkler. At the end of a rope attached to a windlass it rose from the force of the wind in the air and when it had reached the right position over the farm the sprinkler was opened by pulling a cable. The water descended in a refreshing shower on the plants, and the field was sprinkled by simply drawing in or unwinding the rope on the windlass. Holsizer's crops here flourished, while his less enterprising neighbors have lagged.

"THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracy, (Copyrighted)

Pyne needed no further explanation. The little man's face, dour at all times, was transformed into the most curious mixture of the Comedy Mask and Tragedy Skull. None of the women dared to look at Constance, the task of facing their employer being left entirely to Brand.

So, they were permitted to leave their refuge with the kindly belief that they would come to no harm and pretence obtain no further supply from one of these sweet-faced girls who explained so recently that "our Gods must run short for the common good."

Pyne glanced up at the lantern. Outside he found Joe Brand hauling down the signal. He sprang to the tray and secured his half biscuit and tea cup.

"Come along, Elsie," he cried, crooking his left arm for her. "Follow close, Mamie. Mind you don't fall."

"Your mamma is asleep," he assured them in a whisper on the next landing. "She just can't be woke up for quite a long time."

Then he navigated them to the door of the second bedroom, where Mrs. Taylor was. He broke the hard biscuit in two pieces and gave one to each child.

"Here, Mamie, you carry the cup, and be sharper in the tea."

"I don't like tea," protested Mamie. "If I can't have coffee I want some milk."

"Well, now, you wait a little bit, and you'll be tickled to death to see what I'll bring you. But drink the tea. It's good an' hot. Skip inside, both of you."

He held the door partly open and then vanished. He heard Mrs. Taylor say:

"Didn't I tell you those two little dears would do their own business best?"

He regained the sitting-room to find Brand stooping the remains of his biscuit in an almost empty cup. The lighthouse-keeper greeted his young friend with a smile.

"I suppose that you, like the rest of us, never had such an appetite in all your days?" he said.

"Oh, I'm pretty well fixed," said Pyne, with responsive grin.

"Then you are fortunate. There is usually a wretched little fiend lurking in a man's inner consciousness, which prompts him to desire the unattainable. Now, I am a poor eater as a rule, yet this morning I feel I could tackle the toughest steak ever cut off a superannuated cow."

"I don't deny," admitted Pyne, "that the idea of a steak sounds good. That is, you know," he went on hangdoddy, "it might sort of appeal to me about one o'clock."

"I should have thought you could do with one now, especially after the hard night we have come through. Perhaps you are a believer in the French system, and prefer a light breakfast?"

Brand finished the last morsel of biscuit and drank the cup dry.

"It's a first-rate proposition—when you are accustomed to it," said Pyne. "But talking about eating when there's little to eat is a poor business, anyway. Don't you find that?"

"I do indeed."

Brand rose and tapped the barometer. Adjusting the sliding scale to read the tenths.

"Slightly better," he announced. "If only the wind would go down, or even change to the nor'ard!"

"What good would a change of wind do?" inquired Pyne, greatly relieved himself by the change of topic.

"It would beat down the sea to some extent and then they might be able to drift a buoy, with a rope attached close enough to the rock at low tide to enable us to reach it with a cast of a grappling iron."

"Do you mean that we could be ferried to the steamer by that means?"

"That is absolutely out of the question until the weather moderates to a far greater extent than I dare hope at present. But, once we had the line, we could rig up a running tackle and obtain some stores."

"Is it as bad as all that?" said the younger man, after a pause.

They looked at each other. The knowledge that all true men have of them kind leaped from eye to eye.

"Quite that bad," answered Brand.

Pyne moistened his lips. He produced a case containing two cigars. He held it out.

"Let us go shares in consolation," he said.

Brand accepted the gift, and affected a livelier mood.

"By lucky chance I have an ample supply of tobacco. It will keep the men quiet," he said. "By the way," and he lifted a quick glance at Pyne, "do you know anything about chemistry?"

"Well—er—I went through a course at Yale."

"Can colza oil be converted into a food?"

"It contains certain fats," admitted Pyne, taking dubious stock of the question.

"But the process of conversion, the chemical reaction, that is the difficulty."

"Bi-sulphide of carbon is a solvent, and the fatty acids of most vegetable oils can be isolated by treatment with steam super-heated to about 600 degrees Fahrenheit."

Brand threw out his hands with a little gesture of helplessness, just then Constance appeared.

"Dad," she cried, "did not Mr. Pyne tell you of my threat?"

"No, dear one. I am not living in terror of you, to my knowledge."

"You must please go to sleep, both of you, at least until ten or eleven o'clock. Mr. Emmett is sending a man to keep watch here. He will not disturb you. He is bringing some rugs and pillows which you can arrange on the floor. I have collected them for your special benefit."

As to his doing? Impossible, Connie.

"But it is not impossible, and this is the best hour available. You know quite well that the Falcon will return at high water. And you must do it, you know."

She bustled about with the busy air of a housewife, who understood the whole art of looking after her family. But something puzzled her.

"Mr. Pyne," she inquired, "where is your cup?"

"I've took it down," he explained.

For some reason, Constance felt instantly that she had turned the tables on him since their last encounter. She did not know why. He looked confused, for one thing; he was not so garrulous as formerly, for another.

"Down where?" she demanded.

"Not to the kitchen. I have been there since you brought up your breakfast and dad's on the same tray."

"I breakfasted alone," remarked Brand calmly. "Mr. Pyne had feasted earlier."

"But he had not," persisted Constance. "I wanted him to—"

She stopped. This impudent American had actually dared to wink at her, a confidential, appalling wink, which said plainly: "Please don't trouble about me."

"You gave your tea and biscuit to somebody," she cried suddenly. "Now who was it? Confess!"

"Well," he said, weakly, "I did not feel so particularly hungry, so, when I met those two little girls looking round for an extra supply, I only thought nobody would mind it—"

"Father," said Constance, "He has not had a mouthful."

"Then take him downstairs and give him one. You must have found my conversation interesting, Mr. Pyne, whilst I was eating. But, before you go, let me add a word in season. There must be no further discrimination between persons. Stand or fall, each must abide by the common rule."

Pyne, with the guilty feeling of a detected villian, explained to Constance how the cup might be rescued.

"I shall keep a close eye on you in future," she announced as they went below.

"Do," he said. "That is all I ask for."

"I am a very strict person," she went on. "Dad always encouraged us in the sailor's idea of implicit obedience."

"Kick me. It will make me feel good," he answered.

Entering the bedroom, where Elsie and Mamie were seated contentedly on the floor, she stooped and kissed them. And not a word did she say to Enid as to the reason why Mr. Pyne should be served with a second breakfast. She knew that any parade of his unselfishness would hurt him, and he, on his part, gave her unspoken thanks for her thought.

Conversation without words is an art understood only by master-minds and lovers, so these two were either exceptionally clever persons or developing traits of a more common genus perhaps both.

CHAPTER XI.

MRS. VANSITTART'S FEAR.

The tribulations which clustered, in beelike swarm, in and around the Gull Rock Lighthouse during those weary hours were many and various. Damp clothing, insufficiency of food, interior temperatures ranging from the chill draught of the entrance passage and stair-ways to the partial suffocation of rooms with windows closed owing to the incursions of the rising tide this unpleasing aggregate of physical misery was seriously augmented by an ever-increasing list of sick people, an almost total absence of any medical comforts, and a growing knowledge, on the part of those not too despondent to think, that their ultimate relief might be deferred for days rather than hours.

No mere man can understand, and a woman of ordinary experience can but dimly imagine, the difficulty and arduousness of the task undertaken by Constance and Enid.

To cook and supply for eighty-one persons with utensils intended for the use of three, to give each separate individual an utterly inadequate portion so skilfully distributed that none should have cause to grumble at his or her neighbour's better fortune, here were culinary problems at once complex and exhaustive.

By adopting fantastic devices, bringing into service empty jam-pots and sardine tins, they found it was possible to feed twenty at a time. This meant the preparation of four distinct meals, each requiring an hour's work. Long before the last batch, which included themselves, was lamenting the absurd discrepancy between appetite and antidote in the shape of anything to eat, the first was ravenous again.

The women complained the least. In the occupants of the two bedrooms the girls encountered a passive fortitude which was admirable. It was an extraordinary scene which met their eyes when they entered either of these stuffy apartments. Many of the rescued ladies had not given a thought to changing the demi-toilette of evening wear on board ship for more serviceable clothing when the hurricane overtook the vessel. They all, it is true, possessed cloaks or wraps of some sort, but these garments were still sodden with salt water and therefore unwearable, even if the oppressive warmth in each room rendered such a thing possible. Their elegant costumes of muslin, cotton silk or satin, were utterly ruined. Lucky were the few whose blouses or bodices had not been rent into tatters.

Some of the worst sufferers in this respect were now the best provided. Blankets and sheets had been ruthlessly torn up and roughly stitched into articles of clothing. Mrs. Vansittart, for instance, who first suggested this via media, wore an exquisite Paris gown and a loose dressing-jacket arrangement of yellow blankets the component parts of which she persuaded two other women to sew together on the model provided by her own elegant figure.

A few quick-witted ones who followed her example exhausted the available stock, and pillow-cases and rugs would have undergone metamorphosis in the same way had not Constance come to the rescue by impounding them, declaring that they must be reserved for the use of those suffering from the rawness and warmth.

The men passed their time in smoking, sleeping, yarning, and speculating on the chance of the weather clearing. Ultimately, when the banging of the waves again made the cellar-bed unsafe, a small section began to plan petty attempts to pilfer the provisions. It is the queer mixture of philosophy and beast in the average human being that makes it possible for the same man, in one mood, to risk his life quite voluntarily to save others, and in another, to organize a dish theft.

After one such woman had been detected in the attempt to pick the store-room lock, and when a tray of cold ham was deliberately upset whilst a football rummage took place for the pieces, Mr. Emmett stopped these exhibitions by arming the watch with assorted weapons from the work-shop and issuing stern orders as to their use in case of need.

Here, again, the warring elements, which form the human clay were admirably displayed. On duty, under the bonds of discipline, the coarse-armed foremast hand who had gobbled up a surreptitious lump of fat pork during the first successful scuffle could beam the same zeal who trust to better his position by a similar trick a second time. Discipline, sometimes, converts a kicker into a hero.

When the state of the tide permitted, storm-shutters were opened and a free draught of air allowed to enter through the door. Then all hands eyed the sea with anxiety. The wind was strong and persistent, and the reef maintained its ceaseless roaring. Wherever a window opened towards the land there was a small crowd anxious to peep through it. At last, the sense of orderliness gradually permeating the inmates of the lighthouse actually resulted in the formation of queues, with fixed intervals for

of Eye Troubles is usually not disease, but defect in the structure or muscles of the Eye.

Consider the incessant work of the Eye, the instantaneous and exact adjustment demanded that sight may be always equal, single and ready to every change in position, distance and light. The nerves compel and control the mechanism in these instant adjustments. The mechanism may be defective, that is—

There may be defects in the structure, or focus of one or both Eyes;

The Muscles may be imperfectly balanced, so that both Eyes do not work in harmony;

There may be inability to focus for close work;

There may be strain through overwork, abuse, poor lights, bright reflections, etc.

An examination will tell you just what condition your Eyes are in.

AT THE BASE OF THE BLUFF

A Short Story.

Her cotton gown, though faded, was neat and clean—what there was of it. It was short—so very short that when Carter first saw her he took her for a child. Perhaps her general smallness and the long plait down her back helped to deceive him.

She was sitting on the edge of a very dilapidated canal boat paddling with her toes in the swift running water. Carter watched her for a moment in silence from the bank; then he called to her, but she was so absorbed in her own concerns that she did not hear him. Finally he walked across the crazy gangplank to the flooring behind her. Even then she did not hear him till he spoke.

"Say, little girl, can you tell me where General Willoughby lives?"

The girl started violently—so violently that Carter feared that she was going overboard, and he sprang forward with a cry of alarm. The next instant she recovered herself and scrambled to her feet.

Carter saw that she was a woman and not a child. Then he noticed that she was pretty; next that she was exceedingly pretty; last that she was angry.

He hastened to placate her.

"I beg your pardon," he exclaimed. "I'm afraid I startled you. I didn't mean to. I called to you from the bank, but you didn't seem to hear and so—"

He stopped, for the girl had suddenly crimsoned not in a mild halfway fashion, but in a whole-souled way that reddened even the tips of her ears.

"I—I beg your pardon," he faltered, again, wondering what he could have said or done to cause such confusion.

Abruptly the girl's color faded. Apparently she had regained her self-control or had come to some decision.

"What do you want here?" she demanded.

Carter drew a breath of relief. He was a tall, broad-shouldered young fellow, with sunburned face and honest eyes.

"Nothing much!" he said, humbly. "I'm looking for General Willoughby's. My car broke down and I started to walk along the bank here. They told me it would take me to the General's, and it hasn't done so. I thought maybe you might know where the place is."

He scarcely knew what he was saying, but he managed to talk on. He simply could not take his eyes off the girl. Without doubt she was the loveliest creature he had ever seen. If properly dressed—

He realized that she was speaking.

"General Willoughby's?" she echoed. "It's right behind you!"

Carter glanced behind him in amazement, whereat the girl laughed musically.

"You can't see it," she bubbled, "but it's there! It's about two hundred yards back from the edge of the bluff right over your head."

The sun burnished her red-gold hair and tinged the delicate contour of cheek and throat. Her slim young figure stood out sharp and straight against the silvery background of the rushing river. Her cheap attire and poverty-stricken surroundings seemed strangely incongruous with her physical appearance and with her cultured accents.

Unwillingly the young man drew his eyes away from the girl and scanned the sheer ascent.

"Do—do they keep an aeroplane for the accommodation of visitors?" he questioned. "Or is there, perchance, a path—"

The girl laughed. "There's a path," she answered, "but it's a good way around. You can't go straight up—you know. It branches off about a quarter of a mile farther upstream."

She turned away, as if considering the interview at an end.

But Carter did not move, and a moment later she looked back, with a twinkle in her eyes.

"Is there anything else you would like to know?" she queried.

Carter started. "I beg your pardon!" he exclaimed. (Confound it, he was always begging her pardon.) "No—I—I believe not."

But he still hesitated, and the girl broke suddenly into a laugh.

"Then why don't you go?" she demanded.

The young fellow's lip quivered. Then he, too, laughed.

"I suppose I ought to," he accorded, ruefully. "Miss that is, General Willoughby is expecting me, I suppose, and I guess there is no use putting off the evil. That is—I'll get lost if I try to find it by myself. I'm an awful idiot about getting lost! I am, really!" he protested, eagerly, as he saw the twinkle in her eye.

"Oh! you!" the girl laughed openly. "Run along!" she ordered. "Miss Willoughby will be waiting for you. You're going to marry her, aren't you?"

Carter's face had always mirrored his mind so much so that he had been obliged to give up poker and at the moment it was a perfect picture of disgust.

He really had come down for the express purpose the girl had named. He had not come with any special alacrity, but he had come. Although distantly related to Miss Willoughby on her mother's side, he had never met her; and he had no desire to marry her or anyone else, being very well satisfied with his bachelor's life. Still, a million dollars, worth of government bonds are not to be thrown away off-hand, and that was the amount his great-aunt Ann had left to him and Molly Willoughby on condition they married before he was twenty-five; otherwise it went to charity. So he had run down to have an interview with the girl to see whether they couldn't hit it off together. But that outsiders should know of his errand was humiliating. Besides, he found himself suddenly and unaccountably ashamed of it.

How did you know that?" he demanded.

For a moment the girl seemed abashed. She looked down, and Carter's eyes followed her. One rosy toe was apparently trying to bore into a knot hole. It was very pink and very pretty.

Willoughby. She's got the money, you see. They do say she had six offers this year. I didn't have any; yet they tell me I am just as pretty as she is. What do you think about it?"

Serenely she raised her eyes to his. She had fully recovered her poise. There was no doubt about that.

Carter started. This unconventional young person was beginning to interest him strangely.

"I've never seen Miss Willoughby," he answered. "But," he went on, a little wildly, "if she looks like you, I wonder that she had only six proposals."

He had begun his compliment half in a spirit of badinage; he finished it gravely—almost seriously. What was coming over him, he wondered, that a mere girl could so stir him?

"Do you live here?" he asked, curiously.

"Here or hereabouts. I own this boat and an acre of land to tie it to. General Willoughby's crazy to turn me out, but I won't let him. Tell me—" She paused for a moment. "Is it true? Did you come down to marry Molly Willoughby?"

Slowly Carter bowed. "I have come down to ask Miss Willoughby to marry me," he answered, slowly. "Thank you for setting me on the right path. Good-morning!" He raised his hat and turned away.

"Good-morning."

Carter did not look around, even when he reached the bank. Later, however, just as he rounded the first curve in the road he glanced back at the canal boat out of the corners of his eyes. If he expected to find the girl gazing after him, he was properly punished. She was sitting on the edge of the boat again dabbling her pink toes in the clear green water.

It was a good ten minutes' walk to the Willoughby house, and when he got there he learned that most of the family were out and Miss Willoughby was lying down with a headache. A servant showed him to his room, and he met neither host nor hostess until just before dinner.

Miss Willoughby met him as he entered the parlor.

"I'm Molly Willoughby, Mr. Carter," she said. "I hope we'll be friends in spite of Great-aunt Ann's absurd will."

"Of course." Carter grasped her hand warmly. "Aunt Ann meant well, you know."

"But a certain place is paved with good intentions. I wonder if you are as horribly embarrassed as I am."

Carter grinned. "Just about, I fancy," he returned.

(I was talking mechanically but with the vivacity of expression and detachedness of thought that comes from long social practice, using words as a cloak behind which he might study the personality of this unknown cousin of his.

She was beautiful, he decided instantly. From the top of her high piled hair to the silken slippers that peeped from beneath her gown she was all that he had learned to admire. The tinted incandescent lights cast a rosy glow over her gleaming neck and shoulders and deepened the rich tints of her complexion. He concluded that Aunt Ann might not have been quite such a blunderer as he had always held her to be.

Suddenly he noticed that she was staring at him almost as frankly as he was staring at her, staring with a twinkle in her eyes that showed that she was reading his mind.

"Well!" she laughed. "Do you approve? Am I—er—satisfactory?"

He nodded emphatically. "No one could help approving," he declared. "I don't dare ask whether I, too, come up to specifications. But," a puzzled expression wrinkled his forehead, "have we not met somewhere before? There is something about you that reminds me—But I must be wrong. I don't think I could ever have seen you, and have forgotten it."

The delicate creamy flush on the girl's cheeks grew brighter. "Perhaps I remind you of someone," she suggested.

Carter started. "By Jove! Yes!" he exclaimed. "That's it. You do remind me of—And yet—the likeness is certainly there! It is really curious. Do you know a girl who lives on an old canal boat on the river just below the bluff—"

He broke off, for Miss Willoughby was laughing openly. "Know her?" she cried. "I should say I do. Where and when did you see her? Oh! of course! I heard your car broke down and that you came here by the river path."

"Father!" she plucked at the arm of the old warrior as he was passing. "Father! Mr. Carter met—er—your lady friend on that boat down on the river this afternoon, and he declares that she is the very image of me."

She smiled, but the general did not respond. Instead, his brow darkened.

"Disgraceful," he spluttered. "Disgraceful! Why—"

"Now, father! let me reveal the family skeleton to Mr. Carter! The—er—young woman you saw on the boat is—er—a relative of father's and naturally bears some resemblance to me. Her name is Mary Willoughby. We all have poor relations, you know; Mr. Carter! Ahem! Father has tried really he has—to do something for her. Indeed, he has been more than generous, but she has been most ungrateful, in fact, she has at times been distinctly outrageous. He has offered time and again to buy the flat boat and the acre of land that goes with that landing of hers and to provide for her in other ways, but she refuses. She's very obstinate. I think she takes after her father, who was a most cantankerous old fellow, or after her Uncle Billy, who looks after her. Maybe that's why father can do nothing with her."

She shot a glance at the old man, who seemed on the verge of apoplexy, and went on:

"I should like to be good to her, but she hates me says I'm shallow and vain and ignorant and—er—the rest of it, and I suppose she's about right. Er—How was she dressed when you saw her to-day? In her customary ragged calico with long bare legs, I presume?"

Carter frowned slightly. There was an undercurrent in Molly Willoughby's tones that grated on him.

"She was plainly dressed, I believe," he answered, more coldly than he really intended. "I didn't notice particularly. As for her feet now that you speak of it, I believe that they were bare, but they were certainly not—er—intrusively so. I thought her well, if you don't mind my saying it. I thought her both beautiful and charming. Otherwise," he bowed and smiled, "I shouldn't have dared to say that you reminded me of her."

"Good!" Molly Willoughby clapped her hands. "You got out of that very neatly," she declared. "Very neatly indeed! But I believe dinner has been announced. You are to take me in, you know."

Carter offered his arm, and together they turned away, leaving the general still gasping.

"I like to tease father about Mary Willoughby now and then," she declared. "It's risky, though! The girl is ridiculously proud and won't listen to him! She has really gotten on his nerves, and I confess that I am just a wee bit tired of her myself. But before we drop the subject, I want to assure you, Mr. Carter, that neither father nor I are tyrants and that she has nobody but herself to blame for her condition."

Carter muttered something polite and turned the conversation to safer channels. In fact, the glitter and badinage of the dinner soon forced the subject into the background of his mind.

Only into the background, however. Try as he might, he could not banish it entirely. Mary's slim, stately figure, simple dress, and thick, long plaits seemed photographed on the retina of his eyes. Molly Willoughby was an ever present reminder; looking at her he could fancy what her cousin Mary would be if similarly dressed. She might not be prettier—one could scarcely be prettier than Molly Willoughby, but he thought she would be sweeter looking.

What, he wondered, could be the cause that sent one girl to a palace, and her cousin, apparently her equal in all respects, to a home such as that awful canal boat? Some family quarrel, he concluded, probably between their two fathers, that made Mary resent all attempts at kindness by the other.

He slept ill that night, dreaming of calico-clad angels throned on glorified canal boats and waked early, with the fresh damp scent of the dawn filling his nostrils. Through the window he could see the red ball of the rising sun burning through the mask of trees that lined the bluff. Here and there broken patches of silver showed where the river lay darkling in the shadow. The first waves of heat pulsed through the air, dissipating the cool shadows that had lurked all night along the lawns that ran from the house to the edge of the bluffs. The rustling of the leaves mimicked the long thunder of breakers on the seashore, from which he had just come, and all at once he longed for a plunge in the freshness of the river. Then, too, he might see Mary Willoughby there. He knew he wanted to see her, though he scarcely knew what for.

With a sudden resolution, he put on his bathing suit and, attired in tennis flannels and slippers, raced through the lush grass to where the winding road led down to the shore.

He removed his flannels and dived in from the grassy bank, shooting downward toward the pebbly bottom he saw far below. The voice of the river sang in his ears, whispering of the far-away mountains whence its drops had come, chanting the glories of the land through which it rippled, trembling with the deeper diapason of the sea to which it hastened. Up he shot, hands raised, to fall prone upon the splashing surface, up again, and far down the river he saw a white arm flash in the sunlight and a voice rang across the water, merry with the challenge of the dawn.

It was Mary Willoughby.

Instantly he realized that he had come to the river for her and for her alone. A stronger current than that in which he swam was carrying him as he sped toward her, a current invisible, intangible, but stronger than any he had ever known.

Alone in the midst of the waters she waited for him, cradled in the embrace of the river, naiad-like. His eyes met hers and the dawn became glorious and the air filled with music.

Side by side they floated, fingers touching, forgetful of the world. Very far away seemed the shores and the man-made distinctions of men—

"You would marry her?"

"This very evening."

"What—" she exclaimed. "This is preposterous. I—" She laughed angrily. "I don't plead for myself! I wouldn't marry any man who loved another girl for twice Aunt Ann's money. But I beg you not to do this thing. I beg you not to marry this barefoot minx who has trapped you."

"Stop!" Carter had risen. "Not even you shall speak ill of her. I—I am sorry. Believe me, I am sorry. You are very beautiful and very sweet cousin mine, and I should be proud to ask you to be my wife if it were not for—for Mary. Now, good-by."

Mollie's cheeks burned red. "Good-by," she responded, coldly, ignoring his proffered hand. "I trust you will find the—er—lady waiting for you. Do you start at once?"

Carter glanced at the westering sun, then at the deep shadows that were creeping out from the bluffs toward the centre of the river.

"Very soon," he answered gravely. "I must go to the house and make some last preparations. Will you not shake hands?"

Hesitatingly Molly put her hand in his. It was trembling and burning hot. Amazed, he glanced up to find the girl's eyes brimming with tears.

"Good God!" he exclaimed. "What—"

But Molly tore herself away. "Go!" she cried. "Go!"

"But!—"

"Go! if you have charity in your soul, go!"

And Carter went.

An hour afterward he stepped upon the crazy canal boat to find Mary waiting for him.

Though her attire was still very plain, she was more conventionally dressed than she had been at either of their former meetings. Her exquisite feet were hidden in shoes and stockings and her skirt was decidedly longer. Otherwise she was the same.

As Carter stepped on board she looked up and he saw that she had been crying. Without hesitation he took her in his arms.

"Why! sweetheart," he exclaimed. "Why! Why! sweetheart. What's wrong?"

Shyly she looked up at him. "I—I was afraid you were not coming," she faltered.

Then, outrunning his swift disclaimer, she flung her arms about his neck.

"Oh!" she cried. "What have you done to me that I should care like this? I—I can't believe it. Why! Why! It was only yesterday that you halted on the bank and called to me, 'Little girl,' you called me. And now—Oh! I must be quite mad!"

Carter laughed at her. "I'm glad you are," he returned, shamelessly. "For I am mad, too. So there is a pair of us. How do you cast off this ocean liner?"

"Cast off? Why—What do you mean? Why do you want to cast off?"

"Why do I? Because it's the easiest way to get down to Dodd's Ferry, where my motor will meet us. It can't get down to the water's edge any closer to here, you know. Besides, we'll find some one else at the ferry, waiting to us. You know who?"

But the girl drew back, catching her breath.

"I don't," she gasped. "What do you mean? Tell me!"

"Mean? Why! you poor little thing! You've frightened half to death. There's nothing to be frightened about. It's nobody but a county clerk and a parson. There! don't let's waste any more time. Tell me how to cast off!" He hesitated. "Surely you understood what I said this morning. You will marry me, won't you dear?"

The girl bent her head. "Oh!" she cried. "How can I? So quickly as all this—oh! It is shameful!"

She hesitated; then slowly she raised her head and met his eyes.

"That rope yonder is the one that holds us," she whispered, tremulously.

The severed rope splashed into the stream, and the boat, caught by the current, swung slowly away from the bank, and floated downward. To the right rose the shadowy blue hulks of the bluffs, to the left the bank smouldered red from the sunset overhead the sky mirrored a canopy of fire. Curlews called from the sedges, and kingfishers darted in and out of the processional trees that lined the lone aside of the river. All around, silver bubbles rose white upon the surface of the water as the old boat drifted southward.

Dodd's Ferry at last, with two skiffs waiting to tow the boat to a grassy bank, then the dusty path that led to the courthouse, where the state's permission to marry was drawn and sealed, then the step across the road to the house—here the parson waited.

The sun was setting when the two came out upon the porch once more. But when Carter wanted to lift his bride into the chugging motor, she drew back.

"Not just yet, dear," she pleaded. "I want to go back to the old canal boat once more for half an hour. Only half an hour, then you may take me where you will. I have given up my will to you, dear—but I want one short half-hour to myself first."

Carter nodded, and they went back to the boat. It was more than half an hour, however, that he waited, sitting on the deck, staring over the rippling water, after his bride had shut the door of the deck house behind her. The sun had set and the river was darkening into perfumed dusk when her light foot sounded behind him and he heard her soft, frightened voice.

"Frank!" she faltered. "Frank! Frank!"

Carter sprang to his feet. Before him stood a girl with gray eyes. Her touched, looking out from beneath a great picture hat. The straight lines of her gown made her look very tall and slender.

"Molly!" he gasped.

"Yes!" tremulously. "Molly! And Mary, too! Molly and Mary. One woman, not two! Do you mind dear?"

"Mind?" Carter crushed her to him. "Things that ... puzzled him ... suddenly plain. Mind! Mind!"

Molly Carter sighed happily. "I thought you would," she answered half sobbing, half laughing. "I could not marry you as Molly. I couldn't—not for all Aunt Ann's money! I should always have thought that—But when you caught me after my bath from the old canal boat the dear old boat that Grace hates—big dear old boat that I won't let him destroy. I hoped that I won't let him destroy. I hoped—oh! I hoped that you might fall in love with me as penniless Mary. And I gave you the chance. There—there! I gave you the chance. There is a short cut up the bluff for those who know it, and it was easy to go back and forth. I gave you the chance and you took it. You let all Aunt Ann's money go for my sake! And now—and now I know! I know! And now—and now I know! One. Her voice died happily away. A steamer thrashed its way ... and a deckhand threw ... but presumably rebellious ballast to the two, as they bobbed like corks on the waves of its passage. The dawn was past, full day was at hand, and with the realization, self-consciousness awoke.

Timidly the girl drew away, head ... for the canal boat.

"You must go," she whispered.

"Yes, I must go. I have something to do. But I will come back. You will wait for me?"

"Yes! Later! After the heat of the day is over. Not before. I, too, must prepare. Good-by."

She caught the edge of the boat and steadied herself against it. But the current, chuckling beneath the counter, flung Carter toward her, and for an instant the two clung together, lips crushed against lips. Then the man was gone, flashing up stream with tireless strokes.

Carter got back to General Willoughby's to find most of that luxurious breakfast still wrapped in blameless slumber, or, at least, not yet visible. Breakfast, he learned, was a most informal meal; guests came to it when they liked, were served as they liked, and betook themselves to their own pleasures quite as if the place were a summer hotel. Neither General Willoughby nor any one of his family was visible, and Carter learned that Molly Willoughby seldom appeared until noon.

He had not an idea how to go about what he wanted to say to her, and he ought to have been grateful for the extra time allowed him for consideration, but as a matter of fact he was not. A fever burned in his veins, and he was mad to get the thing over. The slow hours were torture to him.

He sent to beg an interview with Molly. She named three o'clock as the time, and at that hour he was waiting for her in the shady summer house at the edge of the bluff. Far below he could see the flat-boat, to all appearances deserted.

"Everybody knows everything in the country," she responded. "Besides, all the world will want to marry Molly."

A rustling drew his attention and he looked around. Mollie Willoughby was coming toward him over the short brown grass. The masterful wind swept about her head, rustling the oaks and the aspens till they broke into a mosaic of silver studded with blotches of gold. The rhythmical runo of the locusts shrieked from every corner. Sweet, sun-dried, mingled with the scent of the summer roses that bloomed close to the great house. The raucous cry of a peacock shattered the silence.

Molly's gray eyes, sky-touched, looked gaily from beneath a great picture hat. Again her likeness to Mary came over him. But Molly, he decided, was much the taller, unless indeed, he was misled by the long straight lines of the gown she wore.

"Behold me!" she cried, as he stepped to meet her. "Behold me! I come at your call, a forty-second cousin once removed, to discuss Great-aunt Ann's tiresome will. I suppose you do want to discuss Great-aunt Ann's tiresome will?"

"I do."

Carter took her hand, and led her to a seat in the summer house.

"I wonder if you really know," he asked, "what I am thinking about?"

Molly Willoughby leaned forward and rested her chin on her hand. "No! I don't know," she declared, sweetly. "Tell me!"

"I'll try. It's hard to say. I came down here yesterday. You know why I came. I came to see whether I could induce you to marry me and so keep Great-aunt's money in the family. I wanted it myself, and well, it seemed only fair to give you a chance to say whether you wanted it badly enough to be willing to take me along with it. I came in entire good faith. But I saw by the river road down yonder, he pointed, "and I met your cousin—and I fell in love with her."

Molly's flush deepened. "You mean," she exclaimed.

"I mean that I have suddenly become a raving maniac! Bear with me if I show it. I have seen her only twice, but I feel as if I had known her always."

"You would marry her?"

"This very evening!"

"What!" she exclaimed. "This is preposterous. I!" She laughed angrily. "I don't plead for myself! I wouldn't marry any man who loved another girl for twice Aunt Ann's money. But I beg you not to do this thing. I beg you not to marry this—this barefoot minx who has trapped you."

"Stop!" Carter had risen. "Not even you shall speak ill of her. I—I am sorry. Believe me, I am sorry. You are very beautiful and very sweet cousin mine, and I should be proud to ask you to be my wife if it were not for—for Mary. Now, good-by."

Mollie's cheeks burned red. "Good-by!" she responded, coldly, ignoring his proffered hand. "I trust you will find the—er—lady waiting for you. Do you start at once?"

Carter glanced at the westering sun, then at the deep shadows that were creeping out from the bluffs toward the centre of the river.

"Very soon," he answered gravely. "I must go to the house and make some last preparations. Will you not shake hands?"

Hesitatingly Molly put her hand in his. It was trembling and burning hot. Amazed, he glanced up to find the girl's eyes brimming with tears.

"Good God!" he exclaimed. "What—"

But Molly tore herself away. "Go!" she cried. "Go!"

"But!—"

"Go! if you have charity in your soul, go!"

And Carter went.

An hour afterward he stepped upon the crazy canal boat to find Mary waiting for him.

Though her attire was still very plain, she was more conventionally dressed than she had been at either of their former meetings. Her exquisite feet were hidden in shoes and stockings and her skirt was decidedly longer. Otherwise she was the same.

As Carter stepped on board she looked up and he saw that she had been crying. Without hesitation he took her in his arms.

"Why! sweetheart," he exclaimed. "Why! Why! sweetheart. What's wrong?"

Shyly she looked up at him. "I—I was afraid you were not coming," she faltered.

Then, outrunning his swift disclaimer, she flung her arms about his neck.

"Oh!" she cried. "What have you done to me that I should care like this? I—I can't believe it. Why! Why! It was only yesterday that you halted on the bank and called to me 'Little girl,' you called me. And now—Oh! I must be quite mad!"

Carter laughed at her. "I'm glad you are," he returned, shamelessly. "For I am mad, too. So there is a pair of us. How do you cast off this ocean liner?"

"Cast off? Why! What do you mean? Why do you want to cast off?"

"Why do I? Because it's the easiest way to get down to Dodd's Ferry, where my motor will meet us. It can't get down to the water's edge any closer to here, you know. Besides, we'll find some one else at the ferry, waiting to us. You know who?"

But the girl drew back, catching her breath.

"I don't," she gasped. "What do you mean? Tell me!"

"Mean! Why! you poor little thing! You're frightened half to death. There's nothing to be frightened about. It's nobody but a county clerk and a parson. There! don't let's waste any more time. Tell me how to cast off!" He hesitated. "Surely you understood what I said this morning. You will marry me, won't you dear?"

The girl bent her head. "Oh!" she cried. "How can I? So quickly as all this. Oh! It is shameful!"

She hesitated, then slowly she raised her head and met his eyes.

"That rope yonder is the one that holds us," she whispered, tremulously.

The severed rope splashed into the stream, and the boat, caught by the current, swung slowly away from the bank, and floated downward. To the right rose the shadowy blue bluffs; to the left the bank smouldered red from the sunset; overhead the sky unrolled, a canopy of fire. Curlews called from the sedges, and kingfishers darted in and out of the processional trees that lined the long aisle of the river. All around, silver bubbles rose—white upon the surface of the water as the old boat drifted southward.

Dodd's Ferry at last, with two skiffs waiting to tow the boat to a grassy bank; then the dusty path that led to the courthouse, where the state's permission to marry was drawn and sealed; then the step across the road to the house where the parson waited.

The sun was setting when the two came out upon the porch once more. But when Carter wanted to lift his bride into the chugging motor, she drew back.

"Not just yet, dear," she pleaded. "I want to go back to the old canal boat once more for half an hour. Only half an hour, then you may take me where you will. I—have given up my will to you, dear—but I want one short half hour to myself first."

Carter nodded, and they went back to the boat. It was more than half an hour, however, that he waited, sitting on the deck, staring over the rippling water, after his bride had shut the door of the deck house behind her. The sun had set and the river was darkening into perfumed dusk when her light foot sounded behind him and he heard her soft, frightened voice.

"Frank!" she faltered. "Frank! Frank!"

Carter sprang to his feet. Before him stood a girl with gray eyes, sky touched, looking out from beneath a great picture hat. The straight lines of her gown made her look very tall and slender.

"Molly!" he gasped.

"Yes!" tremulously. "Molly! And Mary, too! Molly and Mary. One woman, not two! Do you mind dear?"

"Mind?" Carter crushed her to him. Things that had puzzled him grew suddenly plain. "Mind? Mind?"

Molly Carter sighed happily. "I thought you would," she answered half sobbing, half laughing. "I could not marry you as Molly! I couldn't expect for all Aunt Ann's money! I should always have thought that But when you caught me after my bath from the old canal boat, the dear old boat that father hates so but that I won't let him destroy. I hoped, oh! I hoped that you might fall in love with me as penniless Mary. And so I gave you the chance. There is a short cut up the bluff for those who know it, and it was easy to go back and forth. I gave you the chance and you took it. You bet all Aunt Ann's money go for my sake! And now—and now I know! I know!"

Her voice died happily away. One by one the stars came out, and multiplied themselves in the river, dancing from point to point on the broken water. Lights twinkled out in the village. The bull-frogs boomed from the banks. The intoxicating melody of the river sang in their ears. Neither noticed when Molly Willoughby's maid tiptoed out of the cabin and jammed an arsenal of Mary Willoughby's [illegible] overboard [illegible] hotel, and to tell Carter's disgusted chauffeur that he might as well put the motor away for the night.

IS ALMOST SHOT BY AN ELEPHANT

Mr. John Boyes, "King of the Kukuris," Tells of Marvellous Incident.

MAKES HUNTING RECORD

Only Living White Man Who Has Killed Two Pachyderms with Consecutive Bullets.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

COULD Mr. John Boyes, who has returned for a brief visit in his native city of Hull, be persuaded to adapt his eyes to the glare of the limelight and to consent to publish his African experiences, there are those who would wager long odds that he would make Mr. Theodore Roosevelt's "big game memoirs" look like a miniature side-show to the real thing. Mr. Boyes, who looks like the first syllable of his name so far as age is concerned, has worn the title of "The White King of the Kukuris." He is held to be the only living white man who has shot a brace of elephants with the consecutive cartridges of a double barrelled gun. He it was who directed the "mighty hunter," Colonel Roosevelt, to where the almost extinct white rhinoceros can yet be found, and he has established a record within the last eighteen months of shooting approximately 250 elephants.

Mr. Boyes' experiences began when he ran away from home, at the age of thirteen years, and went to sea. He struck Africa in 1898. He endured great privations in the Matabele campaign, and after that hiked for British East Africa, where he was the first white man to fall under the optics of several native tribes. While thus "seeing the sights" the Hull wanderer fell in with a warlike tribe known as the Kukuris.

"Oh, I should think there are about a half million of those folks altogether," explained the big game hunter and explorer when he consented to talk about himself. "They were particularly devoted to the war game, and they lived among the wild mountain passes of British East Africa. They thought I was a great warrior, and they were so hospitable, as a result, that they not only took me in, but made me king over them. For three years I wore the title and commanded more than five thousand warriors, but owing to difficulties with the British government I resigned my regal position and returned to England in 1902."

But he was back in Africa the same year, where he joined with Mr. W. N. Macmillan, of White Nile exploration fame, and others in a big game hunting expedition. Later he made a journey through Abyssinia, traversing country in which only one white man, Lord Beramore, had been previously. In 1907 he was captured by members of the savage Danakil tribe, King Menelik finally squaring matters for him. It was at a small place bearing the name of Kobo that Mr. Boyes met Colonel Roosevelt.

"Was the Colonel as keen on meeting game as reports had it?" was asked.

"Oh, sure," returned Mr. Boyes. "He then was looking for what is known as the white rhinoceros and asked me if I knew where the animal could be found. As it happened, I knew the only place where white rhinos can be found, for they are almost extinct. I believe the Colonel shot eight of them."

"What was your own narrowest escape from death in the jungle?"

"Well, once I was charged and knocked down by a bull elephant, which ran right over me. By the help of Providence, however, the animal's feet did not touch me, or it would have been all over. But that wasn't as bad as the time I came very nearly being shot by an elephant."

"Shot by an elephant! That's a new proposition, certainly," put in the interviewer.

"It was a peculiar adventure," admitted the big game hunter. "Early one morning one of my natives brought news to the camp that three big bull elephants were close by our pitch. I hastened, together with two of my rifle bearing natives, and was successful in getting close to the monsters. The tall grass in that section prevented much speedy passage through it, and thus made elephant hunting dangerous. I shot one of the beasts, but the other two were only wounded, and they promptly charged us before I had a rifle reloaded. My rifle bearer was just in the act of handing me a loaded rifle when one of the beasts reached us. It plucked the gun out of the hands of the native with its trunk, and, lifting it on high, brought down the weapon to the ground with a smash. The gun was discharged by the impact and the bullet sang past my ear, while the poor rifle bearer was gored to death."

Needless to say, Mr. Boyes, like certain other "big game hunters," has opportunities galore offered to drag him into the limelight, but it is back to Africa for him.

FOUND DEAD ON RANGE.

LONDON.—Another mountain tragedy has occurred on Snowdon, the victims being two Londoners, father and son. A shepherd, drawn to the spot by the barking of his sheepdog, on Saturday, discovered them on a grassy slope on the Stabod side of the Snowdon range. There were no marks of violence or even of a fall on the bodies. The name of the victims is stated by the police to be Harding, of No. 8 Bromley road, Catford.

It is supposed, the Daily Mirror says, that they perished in an awful gale that swept over the district on Friday.

The unfortunate men, it seems, had wandered on the bleak Stabod part of the Snowdon range and lost their way in the gale. Tired by their wanderings, they seem to have lain down on the grassy slope where their bodies were found and have died from [illegible]

Many American Additions to Ranks of London Hostesses

Lady Acheson, Lady Maidstone and Mrs. Montague Eliot Among the Number.

ALL ARE VERY POPULAR

Receptivity of Mind of the Women from This Country Impresses British Society.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

SPEAKING the other day to a prominent American railway magnate anent the ever increasing popularity of the European three weeks' "cure" and subsequent "after cure," when, according to all one hears, there are innumerable springs and health resorts of equal curative power in the United States which are absolutely unexploited, although known to many Americans, the cause was fully explained. "By coming over here," said he, "we leave for a time all the surroundings which might tend to lure us away from the strenuousness of the treatment, which we find recuperates and invigorates all our tissues for a fresh year of work, while at the same time we are surrounded by such a vast number of attractions in the way of sightseeing that we feel we are doing our bodies good at the same time that we are improving our minds.

"Why," he continued, "a three weeks' cure at one of the springs in Yellowstone Park would be unendurable for an American, unless he were real ill, because there is nothing outside of it to interest him like there is over here."

This is, of course, the mere man's point of view, but to a certain extent it is likewise that of the American woman, who possesses a mind which is nothing if not receptive, and it is this very receptivity which makes her such a popular and charming hostess when she takes up with life in Great Britain, for to her quickly acquired sense of the fitness of things English she unites the sprightliness and vivacity of the daughter of the New World.

NEW AMERICAN HOSTESSES.

Every year sees fresh recruits to the list of American hostesses in England, either for the London or autumn season, not forgetting the many whose names are familiar over here as in their own native land. Many of these will not be returning to America for the autumn season, and they include Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Burden, with their two daughters, who spent three weeks at Carlsbad before going on to Munich; Mrs. Richard Townsend, another habitué of that health resort, who with Mrs. Moore was a frequent luncheon hostess; Mr. and Mrs. Hoppenheimer and their very pretty daughter, Miss Gladys Hoppenheimer, who with the latter's aunt Mrs. Miller, were regarded as the two belles of Carlsbad during their stay.

Mrs. Leeds, who is now recognized as one of the regular annual visitors to London for the season, has been doing a good deal of entertaining, both at Deauville at Aix les Bains, where, too, Lady Paget has been stopping. The latter, in fact, is once more resuming the habits of years before her sad accident, and is getting about a great deal more; while her twin sons Arthur and Reggie, have been on a visit to their sister and brother-in-law, Sir Ralph and Lady Paget, in Munich. Mrs. Leeds returns to New York very soon but only, it is said, in order to make arrangements for returning to more permanent quarters in Europe.

A new young hostess of next season will be Mrs. Gilbert Elliott (Miss Rita Barbey), daughter of the Mr Henry Barbey, of New York, whose marriage with Mr. Elliot, son of the late Mr. Frederick and Lady Charlotte Elliot, has just taken place in Switzerland. Among the other new Anglo-American hostesses of next year will be Lady Acheson, Lady Maidstone, Mrs. Montague Eliot (née Post) and Miss Clare Frewen, who is soon to be married to Mr Sheridan, of Frampton Court.

To the regret of many friends in England the new year will see the departure of Captain Sidney Cloman, Military Attaché to the United States Embassy in London, and Mrs. Cloman, as Captain Cloman has been recalled to his regiment in Texas. During their four years' residence over here they have made themselves very popular, and at their Wednesday afternoons at No. 15 Great Stanhope street during the season one was always sure of meeting all one's American friends.

Meanwhile Captain and Mrs. Cloman are going up to Appelby, Lord and Lady Hothfield's Westmoreland home, where they entertain for shooting at this time of the year, and later they will proceed to Scotland for a shooting visit.

LONDON AT ITS BEST.

Although to the seeker after excitement London would seem just now to be dull, the true London lover finds it at its best and pleasantest. Nor need one feel out of touch with the goings on of the social world, for always there are friends and acquaintances passing through who are glad to find "some one they know" in town, whom they can look up. Mr. and Mrs. Macgrane Coxe, who have been on the Continent for the past two months, are stopping at the Carlton for a week before returning to New York.

The northern gatherings are a centre of gayety to the Americans in Scotland, and Mrs. Bradley Martin is one of the chief hostesses for the Inverness meeting. She always takes her house party over en bloc and occupies the greater part of one of the large hotels in town. Balmacaan is a charming place to stay at, and Mrs. Martin, though she takes no active part in the day's sport, makes all arrangements in an admirable manner.

Another American notable at this time of the year is the North is Mrs Mildmay [illegible] who lives chiefly in Paris, at her beautiful home in the Bois de Boulogne, but now she has a young daughter "out" in society she will probably entertain on a larger scale at her place in Scotland than formerly. Miss Jessie Drake is an exceptionally bright and pretty girl and a wonderful linguist, speaking five or six languages quite as fluently as she does her mother tongue. Miss Drake has been out only two seasons, but has already seen a lot of the world and is quite an experienced young traveller.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Payne Whitney have been entertaining relatives and friends at Holwick, Yorkshire, including Count Széchényi, Mr. J. A. Burden, Mr Harriman, Mr. W. Payne Thompson and Mr. Clarence Mackay, but are soon to return to America. The men of the party have been having excellent sport on the moors notwithstanding the wind and rain which has been general all over the north country. One day ten guns accounted for 501½ brace of grouse, which is a record for that moor.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Pelton are at Castle Forbes, the property of Lord Forbes, in Aberdeenshire, which they have rented for the autumn season.

Lady Dufferin is not going to Scotland at present, as she has a large number of visits promised to friends in England, and so the tale of American visits in Great Britain goes on and never one complaint of dullness and ennui is to be heard.

MONKEY BURIED IN PARK AT CARDIFF

Jenny Was Great Favorite and Lord Mayor Gives Permission for Public Interment.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

THE lying in state of a monkey and its burial in the Victoria Park have diverted public attention in Cardiff for a little while from its fight with Carnarvon for the honor of holding the investiture remony of the Prince of Wales.

Jenny, was a pet monkey belonging to a. Karinago, of York street, in Canton, rdiff. Everybody in the Canton division Cardiff, at any rate, knew Jenny, who, r her gentleness and intelligence, was a ry great favorite. Jenny fell ill, and spite the best of medical treatment succumbed to pneumonia. Mrs. Karinago was the deepest distress, and everybody in ork street went into mourning. From the eath till the funeral day every window blind in the street was drawn as a mark respect for poor Jenny, who lay in state n a front room.

A correspondent describing the scene says that when he called at the house he found policemen regulating the crowd waiting for admission to pay their respects to Jenny, and he had to wait his turn among about three hundred people till he could be admitted.

"On a couch lay the coffin, made by one of the city's chief mourning establishments, and in it lay Jenny, wrapped in a spotless white shroud, while on her body was laid the loveliest of little wreaths."

Mrs. Karinago made application to the Lord Mayor of Cardiff for permission to bury her pet in the Victoria Park, for, she said, people like herself, who loved their pets, should be allowed to bury their pets in public parks. The Lord Mayor offered no objection, and in the park the little monkey now lies buried.

INVESTIGATING BETS, HE COMES TO GRIEF

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

Another martyr to science has been duly recorded. The Rev. Edward Palisser Carew-Brown, of Tiegnmouth, has fallen a victim to his passion for sociology. Desirous, as he explained, of writing a pamphlet to convince the public that "it was almost, if not quite, impossible to win money by the systematic backing of horses," he became a customer of a local betting house. When the police visited the place unexpectedly they found a slip of paper in the waste basket which showed an adverse balance of nineteence in the minister's account upon a total investment of £1 18s. 9d.

The investigator, having apparently thus just proved his hypothesis, was made the subject of the summons issued by the police, and the magistrate who officiated at the function which followed imposed upon him a fine of £15. This climax, it is held, should drive home with effectiveness the Rev. Carew-Brown's demonstration of the unprofitableness of betting, more especially as he has felt obliged to surrender his clerical employment in consequence of the publicity thrust upon his investigations. It is suggested that if such devotees of science will persist in such investigations it might be well to petition Parliament to authorise the issuance of special [illegible]

8,000 Ton Motor Driven Liner to Use Oil Fuel

Hamburg-American Company Constructing a Vessel Embodying All the Latest Developments of New Engines with Silent Exhaust and Odorless Fumes.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

IN the face of all the rumors and counter rumors as to what the Admiralty intends to do in the production of motor driven war ships, information as to what the Hamburg-American line actually is doing in the real construction of the 8,000 ton motor driven liner that is being built for it by the Hamburg firm of Blohm & Voss has attracted wide attention. This vessel's comparative tonnage may be judged by the fact that it is to be slightly larger than that of a P. and O. vessel of the Egypt class.

According to statements issued, the German line was firmly convinced that the marine motor now has reached a point of development at which it can be increasingly used for large vessels. Whether that belief at this stage extends to the utilization of present motor possibilities to the propulsion of large liners or ships of war is not discussed by the company's experts. With oil engines, naturally, the boilers become superfluous. The physical process of the transposition of the energy contained in the fuel into power is accomplished in the cylinders. A new device will render the exhaust almost silent and the fumes of the gases will be invisible and odorless. The two three-cylinder engines, which will give the ship a speed of twelve and a half knots, are the joint product of the Maschinenfabrik Augsburg-Nürnburg and of Blohm & Voss.

It is understood, too, that the German line has entered into a long term contract with the Standard Oil Company for the delivery of its oil fuel. The residue in the process of the refinement of the oil only will be used as oil fuel. The rate of heating with such oil, so tests have demonstrated, is one and a half times greater than that of coal. The loading of the liquid fuel, which will be done by pumps, is quicker and cheaper than coaling. Only twenty-seven persons will be needed for the oil engines, while in steam vessels of similar size about two hundred and fifty stokers and coal drawers would be employed. Moreover, the motor liner, by space conservation thus obtained, can carry two thousand tons more cargo than her steam rival of similar dimensions.

Chinese of Canton Tell of Cruelties

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.)
Hong Kong, August 6, 1910.

THE rooting out of the Colowan horde of pirates is one of the most important episodes in the history of South China. For sixty years at least, how much further back it is impossible to say, these pirates terrorized the whole of the Canton delta.

Leung-i-Wah, now a fugitive, was chief of the band for thirty-five years. His second in command, also named Leung, is now confined in the military prison at Macao. Leung-i-Wah's father and his grandfather, long since dead, were pirate chiefs in their day. The fact of Colowan being a territory in dispute between China and Portugal made the island all the easier as a base of operations for the pirates. Although within four miles of Macao, the oldest foreign colony in China, a stone's throw from China proper, and less than four hours from the British colony of Hong Kong, the pirates of Colowan have been able to hatch and execute their designs without fear of interruption.

So great has been the dread of the pirates among the ignorant people of the delta that they have been able to carry on their trade of murder, pillage and blackmail at their own sweet will, the people being under constant threat of torture or death if they dared to oppose them or inform the authorities. It is scarcely conceivable that such a lawless horde should have been allowed to exist for so many years, but they seem to have taken the fullest advantage of the intricate political situation, for neither Macao nor China appears to have been willing to assume the initiative in their extermination.

Since Colowan has been ostensibly under the jurisdiction of the Kwangtung government, but the sole claim to occupation seems to have been the maintenance of a small guard and collection of a trifling revenue from the quarrying of stone. The pirates took good care in all their operations to avoid conflict with the Portuguese. They were Chinese themselves, their particular prey were also Chinese, and Portuguese occupation of the island seems to have prevented the Chinese government from taking any step against them.

Emboldened by the energy and success of the measures taken to suppress the pirates, the people of the delta are now telling almost incredible stories of atrocities committed in recent years. Five hundred dollars was demanded of a poor woman as ransom for her kidnapped son. After canvassing all her friends she could raise no more than $30. This money was taken by the pirates and the mother was told that she would see her boy for the last time. The lad was brought out and tied to a stake, kerosene was poured over him and he was burned to death before the eyes of his mother. In another case a poor woman was unable to raise the hundred dollars required for the release of her son. The child was cut into pieces and cooked, and the remains were sent to her in a box.

Another unfortunate lad was thrust into a pig basket, weighted down with stones and flung into a river.

These are only specimens of hundreds of atrocious deeds committed by the Colowan pirates. A Hankow tea merchant, who was good for the $50,000 ransom demanded for him, was, on the other hand, luxuriously treated until the money was forthcoming, but before leaving he was made to swear that he would never disclose anything he had seen or heard during the eight weeks of his captivity.

STAMP COLLECTING AGAIN IN VOGUE

Public Learns It Is Hobby of King George and Court Circles Become Interested.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

STAMP collecting rapidly is coming into vogue again. And all because the public has ascertained that it for years has been one of King George's hobbies.

"Why, more than a dozen persons connected with the Court steady have decided to start collections and have come to us as clients," said the head of a prominent West End firm of philatelists. "Others who formerly collected have taken up the task again with renewed zeal and are bothering their friends half to death for stamps. Then, too, the infection has spread to all classes, though the effort to attain the most extensive and valuable collection fairly promises to become a contest as popular in society as was the solving of jig-saw puzzles for a time.

"Numbers of lawyers and men in the financial district have caught the idea, as we know by our books. All these collectors are keenly waiting the impending new issue of postage stamps, hoping that certain initial stamps may suffer some irregularities which will give them great value. As the Earl of Crawford remarked recently, stamp collecting as a boy's hobby is dead, but stamp collecting as a science is just beginning. And, of course, His Majesty has done a very great deal toward advancing stamp collecting to recognition as a scientific study. The boyish interest in stamps centres large number of fairly obviously different [illegible] better collection than [illegible] There it stops.

"But the new scientific [illegible] slowly but surely attracting much more in possession the veriest shade of difference in them and in collecting entire sets. For instance, almost all stamps [illegible] have been printed from a "sheet" being a piece of [illegible] upon which the engraver has cut [illegible] square of twelve or more impressions. Though the engraver could almost perfect similarity, each of these impressions would produce slight [illegible] to the trained eye, quite distinct markings upon them. So the intelligent collector sets to work to procure a specimen of all the twelve impressions, and so on. You can see, therefore, that it affords some interest."

OLD GARBS OFFERED AT BARGAIN RATES

(Special Dispatch.)

HUMOR OF BRITISH ARMY MANOEUVRES

Doctors Rehearse in War Game and Treat Imaginary Casualties of Battle.

VICTIMS ARE LABELLED

Then Treated to Stretcher and Ambulance Service Before Reaching Hands of Surgeons.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

ASIDE from the rain if there is anything that England is being surfeited with it is "army manoeuvres." Already hostilities have been waged over half the northern counties, involving regulars and the volunteer forces alike, and the conflict will continue through September. This is why the Queen's Own Rifles, of Canada, will have a thorough knowledge of the tenacity of real British mud before they finally break camp at Aldershot, where they were first brigaded on their arrival, to take the host for home.

Of all the varied manoeuvres, however, the most discussion has followed in the wake of the three days' movements on Salisbury Plain, where the doctors and members of the Royal Army Medical Corps were especially rehearsed in their specific branch of the war game. The imaginary casualties accruing from shot were dealt with just as they would be in actual conflict. Medical units pitched their field hospitals on the lines of march, and the aforesaid casualties were supposed to range from grazes and flesh wounds by shell splinters to fractures by bullets, the exact nature of each supposed injury being marked on the casualty label issued by the umpires.

UNHURT, BUT DISSATISFIED.

The surgeons promptly bandaged and splinted each case in the field, according to the label's diagnosis, and then the perspiring ambulance bearers had the pleasing duty of conveying healthy passengers miles, in some cases, to the central hospitals. Small wonder is it that stories continue afloat.

"Say, driver!" yelled one "victim," who was being borne in an ambulance that bumped him about like a cork in a mill race, "don't ye know I've broke my leg? Can't ye put some grease to the springs to ease the jolting?"

"Shut up!" roared the driver. "I reckon you've got a mighty soft job being a 'casualty'! You ought to be handlin' horses over these roads and then you'd know what work means!"

A soldier marching along was suddenly pounced on, given a ticket stating his injuries and told to fall out while army surgeons dressed the wounds. Then six men of the Field Ambulance Corps were assigned to a stretcher to carry him four miles over a rocky road to the field hospital.

"Lovely country, isn't it?" commented the comfortable stretcher passenger as he smoked a cigarette complacently while the bearers swore and perspired up and down the hills. "Most pleasant for walking!"

"Just for that," roared the disgusted bearers, when they thought there were little chances of being detected, "you can get out and walk a spell," and the "casualty" was forthwith dumped out in the roadway.

DIDN'T MIND "SHELL."

"I was shattered in the right leg by a shell splinter," complained the victim, when the hospital was reached, he having been restored to the stretcher for the last half mile, "but please have the surgeons look after the corns on my feet, for they will be dearer to the real base of [illegible]"

At one hospital six dusty, hot sore "Tommies" struggled up with a "casualty" whose label read, "Abdomen, rifle bullet through stomach; patient not sick, but very thirsty." The injured man grinning broadly, was taken to the operating tent, where the "bullet was extracted." Five minutes later the surgeon who had handled the instruments came out, looking grave.

"How is the patient?" asked an officer.

"Dead—died of hemorrhage, didn't have a chance," returned the surgeon. Then the "dead man" was carried to an adjacent tent, where he made such a lusty meal of beef and potatoes as would have done credit to a farmer who had just followed a plough over the "west eighty." It was high speed surgery with a vengeance, but finish army men insist that it was worth while and recommend the same to "your American army folks."

RIVER CROSSING CONTEST.

The other day there was a river crossing contest at the Hythe military canal. Various devices were utilized by the troops involved to make a fording. One regiment set afloat bundles of bedding straw, wrapped in the waterproof sheets used for bivouacking. About a dozen of these bundles were lashed to poles in rows of three, giving floating and carrying capacity to bear four men. Then a soldier swam with a rope to the other side, and this improvised raft was worked back and forth as a miniature ferry to carry men over.

The Oxfordshire Light Infantry brought numbers of table tops and poles from their barrack rooms. The table tops were lashed to the poles and a most effective bridge was quickly made and thrown across the canal. The Oxfords put the other contesting regiments down and out, for when this improvised equipment was used in order they were enabled to send a continuous [illegible]

THE YOUNGEST RECRUIT

A Short Story.

Hardin Bradley, youngest recruit of the Night Riders of Western Kentucky, reined in his panting horse at the crossing of the dirt road and Kinkead pike to listen. Behind him, over the woodland looming dark and mysterious in the moonlight, next the Cavanaugh home, he thought he heard a tumult such as follows a fire at night in the country. He held his breath a full minute, straining every nerve to catch the least sound.

Only the doleful hooting of an owl in a nearby tree, and the barking of a house-dog, far over the fields, came to his ears. It was fancy, he concluded, and he spurred on his horse towards the Back Woods, where the band was to meet that night. A skulking fox darted noiselessly across the road in front of him, causing his horse to shy to one side and almost unseating him. The birds by the roadside stirred uneasily, protesting in shrill voices against the unusual disturbance. All else was quiet, save the pad of the horse's muffled hoofs.

It was not the thought of fear or apprehension of assault; something else perhaps restless conscience or wavering resolve—plucked at his mind and called up wandering fancies; but the sound of the tumult followed him from the crossing of the dirt road and Kinkead pike, through the woodlands and down into the creek bottom in the Back Woods, where his first experience with the clan was to begin.

It was a new and strange mission he was on. All of his life Hardin Bradley had galloped over these hills in free abandon by day and night. Now he was on an orrand that called for secrecy and stealth and the realisation of it was humiliating.

And through the many miles he hurried past the quiet fields of tobacco and corn, along with the irresistible impression that a shouting of voices was behind him, came sharp and clear to his memory the last words Helen Marcum had said to him two nights before, when he rode away in anger.

"I will not—can not marry an outlaw. There is but one thing for me to say, for me to do, Hardin. If you join this outlaw band of men, there is but one end—one end to it all, to all the dreams of your life and mine. I will not—can not marry an outlaw."

And as his horse clattered down the stony bottom of the creek, the words seemed to come rhythmically with the echoing of the hoofs on the stones.

Perhaps there might have been a way out of it; some way to have dodged the issue and held them both—her and the respect of his neighbors down there under the ledge in the forest waiting for him. But it was too late now, the die was cast. He had given his word and he was keeping it. It seemed to him, as he sped on, that the glory of it and the respect of his neighbors, aside from his own interests, was more to him than the love of his childhood's companion and sweetheart back there on the Barton pike.

It was midnight when he arrived and the band stood huddled together, forty strong, under the overhanging rocks in the darkness of the deep forest. Big George Bennett was captain, and they were brave men and true, for each, in the months gone by, had been put to the test of burning and whipping and killing. Only Hardin Bradley was new in the strange warfare, and the seasoned ones gathered around with anxious curiosity to gage the parts of this clean-cut young giant of the Kinkead neighborhood.

There was work that night for the band. The last notice to come into the "pool" with their crop or have it burned, had been delivered and ignored by the Cavanaugh brothers. This was news to Hardin. He had not heard that his neighbors had been threatened, but they were taciturn men and kept a close mouth, even when trouble came.

The information was a shock to him, and the recollection of the tumult beyond the woodland at the crossing of the roads set his blood to tingling. He had forgotten that hallucination in the relentless recurrence of Helen Marcum's words.

"Since you are younger and without experience," George Bennett was saying to him, "we will appoint another to set the torch to-night. It is for you to stand out in the pike and watch, Hardin."

The words brought the boy's wandering thoughts back with a jerk.

He nodded his acquiescence, realizing what was wanted without explanation. These men talked little and asked few questions. They were in a war with neighbors to force them into the tobacco pool of the year, that a bolder front might be presented to the common industrial enemy. Let others use mild persuasion: it was for them to see that the backward ones came in, willing or unwilling, and the Cavanaughs, by their stubbornness, were forcing them to give the "first degree"—burning. The matter had been decided days before young Bradley came to join the clan.

It took half an hour for them to get their horses together and file out of the forest in the darkness under the leadership of Bennett. A mile behind him, at the rear of this strange procession of forty men strung out a few hundred yards apart, so that at no time were any two in sight of the third, rode Hardin Bradley.

He heard no more the tumult over the woodland or the sound of Helen Marcum's voice. Only the soft thud, thud, of the horse's feet ahead of him came to his ears, and only the sensation of the hunter of big game where danger lurks occupied his mind. For two hours they rode silent and alone along the winding roads, and not a traveller was encountered by any of them, for those who sought not the company of the outlaw band stayed close at home those nights.

At the edge of the woodland, around the bend of the road from the Cavanaugh home, the cautious Bennett halted and waited until the last man rode up.

"Here you take your stand, Hardin Bradley," he whispered, "one eye down the road and one up, and both ears open. You have your rifle. Be prompt to use it, if need be. You understand?"

That was all. With a wave of his arm Bennett rode slowly on, the band following, silent and grim, leaving Hardin the lone sentinel at the crossing of the roads.

It was not long, perhaps twenty minutes, when a tumult like that which follows a fire at night in the country came over the woodland again to Hardin. It was the shouting of men, the shout that came over the trees before, only there was firing of rifles back and forth—then silence.

Suddenly the sound of fast galloping horses came from around the bend of the road, and half of the forty dashed down the pike in the direction from which they came a half hour before.

Hardin waited his turn and galloped on with them, three hundred yards in the rear of the last man, according to instructions.

As the bend of the road up which he was to take flight was reached, Hardin turned his head towards the woodland and the Cavanaugh home. Against the cold gray light of early dawn he saw a flame of red light shooting skyward over the tobacco barn of Will and Ed Cavanaugh. When he reached the road where he must turn towards the Barton pike and his own home, he halted and waited for the arrival of the companion allotted to him as fellow traveller to that point. Uncontrollable curiosity impelled him to stop the onward rush of the man and ask what had happened.

"The Cavanaughs, both of them, showed fight and fired on us. We had to give them the 'first and third degree.' Both of them are dead."

Then he hurried on in silence.

Only George Bennett of the entire band knew of Hardin Bradley and Helen Marcum's engagement, and he did not know it had been broken off, or why. Hardin had been placed with a strange clan from the lower part of the state, after the whole countryside had been startled and outraged by the news of the Cavanaugh affair, and they had gathered once more at the foot of the ledge under the overhanging rocks in the Back Woods.

Perhaps, if Bennett had been present, the order would not have been given: it was that twenty men should go quietly to the Barton pike and fire the barn of Hiram Marcum, because of his fiery denunciation of the Night Riders at the Court House when the soldiers came.

Hardin Bradley was to set the torch!

The order was irrevocable. Hardin knew what it meant. He must destroy the Marcum property, perhaps kill her father in the execution of the dangerous task, or, the deadly alternative.

He shut his mouth grimly and moved out of the forest with his companions. They rode singly as before, no two in sight of the third, and Hardin Bradley came first as leader. Through the lonely miles he pondered the alternative and what it meant. Ever and anon, as he led these men towards the Marcum home, the recollection of the tumult beyond the the Cavanaughs mingled with the parting words of Helen Marcum and what this mission might mean to her.

At the entrance to the Marcum farm he halted until the last man rode up. He threw the gate open and drew his horse in the centre, facing the band.

"Men," he said, "this is my last night with you. I am going to quit now. From this moment won can consider me an outsider. I will keep my membership in the Society and sell with the pool as last year, but I am no longer a member of the Night Riders."

The speech for a moment held the band spellbound, so bold and unexpected was it.

"You must have gotten hold of some queer whiskey on the way," came half-jestingly from one of the strangers. "Such remarks, however, are out of place here. We have work to do to-night and it is high time we were moving."

"I have this to add," Hardin continued, as if the interruption had not come, "I shall know nothing of what has been done. We have no plans beyond to-night. I am a member of the Society but no longer of the Night Riders. I have said all I have to say."

He sat quite still on his horse, glancing from one to another in the moonlight, noting the effect of his words.

"You can not do this," the stranger replied quickly; "you know too much. It will be your death-warrant, boy."

Then, as he noticed the quiet tightening of the reins on Hardin's horse, he turned quickly and shouted, "Men!"

But it was too late to intercept him. With a sudden backward movement, Hardin Bradley wheeled his horse about and dug his spurs in his sides. The horse was around and away in a flash, and only one of the many bullets that followed him into the shadow of the trees on the hill next Hiram Marcum's home left its mark.

It was only a flesh wound in the right leg, but it stung the boy into resistance. He turned in his saddle at the brow of the hill and returned the fire five times. But the onslaught was too much, and he rushed on towards Marcum's house.

As he thundered down the opposite side of the hill, the tall figure of Hirum Marcum, a rifle to his shoulders covering the approach of the lone rider, stood suddenly in the road and commanded him to halt.

Hardin reined in his horse hurriedly and drew closer tearing the black handkerchief from his face.

"Quick!" he cried, "get to cover. The Night Riders are coming over the hill."

"And you, I suppose, are leading them," the older man answered steadily as he backed away, the rifle still covering the rider.

"I am not, Hirum Marcum," came the excited reply "I am Hardin Bradley, come to warn you that your barn is to be burned to-night."

"If that is true, sir, dismount and stand beside me. I heard the shots, but they mean nothing to me unless intended for intimidation. I shall not run to cover."

For a moment young Bradley turned his ear toward the woodland he had just passed, listening for the approach of horses. But there was no onrush of clattering hoofs, and presently he heard the sound of galloping feet along the pike.

He slowly freed himself from his horse and stood beside the belligerent old man.

"I reckon they will not come now that the alarm has been given," he said.

"For what have you done this, Hardin?" the old man asked. "I know you joined them. Now you have deserted. Were you implicated in this raid, too?"

"It is something that I have done," Hardin answered evasively. "I ran away in the night, deserted them like a coward, that I might save her and you from harm. It will cost me my life, perhaps, but I do not care. I will take the risk. It was more than I could stand."

Hirum Marcum looked him steadily in the eye for a few moments, then turned towards his home.

"Come," he said, "you are more of a man than I thought. Perhaps you are not too late."

"I HONESTLY BELIEVE 'FRUIT-A-TIVES'

The Greatest Cure For Rheumatism In The World"

KNOWLTON, QUE., Oct. 12th. 1909.

"For many years, I suffered from severe Rheumatism, and the attacks were very distressing and prevented me from doing my ordinary work. I tried many remedies and physicians' treatments, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and I was becoming very anxious for fear I would become a permanent cripple from the disease.

I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine has entirely cured me and I honestly believe it is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world."

E. E. MILLS.

Such a statement could not be bought from a man like Mr. Mills. He thinks too much of his good name, to sell it or sign it to an untruth. Mr. Mills tried "Fruit-a-tives" after all other treatment failed—and "Fruit-a-tives" cured him of Rheumatism. In the goodness of his heart, he wrote the above letter in order that sufferers in all parts of Canada would know that there is one remedy that actually does cure Rheumatism. This testimonial was entirely unsolicited on our part. We did not know that Mr Mills was taking "Fruit-a-tives" until we received the above letter.

It is a case like Mr. Mills' that proves the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in arresting and curing disease. It may be stated, without fear of contradiction, that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure Rheumatism when properly used.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and is the greatest Rheumatism cure known to modern science.

An Object of Pity

That part of our nature which we call the emotional is much more highly developed in women than in men. They are more sensitive, more tender, more sympathetic, more pronounced in their likes and dislikes, more susceptible to the extremes of pleasure and pain; and these refined mental qualities, no less than beauty of form and feature, make up the atmosphere of attractiveness and charm which always surrounds true womanliness.

The continued existence of these winning, engaging womanly characteristics depends to a very large extent on the regularity of the womanly functions and the condition of the womanly organs; and when these functions and organs become disordered or diseased the same mental qualities which are the glory of a well woman become the source of suffering and torture almost indescribable. Her cheery hopefulness is changed to a feeling of despondency, almost of despair, and she is haunted with forebodings of worse evils to come. Instead of being entertaining and companionable, she becomes moody and irritable, being unable to keep her mind from dwelling on her troubles. She becomes morbidly sensitive, imagining that she is being slighted or forsaken by her relatives and friends, and she has a most humiliating sense of her miserable condition and of her loss of her womanly attributes. If she is religiously inclined she is very liable to be oppressed with doubts and fears in regard to her spiritual condition, or to think that she is eternally lost. In addition to this, she has also to endure the most distressing aches and pains.

What makes the case still more pitiable, especially with married women, is the fact that few men understand or appreciate the extent of their suffering, or the seriousness of the troubles causing it. Many doctors even speak of these disorders as subjects for ridicule, and the poor sufferer often gets a reputation for being a crank or a scold when she more nearly approaches being a martyr.

As these disorders are due to a disordered condition of the womanly organs, it is evident that to effect a cure these organs must be restored to normal condition; or, in other words, the circulation, which has become congested and stagnant in these parts, must be improved so that the waste matter will be expelled, and the nourishment so badly needed be brought to these suffering organs. It is the waste matter, or broken down tissue, which is held in the stagnant blood vessels in these parts, that causes most of the suffering by oppressing the nerves located in these parts.

The remedy known as ORANGE LILY will positively relieve this congestion and restore normal circulation in the disordered organs. It is an applied or local treatment, and acts wholly on these parts. It is absorbed into the blood vessels in these organs, and as it has powerful antiseptic properties, it immediately acts on the waste matter held there, and causes it to be discharged. As the dead matter is discharged the nerves are relieved, the pain and mental troubles become less, and the nerves and blood vessels become stronger. ORANGE LILY thus proves its merit by actual, visible results. It acts as certainly and as positively on all female troubles as anti-toxin does on diphtheria.

Windsor, April 28th, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah.—I am very grateful to ORANGE LILY for the change it has made in my life. When I commenced its use eight months ago I felt I would be surely insane before the year was ended. The pain I suffered often made me wish for death, and besides I would have such fits of depression and nervous twitching that I would have to scream. I had doctored with three different doctors for over two years, and had also used both the Pierce and Pinkham medicines, but none of them seemed to reach my case. I felt some improvement after the first month's use of ORANGE LILY and have kept gaining ever since. I do not feel that I am entirely cured yet, but I am so much better than I was that I am sure I will soon be entirely well. I sleep well, and feel cheerful and happy, except that I am occasionally somewhat depressed, but these spells are getting fewer and milder. I have also noticeably improved in appearance. Enclosed find $2 for which please send me two boxes of ORANGE LILY and one of Cerate Massage. I might add that the matter which used to be freely discharged and which looked like a chicken's gizzard, is becoming very scant, and I imagine that the circulation is pretty well restored. Am I not right in this? Your sincere friend. MRS. L. E. A.

Free to all Sufferers

In order to enable every woman suffering from any form of female disorders to test the merits of ORANGE LILY, I will send to everyone who will send me her address, or the address of any suffering friend enough of the remedy for ten days' treatment, absolutely free. As each is worth 25c, it is only because I know that it must give relief that I make this free trial offer. Further, if any woman wishes expert medical advice, and will write me a full description of her case, I will submit same to the staff of the Cooney Medical Institute, Detroit, Mich., and they will write her direct without expense to her. # GIRL CAN LIFT 675 LBS.

In Scranton, Pa., lives Miss Isabelle Lengel, seventeen years old, a zealous church worker, who does not believe any other person of her age, sex and weight can equal her record of lifting 675 pounds, without harness. Her father, who is also something of an athlete, has offered to wager that she can outlift any girl of her age and weight in the world.

Miss Lengel weighs only 117 pounds. She is pretty, with a wealth of black hair and bright, snapping black eyes and a complexion that makes her the envy of her less muscular sisters.

While a student in the high school Miss Lengel was a familiar figure in the gymnasium, and easily outdid the others in her class. Miss Lengel exercises every morning with dumbbells weighing twenty-five pounds each.

TO THE FRONT

The good men must always be at the front. It is not enough that there be more good men than bad, but they must be at the front everywhere and at all times. One man in a position of influence is worth a thousand men single-handed and silent. It is a Christian's duty to wield all the influence he can honestly and judiciously, wherever he is. If a mechanic, be a leader as far as consistency will allow, in the councils of labor; if a "drummer" be a leader among commercial travellers: if a merchant, be as successful as conscience and circumstances permit; in politics, be always on hand; sacrifice time, convenience and comfort to be at the caucus and the polls. It requires more grace, more head and heart to be a leader in social, scholastic, mechanical, mercantile or political life, constantly and consistently, than it does to be the best deacon, superintendent or prayer meeting worker in the city, and it is as essential in its way.

BECOMING RICH

Too often the fact that a man is growing rich is first announced to his neighbor by a wider spread and a finer shew in his style of living. His wife and daughters begin to resemble the lilies. They neither toil nor spin, but Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of them. Next come a coach and span. Then, of course, a new house. The old one was ample. There is no increase of family but without a grander mansion how is the world to know that the man has made a fortune? So architects and painters and decorators in due time instal the household in a palace fit for a duke and they take their rank among "the upper ten." All the humble walks of life are abandoned, old friends are dropped, the hearts once often cheered, and the poor helped, look no longer for their coming. The cloak of selfishness is tightly drawn and the heart closed to the appeals for charity. How true, when blessings come in the way of great prosperity, they are wholly appropriated for self, and the good they were intended to do never speed on missions of mercy, but are tightly held dwarfed and thwarted altogether and they are not known to have become rich by the many blessings bestowed or good done, but only by an outward dazzling show that a few years will obliterate.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

In these days of degeneracy and lack of gallantry, every parent should insist on knowing the whereabouts of daughters after eight o'clock at night. Too many girls there are who are permitted to roam the streets at their own free will at almost any time of night, and who ultimately come to some bad end. We are not a croaker, neither do we believe in taking away the freedom, to a reasonable degree, from the boys and girls, but we do believe there would be fewer heartaches, fewer broken homes and more purity and womanliness in the world did every parent keep the child off the streets at unseemly hours.

• • •

Many an unwise parent works hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of giving his children a good start in the world, as it is called. Starting a young man out with money left by his relatives is like tying a bladder under the arm of one who cannot swim. Ten to one he loses the bladder and goes to the bottom. Teach him to swim and he won't need the bladder. Give your child a good education. See that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated and his whole nature subservient to the laws that govern man and you will give what will be of more value than the Indies. You have given him a start no misfortune can deprive him of. The earlier you teach him to depend upon himself the better.

Parable of the Tobacco Seed

One of our town girls hands us the following with the request that we publish it for the boys to read, and that reading it they may be made wise hereby.

Then shall the kingdom of Satan be likened unto a grain of tobacco seed, which, though exceedingly small, being cast into the ground, grew and became a great plant, and spread its leaves rank and broad, so that vile worms formed a habitation thereon.

And it came to pass in the course of time that the sons of men looked upon it and thought it beautiful. To make them look big and manly, the lads put forth their hands and did chew thereof; and some it made sick, and others to vomit most filthily. And it further came to pass that they who chewed it became weak and unmanly, and said, "We are enslaved and can't cease chewing it." And the months of all who were enslaved became foul, and they were seized with a violent spitting, and did spit even in the ladies' parlours and in the house of the Lord of Hosts, and the saints of the Most High were greatly plagued thereby.

And in the course of time it came also to pass that others snuffed it, and they were taken suddenly with fits, and they did sneeze with great and mighty sneezes, in so much that their eyes filled with tears, and they did look exceedingly silly. And yet others cunningly wrought the leaves thereof into rolls, and did set fire to the end thereof, and did look very grave and calf-like, sucking it, and the smoke of their torment ascended up forever and ever.

And the cultivation thereof became a great and mighty business in the earth, and the merchantman waxed rich by the commerce thereof. And it came to pass that the saints of the Most High defiled themselves. And even the poor, who could not buy shoes, nor bread, nor books for their little ones, spent their money for it, and the Lord was greatly displeased therewith and said, "Wherefore this waste; and why do these little ones lack bread and shoes and books? Turn your attention to change this wicked evil which has grown up in your midst in a gospel land. Turn your fields into corn and wheat, and defile not yourselves any more, and God will bless you and cause the smile of His countenance to shine on you." But with one accord they all exclaimed, "We cannot cease from chewing and snuffing, and puffing. We are slaves to the evil plague."

There is no greater token of respect and affection than an invitation to enter the real heart and home life of a family. And yet how seldom do we offer ourselves the relaxation and our friends and neighbors the pleasure of such an invitation! Is a guest coming? Straightway, we set to work to clean house from garret to cellar; we cook, and bake, and stew, and fuss, and sigh, and work, as though some terrible calamity were about to befall us, instead of that which should be the most delightful anticipation, the visit of a friend. If the house is clean and fair enough for our nearest and dearest, why not for our friend? If dinner is ample for the family, why not for our added guest? And will not the day and the visit be more delightful for both hostess and guest, if the fare is plain and the faces at the table bright and fresh, not wearied and flushed as with an added burden instead of an added pleasure? Can we not learn to offer ourselves sincerely and simply, just as we are, in our everyday clothes and manners, to those who come to us? Let social intercourse be frank and frequent and friendly. Let us be honest and genuine, and fine and courteous in our daily lives, so when the friend comes he will find us untroubled and serene, as we always are, ready to receive the good thought, the story, the laugh, and to give him our very selves in return, our best in conversation, and appreciation, and that will make the humblest dinner a feast for kings.

A Story of D. McNicholl.

Mr. T. C. Irving, of Bradstreets' agency, Toronto, is a famous collector of anecdotes and personalia. He has lately been in the West and according to The Vancouver Sunset has been telling the following stories of Mr. D. McNicholl, vice-president of the C.P.R.:

"Here is the first. A well-known general manager of a big Canadian bank tried to collect a bill from the C.P.R. Whether the bill was a just one or not matters little for the purposes of this story. Anyway the general-manager became exasperated with the C.P.R. and wrote a caustic letter to Mr. McNicholl in which he said if the bill were not paid instanter he would instruct every branch of his bank not to use the C.P.R. passenger trains when avoidable, not to use C.P.R. telegraphs, nor C.P.R. express lines, nor anything with a C.P.R. label on it.

"Mr. McNicholl's reply was brief and to the point. He said if the general-manager carried out his threat he would instruct every employe of the C.P.R. to refuse any bank bills bearing the label of that particular bank. When the general-manager got that letter he concluded he had played the wrong card with Mr. McNicholl. What would happen to any bank whose bills were systematically refused by the C.P.R. can be easily imagined. Anyway the bank never boycotted the C.P.R."

Freeman the Historian.

It was an English bishop who, when the historian Freeman had worn out his patience with his rudeness, introduced him to a waiting audience as "the distinguished scholar that so admirably describes and illustrates the savagery of our ancestors."

His Part.

"Who is the responsible person in this firm?" asked the brusque caller of the office boy.

"Can't tell you, sir," replied the pert lad, "but I'm the one who gets all the blame."

Curiosity is looking over other people's affairs and overlooking our own.—Warfield.

"THE THIRD PARTY."

Hon. Peter Mitchell Was a Bohemian of a Long Disappeared School.

The last of the series of disastrous fires which have pursued the career of The Montreal Herald is responsible for some interesting reminiscences by Mr. Lutton, the veteran Quebec journalist, who for years has contributed a weekly page of comment to that model among weekly newspapers, The News and Eastern Townships Advocate of St. Johns, Quebec. Particularly interesting are Mr. Lutton's references to Hon. Peter Mitchell, M.P., one of The Herald's famous editors, who used to be described as "The Third Party." Of Mitchell the writer says:

"Upon the scene, then, entered the late 'Sir' Peter Mitchell, on Beaver Hall Hill, where The Herald, phoenix-like, rose from its ashes.

"Now, if ever the true Bohemian walked this planet, he did so in the person of the 'Hon. Peter.'

"When one thinks of the spaciousness of the man; his charming sense of irresponsibility; his happy indifference to overdue notes; his child-like insistence upon joy as his inheritance; his profound and careless ignorance of the duties of management; his ingenuous delight in the notion that he was moulding public opinion while he was, in reality, playing the dashing role of boulevardier; his slap-dash editorials which warned the wicked Conservatives at Ottawa that 'we had our eye on them,' after the manner of the 'Skibereen Eagle,' which warned the Emperor of Russia 'that it was watching his conduct,' or fulsomely bespattered what the "Hon. Peter" called the 'McShane-Mercier administration,' then reigning at Quebec (save the mark!)—when one thinks of these aspects and attitudes, he can only regret the passing of so gay, so delightful a figure, for which a more strenuous generation is not inclined to find a place.

"To see 'Sir Peter' sallying forth, say, in the winter, enveloped from head to foot in his seal coat; to note him the cynosure of the general regard at the St. Lawrence Hall, where the local politicians used to congregate; to observe the entire delight of the large creature in life, in the passing moment, in clinking his glass, smoking his cigar, throwing off coruscations of wit in the careless moment, while the paper came out or did not come out—was to observe as charming and inconsequent a creature as ever made for the general optimism and gayety."

Land Turtle.

There is one little denizen of the marsh world that makes his slow way quite unmolested amongst the prowling food-seekers of the drowned lands. Science has fastened a long Latin name to this fearless little chap, but the barefoot, freckled boy calls him "mud-turtle."

He is found along the causeways and waterways of the warm, dark water and muck bottoms. At the slightest sound he pitches forward and hides himself with lightning-like contortions in the friendly water weeds and, if you stand quietly by and watch, you will, ere long, see him swim to the surface, protude his little snake-like head on its leathery, wrinkled neck and watch you from bright, yellow-rimmed eyes.

He is a curious, good-natured, even a friendly little creature.

His shell house, which he carries on his back, is beautifully marked with varying shades of grey and brown, slashed with flecks of deep vermilion.

Should hungry mink or gliding marsh snake appear, he has simply to draw in his head, legs and short, spiky-like tail and be immune from danger. That shell, with its sharp, corrugated edges, makes the turtle too indigestible a meal for hungry womper, mink or marsh-coon to relish.

And so the harmless little land-turtle, who is first-cousin to the ferocious snapping turtle, commonly called "moss back" by the boy of the freckles, lives out his days. He grows very slowly and outlives almost any other denizen of the marsh or water. Through the long summer days he suns himself on bog or log and when the cold weather comes he burrows deep in the muck and sleeps out the long winter.

SERMON FROM SHAKESPEARE

(Copr. 1909, by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.)

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child
King Lear, Act I, Sc. 4.

The family is at the base of human society. An ideal state is merely a larger family. In the state a traitor is detested, abominated; in the family a thankless child corresponds to a selfish, self-seeking, faithless citizen. At times tales are told of children neglecting aged parents, turning them out of doors, refusing them support. Nothing creates greater loathing in the minds of men. The act is not crime, but the criminal, the thief or incendiary, is more estimable.

If a man does never so slight a kindness to another, how pained he is when he learns he has been rewarded with abuse or worse. Think for a moment what parents are to children. Night and day through their children's infancy they have toiled and suffered for their little ones. With few exceptions children reach mature years without having to take thought for the morrow. The energy and self-sacrifice of their parents provide for them. They are protected from danger; they are enabled to go singing with childish glee through wood and meadow; they are prepared for their life's work by tender hands which seek no reward save the success and happiness of their offspring. This self-sacrifice is made so willingly and accepted in such a matter-of-course way that few children realize just what they owe their parents.

Shakespeare is severe on ingratitude under all conditions of life. Ingratitude is "monstrous"; it is a "marble-hearted fiend"; it is a "heinous sin." In his estimation it is worse than "lying, vainness, babbling." This is his attitude towards the ingratitude of man for man; the ingratitude of child towards parents is to him deadly sin. When Shakespeare made Lear utter the words "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child" he no doubt had in his mind the story of the Hindu peasant who, on finding a serpent numb with the cold, put it in his bosom and warmed it back to life. In return the serpent stung its benefactor to death. But how much more horrible is the thankless act of a child towards its parents. The serpent merely followed nature. It had no consciousness of having received benefits. With few exceptions men and women are the conscious products of self-sacrifice. Even the humblest and most illiterate owe a debt to their parents. The most boastful "self-made man" will find, if he reflects, that he is largely the result of his early training. There are exceptions. There are successful men who were cast on their own resources in infancy, who have not known the mother-love which glorifies existence, the fatherly care and self-sacrifice which ennobles life. But these cases are exceptional, so exceptional that they invariably cause comment.

Lear uttered the words quoted at the close of his curse against Goneril, the curse of an enraged father against a thankless child. Shakespeare always writes with an eye to his audience. A certain tragic pleasure is derived from the passionate curse of foolish old King Lear against his more-than-ungrateful daughter. No evil that could befall her seems too severe. On the other hand the filial love, the gratitude of Cordelia for the father who has mistaken and cruelly treated her wins applause and admiration. She was a thankful child. Nothing that her father could do or say to her could make her forget that she was his child. She loved him according to her bond (duty). Disinherited by foolish old Lear—driven from him with wrathful words, she still loved him.

"Good, my lord," she says,
"You have begot me, bred me, loved me; I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honor you."

By her sweetness and sense of duty Cordelia brings out by contrast the truth that to have thankless children bites sharper than a serpent's tooth.

Shakespeare esteemed filial love highly. This is splendidly shown in Coriolanus. There we have a grateful son. He is stern, selfish, self-seeking. He despises his fellow-creatures. He is proud and vain—a giant taking pleasure in his mere strength of arm. But the spectator likes Coriolanus. Why? He has underneath that rough exterior a heart of love. He loved his mother. Even his enemies confessed that he did famously "to please his mother." When his heart was stubbornly resolved to destroy his native city it weakens as his mother approaches. He vainly cries: "Out, affection!" It was his mother's words,

"There is no man in the world
More bound to's mother"

that had most to do with making him spare his country.

Ingratitude in any one is base. Its tooth is keener than the winter wind; the sting of frost is not so sharp; but a thankless child is an unnatural monster. It is necessary to be on guard. Carelessness of others is apt to become a habit and the thoughtless often become the thankless.

THE BEST RESORT OF ALL.

I've been away all summer long,
And now an inn I've found,
The duplicate of which is not
In all the country round;
A bedroom more than large enough,
A bath that's all my own,
A wardrobe where each gown may hang
Upon its hook alone;

Three scrumptious meals served piping hot
To epicurean me—
Swift service, which does not include
The omnipresent fee;
Iced drinks on tap, at any time—
An always fresh supply,
A dining room which does not entertain the social fly!

In many other ways besides
This inn so rare excels;
There are no "regulations" here—
No foolish hissing bells!
I need not fuss and fume upon
Dame Fashion's cruel rack,
For there is some one here, thanks be,
To hook me up the back!

Its name? I might as well confess,
The joke's on me alone—
This caravansary ideal
I found—when I came home!
—New York Times.

A DAILY THOUGHT.

Begin the day with smiling eyes,
Pursue the day with smiling lips;
Through clouds behold the smiling skies
Up where the laughing sunbeam trips.

Let smiling thoughts within your mind
Drive gloom and cold despair apart,
And promptings of a genial kind
Keep ever glowing in your heart.

Meet trouble with a cheery mien;
Be jovial in the face of care—
He routs all mischief from the scene
Who greets it with a jocund air.
—John Kendrick Bangs.

New Oyster Dishes.

Oysters are in season again—which is no news whatever to the many who for weeks have been smacking their lips in anticipation of the time when the succulent bivalves would resume their place of importance on the hotel restaurant menus.

Roast Oysters a la Jack.

Leave the oysters on the half shell. Season first with lemon juice and paprika and tabasco sauce. Add a pinch of Parmesan cheese and a little pepper and salt and bake in hot oven.

Boston Flip.

Open in their own liquor two dozen extra small oysters. Add a good sized piece of butter and a spoonful of chopped peppers. Let simmer for a few minutes and then serve on dry toast on a red hot plate.

Dunston's Oyster Stew.

Add to the liquor of a dozen fine large Lynnhaven oysters one-half cup of celery, chopped fine and a large piece of butter. Let this cook in a chafing dish until the celery is thoroughly done. After seasoning with peper, salt and paprika, add the dozen oysters and a cup of sweet cream. Let all simmer together until it boils, then add half a sherry glass of Madeira and serve with toast.

SOME SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Cream of Celery Soup.

Chop fine one head of celery and put on to cook in one pint of water, boil until tender, add one pint of milk, thicken with a spoonful of flour ,add one tablespoonful of butter, season to taste and strain, then add one cupful of whipped cream and serve at once.

Sauce Pocahontas.

A delicate maple sauce for vanilla ice cream is made of hot syrup with chopped hickorynuts stirred into it. The pretty name for this is Sauce Pocahontas.

Pulled Bread.

On bread-making days a pleasant variation on the usual loaf or biscuits is "pulled bread." This is a great delicacy in England, used for luncheon or tea. Crisp, delicately browned and toothsome, it is just the thing to serve with a bit of cheese and a cup of tea.

To make "pulled bread" take a loaf of freshly baked bread from the oven, and while it is still warm and rather underdone pull the inside out of it in irregular pieces about the size of an egg. Put these in a good oven and bake a delicate brown.

Recipe for Fairy Ginger Bread.

The fairy ginger bread, which is especially suitable for afternoon teas or porch parties, consists of one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, and one and seven-eighths cupfuls of bread flour. Granulated sugar can be used instead of brown, but the best flavour is obtained with the light brown. Add the milk gradually, or it would separate and have to be beaten more after the flour is in. Always use the glass measuring cup, as the proportions are then exact. Spread the mixture thinly on a buttered baking sheet with a spatula and bake in a medium oven. Watch carefully and turn the pan frequently during baking, that all may be evenly baked. Cut while hot.

How to Make Potato Puffs.

For the potato puff which is used to garnish the fish, boil the potatoes in intense heat, keeping the cover on; drain and put through a ricer. To two cupfuls of hot cooked potatoes and three tablespoonfuls of salt, add the yolks of three eggs slightly beaten. Put this mixture in a pastry bag, but do not moisten the bag, as the potatoes would get watery, and press into the desired shape on the board, and then brown in oven.

An Allowance for Children and

If children have no money of their own, how can they learn to manage it? Begin when they are very young and teach them gradually the use of money by arranging household work so they can earn a few pennies, and perhaps by giving moneyed rewards for special excellence in school. Whenever children are given money let them understand it is because they have earned it by good behavior. Money should not be doled out to a child as if it were to a beggar. It has a right to its allowance; and children that are early taught that they must furnish equivalent of money received learn the value of money and grow up to be respected because they are self-respecting. The plan we have suggested is followed in many families and each child is paid a fixed sum for certain duties While the sums earned by smaller children are trivial, the children are compelled to pay out certain small necessary expenses from them, and to contribute a penny of the earnings to the church contribution box each Sunday. As soon as they have a dollar saved they are urged to put it in the bank, unless it is near a birthday or the holidays, when extraordinary expenditures are in order. In one family the writer remembers it is the rule of the mother to make a liberal allowance of paper, pencils, and other sundries for school, and if any of these articles are wasted or used up before a certain time the child in fault is compelled to purchase others from her own money, a very definite and usually effective way of reaching carelessness. By gradually becoming used to spending money, and learning by "paying" the suffering and folly of carelessness, the child grows to have values and when she arrives at an age suitable may use an allowance given her wisely and with proper discretion.

Discontent.

It is astonishing how small a proportion of the men and women, old and young, who inhabit this earth are contented with their lot. How few laborers in this great work-a-day world receive payment commensurate, in their own eyes, with the labour performed. How is it with the housewife, who from morning till night toils unceasingly for her family, yet with all her diligence, must pinch here and cramp there, keeping her own wants in the back ground, that the household she manages may have clothes to wear and food to eat? It is so throughout every department of industry to a great degree, and one great crying evil is the cheapness to which nearly all work done by the human hand is reduced. The craving for cheapness and hunting after bargains is not only economically false, but a cause of great suffering to thousands of individuals. It is hard, in fact impossible, to be content and be in want But when want is past, and comparative comfort is granted, almost invariably comes a craving for something still better, and those very ones who have felt the press and pinch of bitter need, are ready to drive as sharp a trade, and exact as much in exchange for very little pay as those who have experienced none of the grinding lessons of poverty. When we learn to deal fairly and squarely by ourselves and others a spirit of contentment will be almost sure to bless us.

BIG TOE USED FOR THUMB PRINT

A problem that confronted the officials of a Californian bank was solved, and, at the same time, identification methods were given a new twist when a Hindu squatted down on the floor, kicked off his shoe and used the great toe of his right foot for stamping an impression on the deposit slip. The Hindu signatures all look alike to bank cashiers, who use thumb imprints as an additional means of identification in cases where depositors hail from the Far East. But this system could not be followed out in the present because the would-be depositor's hands, which had been scalded, were tied up in bandages.

THE PILLAR OF LIGHT

moving on. There was a momentary relief in looking at the land. The cliffs the solitary white houses, the little hamlets half hidden in cozy nooks, seemed to be so absurdly near. It was ridiculous to imagine that help could be long deferred. The seaward passing of a steamer, carrying flowers from the Scilly Isles to Penzance for Covent Garden, caused a flutter, but the sight of a Penzance fishing-smack scudding under jib and close-reefed foresail between the rock and Gathenbras Point created intense excitement. Noah, gazing across the flood for the return of the dove with the olive branch, could not be more pleased than these castaways in their granite ark when the brown-sailed boat came within their view.

The window in the coal-cellar opened fair towards the Land's End, and the grimy occupants of this compartment could look their fill at the messenger of life. A rich New Yorker in vain offered a hundred dollars to any man who gave up his place in the line after he had got himself, by the operation of the time-chart, was remorselessly sent away from the narrow loop-hole. Dollars and pounds sterling have a curiously depreciated value under such circumstances.

The men of the watch were always questioned for news by the unemployed majority. They related the comings and goings of the Falcon, carried sympathetic inquiries from story to story promiscuous passing to and fro being forbidden owing to the narrowness of the stairs and seized every trifling pretext on their own part to reach the topmost height and feast their eyes on the extensive panorama visible from the storm-girt gallery. Had they watched the coast-line less and the reef more their observations would have had value.

Quite early in the day, the purser handed to the occupants of each room a full list of passengers and crew, with the survivors grouped separately. In only three instances were husband and wife both saved. The scene in the saloon accounted for this seeming discrepancy. Dazed men and senseless women were wrenched from each other's clasp either by the overwhelming seas or during the final wild fight for life at the head of the companionway stairway. A wreck, a fire in a theatre, pays little heed to the marriage tie.

The third and last meal of the day was eaten in silence and gloom. All the pure lamps were diverted to the kitchen, because Brand, during a further detailed survey of the stores, made in company with Mr. Emmett and the purser, discovered that there was an alarming deficit of fresh water in the cistern.

In the hurry of the earlier hours a serious miscalculation had been made in transmuting cubic feet into gallons. It became an instant necessity to use every heating appliance at command and start the distillation of a drinkable fluid.

The Gulf Rock light did not possess a proper apparatus. The only method that could be adopted was to improvise a coil from canvas rolled into a tube. The exterior was varnished, and wrapped in wet cloths to assist the condensation of the steam. Hence, every kettle and pot being requisitioned for this paramount need, cocoa could be supplied to the women alone, whilst the taste of the water, even thus disguised, was nauseating. No more potatoes could be boiled. Raw, they were almost uneatable. And potatoes happened to be the food most plentiful.

The genuine fresh water, reduced to a minimum in the cistern, was only a little better in condition unless it was filtered, and Brand decided that it ought to be retained for the exclusive use of those seriously ill. Patients were multiplying so rapidly that the hospital was crowded; and all fresh cases, as they occurred, perforce remained where they were.

Neither Constance nor Enid felt the time hang heavily on their hands. They were too busy, though the new ordinance regarding the food supply transferred their attention from native cooking to the replenishing of utensils which must be kept full of salt water at boiling-point.

Pyne was an invaluable assistant. In the adjustment of refractory canvas tubes over hot spouts, in the manipulation of the condensing plant so that it might act efficiently, in the trimming of lamps, and the stocking of the solitary coal fire, he insisted on taking to himself the lion's share of the work.

He always had a pleasant quip or funny story to brighten their talk.

"You can conquer trouble with a grin," he said. "Worry doesn't cut ice."

Enid, of course, chaffed him about his American accent, which, she protested, she would acquire, after a week's practice.

"It is so quaint to our ears," she went on. "I never before grasped the reason why Mark Twain makes me laugh. All he does is to act as a phonograph. Every American is a born humorist."

"There's something in that," admitted Pyne. "We do try to dis-inter a joke. Say, have you girls ever heard how an English professor explained the Yankee drawl?"

"No," they cried.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Sept. 18th. 1910.

(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Limscott, D.D.)

Three Questions. Matt. 22: 15-29. xxxiv.: 46.

Golden Text—Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's. Matt. xxii.: 21.

Verse 15. Why did the Pharisees want to entangle Jesus in his talk?

Why is it that Christians of one creed often feel bitter towards those of another creed, and sometimes try to "entangle" them, as the Pharisees did Jesus?

Verse 16. Why did not the Pharisees go to Jesus personally?

Why did the Pharisees associate with their own disciples the Herodians, in their attempt to ensnare Jesus?

Why did they pay Jesus this great compliment, seeing they were so opposed to him?

Is it ever right to lie for a good cause? Why or why not?

What good lessons may we learn from these bad men?

Verses 17-21. If these men had really been truth seekers, how would Jesus have probably answered their question, as to whether it was right for the Jews to pay taxes to Caesar?

What difference is there between the moral obligation for a man to pay his legal taxes, and to pay his butcher bill, for example?

What was Jesus' own practice as to paying taxes? (See Matt. xvii.: 24-27.)

Jesus rebuked these hypocrites sharply, to what extent should we follow his example in this?

Point out wherein the remarkable skill of Jesus' answer consisted.

Verse 22. Why was it great folly for them to suppose they could entangle Jesus in his words?

Can you cite the case of any who have opposed God, without bringing disaster upon themselves?

Verses 34-40. Why is it that men still persist in opposing God, when history shows that every man who has done so has suffered loss, and that all who persisted have been destroyed?

What is the chief object in life?

What can we do, or what must we be, in order to attain the chief object of life?

If a man love God with all his powers, and his neighbor as himself, does he perfectly please God?

If love is the dominating power in a man's life, it makes the will and the motive perfect, and thus God is pleased; but does Jesus teach that love guarantees perfect actions? Give your reasons.

What is a proper self love, that which Jesus says must be the standard of our loving our neighbor?

May every one attain to loving God with all the heart, and his neighbor as himself, and how can it be done? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Verses 41-46. Why could not the Pharisees answer Jesus' question as to whose son the Christ was?

What is the answer to the question of Jesus as to how the Christ could be David's son and also his Lord?

What do YOU think of Christ?

Lesson for Sunday, Sept. 25th, 1910. Temperance Lesson. Gal. v.: 15-26.

HEALING POWER A MARVEL

So remarkable is the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment that the results of a single application are often a marvel to persons who witness them for the first time. Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., tells how her son was cured of blood poisoning which got started in a wound received at a threshing. Relief was prompt and cure effected by three boxes.

WHERE'S MASTER?

A Story of King Edward's Dog—In its Fourth Edition

The fourth edition has already been printed in England of a fifty page volume entitled "Where's Master?" and attributed to Caesar, the late King Edward's famous dog, who walked in a prominent place in the King's funeral procession.

Caesar writes with a simplicity which carries real pathos of the events shortly before, during and after the disappearance of his master, as seen through faithful canine eyes. Speculation has been busy as to through whose pen Caesar has been speaking —the names of Princess Victoria, of other members of the Royal family, and of the nobility having been mentioned. At any rate Caesar's first literary effort is immensely popular in London.

"Where's Master? I've been hunting for him high and low for days," begins Caesar. "I want Master—he knows just how to rub my hair up the wrong way, just how I like my ears treated. I want a bone from Master's plate. I never worry him when he's at table, but he knows I'm always there beside the right leg of his chair.

"I made sure he was in the throne room, the great room with the slippery floor, where I have to walk very carefully on the tips of my nails . . . I'm awfully afraid I left my mark on the throne room door, but I hope it won't be noticed, and it is, Master will put it all right, for he'll be very cross when he finds out they wouldn't let his little dog in.

"I know there was some one inside, for I heard voices just like those I've listened to while master was in church and I was outside waiting for him. I've always tried to be a specially good dog on Sunday, but Master says I've never been quite good enough to take inside of church though I've been almost everywhere else with him.

"It was a fine time we had at Sandringham. Only a Sunday or two ago . . . when he said: 'This won't do, Caesar, you know, it's church time.' I took no notice but put my paws across his knees and my nose on my paws and yawned. 'I'm sorry, old man,' Master said. 'I'm tired too, but I must go to church, you know.' For a minute or two he sat quite still. Then he jumped up and sent me flying, and said, quite sharply for him, 'You know I never miss church on Sunday. . .

"Then I went to have a talk with Daisy, who lives at Sandringham, and who is a very decent dog for a smooth-haired terrier. . . . She said she had dreamed all night long, horrid nightmary dreams about drowned puppies, that when she awoke she thought she saw the moon crying, and began to howl.

"'It's the same dream,' she said, 'I dreamt and the same moon I saw two days before that day when the poor old gentleman died as he was watching the guns.'

"'You're an old woman,' said I, 'your liver is out of order. Go and chew some grass.'

"I couldn't sleep that night. My bed was all knobs and creases . I trampled it down, 'round and 'round, but I couldn't get it really as I like it. I always sleep in Master's bedroom, and I pity any one who dares disturb him in the night. . . Just as I was getting off to sleep in the early morning, I started up, and every hair on my back stood on end, for in the corner of the room I saw a strange dark shadow I bared my teeth and growled as fiercely as I could.

"'Lie still, Caesar,' said the voice from the bed, 'I've got a bit of a cough, old man, and that's what disturbed you,' . . . and I waited and watched the shadow.

"I snuggled close inside Master's thick coat next morning on the train. . . . And every time I began to doze I was shaken awake by his cough. . . . You'd better see a vet. when you get home, thought I. I had a cough too, once. I remember the vet. said they must keep me in what he called an even temperature. I don't know what that is. . . . But I kept up that cough for weeks, and even now when I'm not satisfied with my meals I can bring it on again if I try very hard. . . .

"Where is Master? . . . They are bringing boxes into the palace and there is bustle and movement everywhere But I can't make it out. I smelt one of the packages, and there were flowers inside. It was a sickly, dead smell.

"By the way, I haven't smelt Master's cigars for days. The last time was on that Friday afternoon when the man in the long black coat wanted to keep me out of Master's room. I tried to push past him through the door, but he told some one to hold me back. I snarled.

"'That's the King's physician,' I heard them say.

"'And I'm the King's dog,' I said, and I barked and snapped at the people at the door. I knew Master wanted me. . . . I watched at Master's feet for—well, it seemed hours, but I always held my breath for fear of disturbing him, and it may have been only minutes. And then some one carried me out and called me a poor little dog.

"Master's dead! . . . Some stupid person carries and told me a long story about Master having gone away, but I just yawned in his face. Master doesn't go away without his little dog. If he did I'd follow him and I'd find him. . . . Where is Master?

"They were dressing up Kildare in her best, and giving her an extra special rub-down. Master's starting on his last journey to-day, they say, and Kildare goes with him. If only I might go with him too. Little dogs never march in a procession, they tell me.

"She says I can go if I am very good and follow close behind Master, and walk very slowly and never move from the middle of the road. . . . I'm so fri-frightened. I've never been afraid before in my life. I've seen crowds before, huge crowds. They always used to shout and wave their hats, but these people are silent.

"I think I shall just put my tail tight between my legs and try and creep away somewhere, away from all these people and these uniforms. . . . Do you know, I had almost forgotten. I belong to the King. How beautifully Kildare is marching, P[illegible] proud to be here. And I'm proud too. . . . I'm marching in front of the king.

"I've no history. I've no pedigree. I'm not high born, but I loved him and I was faithful to him and he didn't care how lowly or humble man or beast might be as long as they did their best and were faithful.

"We've come to the end of the journey. They say I can't follow Master any further. They say there are no little dogs where Master has gone.

"But I know better."

PETERBOROUGH SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 17 1910

FIFTEEN THOUSAND PEOPLE SAW THE PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION THE ATTENDANCE BROKE ALL RECORDS

A Vaster Crowd Than Has Been Was Present at Exhibition Park Yesterday---Monster Attendance in the Evening Saw Excellent Programme---In All Departments the Fair Was Superior to Any Previous Exhibition ---Attractions More Entertaining, Exhibits More Numerous, Crowd Larger.

At least fifteen thousand people saw the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition yesterday, and this mammoth attendance breaks all previous records, having the best total hitherto far in the rear, months of hard, faithful work on the part of the directors, culminated yesterday in an Exhibition that was record-breaking in its attendance, exhibits and entertainment offerings, and it was no wonder that President Leary and his associates last night wore a smile that made the bright rays of the moon appear weak in comparison.

While it is not possible as yet to get at the exact figures, the approximate total indicate the magnitude of the attendance. The total receipts from tickets yesterday reached $2,400 800 better than the corresponding day last year, a gain of twenty five per cent. In the afternoon the cash receipts were $1090, which would indicate that the number of people on the grounds was about 10,000, taking into consideration the exhibitors, officials and others from whom no financial return is received. The evening attendance was between $5,000 and $6,000, double that of last year. As the receipts from the midway and from exhibitors is in advance of last year, a very substantial surplus may be looked for and the Exhibition of 1910 may be set down as the most successful, financial or any other way in the history of the Association. Indications point to another big crowd and the attendance on the last day last year will easily be passed.

Not only was the attendance larger but the Exhibition itself was better in every department than ever before. The organization was better; the huge crowd was handled without a hitch, the programme both in the afternoon and evening was carried through with no wearisome delays, and there was not the slightest untoward incident to mar the pleasure or success of the day.

The exhibits in all lines were better than ever before. An especially grand showing was made in horses and in the carriage and roadster classes more particularly were some remarkably fine entries and bigger fields than at any previous Exhibition. The judging of these classes was held in front of the grand stand and was one of the most appreciated features of the programme. The showing of cattle has never been surpassed here, and the hogs, sheep and poultry were far above the average.

Merchants and manufacturers, local and foreign never exerted themselves more to arrange attractive exhibits, and as a result the main building and grounds were crowded with artistic and well-planned displays that testified to the enterprise of the exhibitors.

In the main building the art work was better than ever before and the showing of ladies' work on the second floor was pronounced by the best expert to be superior to anything of its kind at the Industrial. Every department of the big fair, save also the main building itself and the grand stand, showed consistent and satisfactory improvement.

The Midway.

The midway looked like a street yesterday, so closely was the space allotted to the amusement people taken up, and this department was by far the biggest and best in the history of the fair. So attractive was this section that many people preferred to spend the afternoon there instead of watching the grand stand performance. There was certainly nothing dull along the midway, where the air was filled with a continuous clamour of "barbers." "Drink it up and get a red nose," was the advice one purveyor of thirst-quenching beverage handed out. "Here they are, the Coney Island redhots" barked his neighbour. "They must be good, or we would not be busy. Across the road a husky-lunged "spieler" added his contribution to the din. "Here we are, boys, the hoopla game." Down in front of the Corelli show of "mirth, music and mystery" a muscular youth hammered on a drum. The merry-go-round helped in the hilarity while railway engine across the grounds tooted its defiance of the midway people. Refreshment booths of all kinds, specializing Irish cream cones, Boston snacks and other novelties were everywhere, and all of them getting their share of patronage. There was something doing all the time in this section.

In Front of the Grand Stand.

The programme in front of the grandstand naturally attracted the biggest portion of the crowd and when the long list of events was commenced, the stand and the grounds in the neighbourhood were crowded with a tightly wedged mass of humanity. Never was there a better programme offered at the Peterborough Industrial. There was something doing every moment, there were no delays and the entertainment provided thoroughly pleased the crowd, not a complaint being heard from anyone. On the contrary everyone had a good word to say. "The best fair yet" was an expression that was frequently heard, and everybody seemed pleased and happy.

The special attractions secured for the performance in front of the stand certainly lived up to their advance notices, and were the most thrilling and sensational ever offered at an Exhibition here. The Malvern Troupe and the Japanese acrobats are two organizations inferior to no circus performers that have appeared in Peterborough in many years.

The Malverns had a varied and interesting repertoire of difficult feats to offer and their performance was finished and artistic. Three of the troupe contributed a comedy acrobatic "stunt" that took with the crowd, ending up with that ever popular "trick house" act that never grows old. Later on in the programme the entire troupe was seen in an ensemble tumbling and balancing act that was sensational to say the least. The work of the three men of the troupe was carried through with a snap and skill that brought forth round after round of applause, while a youngster of seven or eight years demonstrated exceptional ability as a tumbler.

The Japanese troupe of jugglers, acrobats and contortionists proved to be a whole show in themselves and their work thoroughly pleased the crowd. The foot juggling, in which they manipulated barrels with their feet and tossed them from one to another with their pedal extremities as accurately and easily as two ball players, playing catch, was a startling feature, and their tumbling and contortionist work was fully as sensational. A very clever little troupe were the Yippones and their work was thoroughly enjoyed. The management is to be congratulated upon securing two such high-class attractions, certainly the finest the Industrial has yet provided.

The Harness-Horse Exhibit.

Among the features worthy of especial mention was the splendid exhibit of horseflesh of all kinds. While there was an excellent collection of horses on halter, both heavy and light classes, the display of harness and saddle horses was magnificent. The show of horse flesh in front of the grandstand, both of animals competing for prizes and of horses for purely exhibition purposes, was superb, and has never been equalled, or even approached, at precedent exhibitions. Among those whose horses attracted attention and admiration were Mr. Gus White, Mr. Roland Denne, the Messrs. Jones Bros, Mr. Frank Montgomery, Mr. Brown, of Millbrook; Mr. E. W. Mann, Bridgenorth; Mr. W. Cox, Dr. McClelland, Warkworth; Mr. William Reid, Otonabee; Mr. R. H. Leary, and Mr. E. W. Wood, Otonabee.

The centre of attraction was, however, the string of English thoroughbreds of Hon. J. R. Stratton, prize winners at the Cobourg Horse Show, and the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. These splendid animals were present for purely exhibition purposes, and they were certainly worth seeing.

More particularly indicated these exhibits consisted of the following:

Two harness pairs - 15.2 and over—"My Pride" and "Premier"; 15.2 and under—"Loch Ryan Princess" and "Lady of Navarre". The first pair captured the red ribbon at the Toronto National, and the second pair, first prize at the Cobourg Horse Show.

The high action horses, shown as singles, were "Perfect Dream" and "Latest News."

Two tandems- 15.2 and over "Premier" (leader) and "My Pride" 15.2 and under "Loch Ryan Princess" and "Yapham Fashion."

Four-in-hand, in brake leaders, "Perfect Dream" and "My Pride"; wheel horses, "Premier" and "Loch Ryan Princess."

Ladies' driving horse—"Shawhill Princess".

Gentlemen's combination, saddle and harness- "Ruth,"—15.3.

These horses are all imported, registered thoroughbred, English hackneys; some of them red-ribbon winners at the Olympia exhibition, London, England, besides other exhibition honours in England this year and last. They have never been beaten in any competition for which they were entered in the Old Country. It is safe to say that it will be a long time, if ever, before any better eight British thoroughbred English hackneys will be exhibited in a Peterborough, or any other show ring in the province. And it is also safe to say that these horses were a very strong drawing card in the Exhibition attendance. Everybody was anxious to see such a string of English blood horses on exhibition; for England is recognized as the home and highest production centre of the thoroughbred hackney, as Scotland is the home of the heavy thoroughbred. The beauty and perfection of points of the English hackney are something that

BIGGEST CROWD IN ITS HISTORY

The attendance at the Peterborough Industrial this afternoon promises to be a record-breaker for the last day of the fair. Every train this morning was unusually crowded and the throng on George street of outside people indicated that there would be a rush to the grounds this afternoon. This forecast was borne out by the manner in which people flocked down to Exhibition Park the rush commencing at 12 o'clock. Everything taken in today will be clear profit.

HOUSE BURNED

Residence of Mr. Andrew Dobbin, North Monaghan, Burned to the Ground Last Night —Took Fire From Kitchen Stove

WAS TOTAL LOSS

The handsome brick residence of Mr. Andrew Dobbin, in North Monaghan, about two and a half miles from the city was totally destroyed by fire last evening about seven o'clock. The house was a new one, and Mr. Dobbin's loss will be heavy.

From the particulars received by the Examiner it appears that Mr. Dobbin was away at Norwood on business yesterday. His housekeeper was busily engaged in ironing and had a big fire burning in the kitchen stove. When milking time came she left the house to perform this task, and during her absence the kitchen caught fire from the stove. The flames spread rapidly and before assistance could arrive the house was doomed. Little could be done to stay the progress of the blaze and the building and contents were destroyed, Mr. Dobbin finding only a ruin when he returned from Norwood. The barns and outbuildings escaped undamaged.

The fire was plainly visible from the city and caused much conjecture last evening as to where it was.

The woods are full of "so-called" remedies for Baldness.

You may call anything in creation a remedy, but to use them is like locking the stable after the horse is stolen.

Baldness and Dandruff are caused by a germ- if you don't kill the germ the germ will kill the hair.

Scientists have laboured with the problem of a preventitive for Baldness for many years.

Newbro's Herpicide is the product of a modern idea, and will cure Dandruff and prevent Baldness because germs cannot exist when you apply Herpicide.

Herpicide is a valuable hair dressing and scalp disinfectant as well as a cure for Dandruff.

HAS THIS BEEN MURDER? WOMAN WAS FOUND DEAD LOOKS VERY SUSPICIOUS

Hugh Deline, of Belmont, Finds His Wife Dead in Woodshed on His Return From Work---Marks of Violence Are Discovered Upon the Body---Coroner Has Decided That An Investigation of the Case is Necessary.

Special to The Examiner.

Havelock, Sept. 17. In the wood shed of a little house in a lonely and remote part of Northern Belmont township, there lies the body of Telesin Deline, cold in death and bearing marks that foul play brought her life to an untimely end.

On Thursday night about ten o'clock Hugh Deline, the husband of the deceased burst in upon the home of Sam Newal, who lives near the Deline home and said that he had found his wife lying dead when he returned from work. The Newal family accompanied by Mathew Lytle, investigated and found Deline's wife laying dead as stated and the two little children, aged two years and three months respectively, huddled together in bed crying themselves to sleep.

The mysterious death of the young woman who is only 24 years old prompted the neighbors to notify Coroner Kindred of Havelock, who on visiting the Deline house on Thursday morning deemed that an inquest was necessary. He found several marks upon the face of the deceased and a scalp wound that had raised the flesh, just above the forehead. Both wrists were badly scraped, which would lead one to believe that her hands had been tied together, but no rope that could have been used for this purpose could be found about the premises.

Your correspondent visited the Deline home on Friday afternoon. It is situated about eight miles north of Havelock and is in a lonely spot about a mile from the concession road. Hugh Deline, the husband of the deceased said that his wife was apparently in good health on Thursday morning when he left for the home of James Buchanan, where he was engaged to work that day. He returned home in the evening at eight o'clock and entering his home, did not see his wife about. He called to her several times but received no answer. He then went to the back wood shed where he found her lying dead upon the floor. He immediately left for the home of Sam Newal to notify them. He said that he knew of no person that would have any reason to harm her.

A jury was empanelled by Coroner Kindred on Friday afternoon at the Deline home with F. Bennett as foreman. The body of the deceased was viewed and the marks on the face; head and scalp found as well as several marks about the body, which showed that a struggle had taken place. Dr. Holderoft of Havelock and Dr. Ford of Norwood were appointed to perform a post mortem upon the body and to ascertain the cause of death. The inquest was laid over until Friday afternoon next, Sept. 23rd at the Havelock town hall.

No clue can be found as to who the person was who committed the deed. That death did not come from natural causes is made sure from the fact that there were no marks upon her in the morning and she had apparently been in good health. No person had seen her during the day but that was not unusual as there were no other houses within sight. Death must have come late in the day as she had fed the hens and locked them up for the night and had evidently completed her evening meal.

Deline and his wife had moved to Belmont only last year from Madoc township where they had both been brought up and where their parents still reside

A RUSH FOR LAND

Preparations Are Being Made at Edson, Alta.

The following despatch to the Toronto Globe, today, has the following to say in regard to the new town of Edson, in Alberta:

Edson, Alta., Sept. 17.—What gives indication of being one of the most historic land rushes in the annals of Canadian colonization is scheduled to start from here early in January, when the new fifteen-foot waggon road to Sturgeon Lake, the gateway of the Grand Prairie and the Peace River country, will be open for traffic. Already fifty families, comprising over a hundred men, women and children, the vanguard of a host that is hourly increasing and will probably reach several thousand souls before the great trek begins, are camped on the outskirts of Edson, awaiting the word to start.

A heterogeneous mass of household and farming utensils, as varied in their make and marks as in the nationality of their owners, strew the roadside. Dakotans and Minnesotans, giving the lie to recent reports that Americans are returning to their old farms in the States; Manitobans and Albertans, hardly able to restrain themselves until the few remaining months go by; Russians and Germans have pitched their tents by the side of the road for the last rest before the start for the land of promise is made.

Whole households are being moved. Women and children form no small part of the advancing army of colonists. Eight infants in arms are among the number. Horses, oxen and dogs are being taken along, and most of the settlers will be ready for work within a fortnight after they have selected their homesteads and made proper entry of them.

MORE CONTRIBUTIONS

Several contributions during the last few days have been made to the Peterborough chimes fund. Most kind contributions have been made by both former and resident citizens of Peterborough. Miss Woodgate, formerly superintendent of the Barnardo Home of this city, and Miss Gibbs, also connected with the same institution. Both ladies were regular and valued members of St. John's church and took a warm interest in the work of the parish. Miss Woodgate is now superintendent of a home in the village of Northam, Devonshire, England, Miss Gibbs holds a responsible position at Barkingside, near London, England. One lady of this city sends a dollar for every one of her departed relatives, expressing the hope that every time she hears the chimes she may be reminded of the dear ones who have gone before.

MAN WANTED FOR WIFE MURDER THOUGHT BY A LOCAL CITIZEN TO HAVE ONCE LIVED HERE

George Reid, referred to in a special despatch to the Examiner last evening, from Vancouver, as the man alleged to have killed his wife recently at their home at Clayburn, B.C., is apparently a former resident of Peterborough. Mr. W. H. Moore says that the name is identical with that of a man, who at one time drove a delivery waggon for Mr. Thos. Brady who kept a grocery store at Brock and George streets, where the Mathews Company, now conducts a meat shop. Going from here, Reid went to Midland, where for some time he conducted a boarding house. He had been married twice, his first wife having been drowned in the Detroit river, a few years ago. She had been employed as a cook on a steamer. What seems to point to the fact that the alleged murderer and the former resident of this city, is the same person, is that his second wife was a Midland girl and relatives of hers are at present residing there. While here he was a client of Mr. Moore's and he could neither read nor write. This is probably the reason why he dictated a letter to his wife, prior to the tragedy.

THE "NATIONAL POLICY."

To-day, Sept. 17th, is the thirty-second anniversary of the birth of the "National Policy." The foundling which was adopted so enthusiastically by the Conservative party in 1878, has become a neglected infant, has degenerated from the position of a household pet into the status of a poor relation—a cuff here and a kick there from the big boys of the family. Even Mr. Borden is in two minds about giving it "adequate" nourishment.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition has this year in successful outcome surpassed all the past; the attendance has broken all records; the exhibits and special attractions are far ahead of the best year. The great success achieved, gratifying as it is, places additional burdens and responsibilities upon those officially, or otherwise interested in the continued success of the Exhibition. If the pace set this year is to be maintained, and bettered, a good deal has to be done. The first step to be taken, as the immense attendance and inadequate accommodation and other things indicate, is the acquirement of the grounds by the directors of the Exhibition. This matter is not only pressing, but the time is opportune for taking action. This year the lease expires, and it should not be renewed; it should be replaced by a deed in fee. The present exhibition should place the Association in a comfortable financial position, as to current ways and means; and should hearten and stimulate the officials to the point of entertaining the idea of purchase of the grounds. Possession of them will warrant putting them in a shape that will better suit, in the way of arrangement and accommodation, the purposes of a first-rate exhibition. A new main building is an absolute necessity. A small structure that would not take a prize in competition with the average farm barn, must be replaced. A new grand stand and numerous repairs and improvements are urgently called for. And these will only be warranted by possession of the grounds. The action can succeed if energetic action is taken, and not too much advice sought. The cue is prompt and decided action. The matter of financing the purchase can be easily arranged. Then the business men of the city, who have so largely profited by the presence in the city for two days of so many thousands of persons, should be counted upon to materially assist the success of the Exhibition and prolong the presence of the crowds to three or four days, or even a week—in course of time. The time is ripe for taking action. No time should be wasted in scoring; the word "Go!" should be given at once.

SOUTH AFRICAN ELECTIONS.

Beyond the mere bald fact that the first general election in the South African Commonwealth has resulted in the return of the Botha Government, we cannot fairly appraise the result. However, the indications are that the old racial controversies have had a hand in the event, and that Premier Botha's propaganda of unity, which he so earnestly preached, failed of meeting emphatic success. This was to be expected. In this respect the history of confederation repeats itself. Canadian union was effected, but not consummated, forty-three years ago; and is not yet consummated in the fullest sense possible. At the beginning there were factions, jealousies, racial antagonisms, and burning questions of creed. These have very largely disappeared, but there still smoulders at the bottom of many hearts the embers of feelings which, if fanned into a flame, are capable of mischevious results. Designing politicians and others with special purposes to serve, still persist in keeping the fire alive. Or some rash enthusiast with more zeal than discretion, may blurt out some disturbing sentiment, and he will find many to take umbrage and plunge into controversy, or rather, recrimination, for upon the most of the questions that nominally divide our more united citizenship there is no proper place for controversy. It is a question of mutual respect of differing opinions, of agreement to disagree, with united devotion to the promotion of the best interests of Canada. A similar experience to that of Canada may be expected in the South African Commonwealth. Old prejudices die hard; old sores sometimes skin over slowly. Selfish interests and unworthy ambitions never die. They have to be fought tooth and nail to end of the chapter.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The London Advertizer aptly remarks that according to Sir James Whitney there are seven ties of Empire, namely, five loaves and two fishes.

A Conservative contemporary says there's a probability of a "flop" in Ottawa. Is Mr. Borden or some of his followers contemplating another gymnastic charge of attitude on the tariff question?

The Mail and Empire might, by mighty effort, tell the truth, occasionally, in political matters. But it seems never to try. It declares that the Canadian naval policy is condemned by the British Admiralty. This is not a "tin-pot", but an all-wool, misstatement.

Louis Botha was defeated in his own South African constituency in Tuesday's elections, but the government of which he is the head was lifted into the saddle. Louis Botha is not the first leader of a government that has suffered personal defeat, and at the same time seen his party triumph. In the hey-day of his glory in the year of the adoption of the so-called national policy, in 1878—Sir John Macdonald was defeated in Kingston—politically killed, or rather stunned by a Gunn.

The United States tariff on sugar, says the Hamilton Times, is an excellent illustration of how Protection enables the combines to tax the protected. In 1907 the United States exported $726,936,468 of sugar. This is surely evidence that no duty is needed for purposes of protection; yet the United States maintains a high protective tariff under which the Sugar Combine takes millions of dollars annually out of the consumers of the country. The Payne-Aldrich tariff-makers claim much credit for reducing the import 5 cents on 100 lbs. That claim is their condemnation.

ROUNDING INTO FORM.

(Toronto Star)

It is a pity that Sir James Whitney must come back to Ontario just when he is working himself up into a characteristic state of excitement for the benefit of Britishers. Not being familiar with Premier Whitney, folks across the sea may not realize that his mind moves, as it were, in spirals; that his attitude towards a question may be only mildly exaggerative at first, but that his indignation mounts higher and higher until he reaches a topmost pitch of anger, indignation, and adjectives, at which point he explodes with a loud noise. Thus, the first interview which he gave to the London press with regard to Imperial relations did not reflect the real Whitney. To be sure, it pre-supposed that he was a Dominion, not a Provincial, statesman, and gave the misleading impression that the Canadian tariff was an issue upon which Ontario's Conservative Government gained office. But little errors such as these, and the declaration that Canada's allegiance to the Empire was a matter of customa law, were the fruit of a merely preliminary canter. Sir James was plainly not at his best.

He has now handed out another statement, and anyone can see at a glance that he is rounding into much better form. His utterances begin to bristle with expressions essentially Whitneyesque "Misreported," "distortion," "accusation," "scandalous misrepresentation," "deplorable," "disastrous"—he has left his hallmark on the interview, and none who know him will mistake it. But The Star respectfully declines to believe that he said "For goodness' sake!" What he did say must have been too much for English journalism.

It is too bad that Sir James is coming home. A month longer in England, and he would have worked himself up to "indescribably vile," "monstrous iniquity," "blasphemous balderdash," "inconceivable opprobrium," et al. Doubtless the Britishers have already begun to suspect that a man of such rampageous vocabulary is as likely to exaggerate his facts as he is to exaggerate his language. Were he to stay long enough, they would feel quite sure of it. But the Premier is coming home, having saved up his best and choicest expressions in order that he may hurl them at the head of Allan Studholme and Joseph McDougall.

DEFECTIVE MUSLIN

From Farm and Dairy.

Attention has been drawn, by an important body connected with the grocery trade, to a resolution passed by one of its local branches in the north of England relating to the reported defective quality of the muslin used for wrapping many Canadian cheeses. Complaints have also been made in various quarters regarding the use of too heavy wrappings consisting of several thicknesses of muslin, the result being an undue loss in weight when the cheeses were stripped. This point would appear, however, to relate principally to the inferior character of the cloths utilized by a limited number of Canadian cheese manufacturers.

It is stated that complaints are being made in regard to recent consignments of cheese, that these have been ripened too quickly, shipped out in a green state, and waxed with paraffin wax to prevent shrinkage, which latter practice is said to have a distinctly deteriorating effect. It was also pointed out that the cheese when unboxed and divested of its cloth shows a rind as soft as when it was first made and that when cut it exhibits cracks. It seems desirable to again draw the attention of cheese exporters in Canada to the necessity of providing boxes of suitable wood and of proper size to prevent breakage.

Canada's Hudson Bay Rights Are Definitely Declared

(Montreal Herald.)

While the decision of the Hague Tribunal in the case of the Newfoundland Fisheries is accepted quite generally by the press of the United States as being fair and reasonable and well sustained both by law and equity, the contention is set up by some papers in the United States that the Hague Tribunal's vindication of the British ownership of the bays and inlets is not an endorsement of the more clausum theory by which large bodies of water are brought under an international jurisdiction, the limit of which is an imaginary line drawn three miles out from the headlands.

The contention of the American papers referred to is made, of course, in regard to Hudson Bay. "The question of Hudson Bay," says the Springfield Republican, for example, "comes under no treaty, and it must be determined by the established principles of international law." The Republican says further that the recent decision of the Hague Tribunal in regard to the bays and inlets, "rests upon no principle of international law sustaining the three-mile limit, but upon the exact text of the Treaty of 1818." But the exact wording follows:

"The United States hereby renounce for ever any liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants thereof, to take, dry or cure fish on, or within three marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks or harbors of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America not included in the above-mentioned limits."

The waters of the coast line where United States fishermen could fish had been specified in the preceding part of the above-quoted article of the Treaty of 1818. The fifth of the seven questions submitted to the Tribunal at the Hague was simply this: "What is a bay?" There is nothing in "the exact text of the Treaty" to indicate that the word "bay" was to be regarded as having any special meaning for the purposes of that Treaty; and therefore the decision of the Tribunal, it would appear, must be regarded as a decision determined by the established principles of international law. What other possible basis can that decision be regarded as having? It can surely be viewed in no other light tha nas a body blow to the United States contention against the British "headland to headland" doctrine by which all the waters lying within a line drawn from headland to headland are held to be embayed or territorial and to constitute the mare clausum of diplomatists.

The assertion of the Springfield Republican that the question of the Hudson Bay "falls under no treaty," is an entirely mistaken one, as, by the Treaty of Utrecht, in 1713, between Great Britain and France, among the things ceded to Great Britain are specified "the sovereign rights of the Bay, and Straights of Hudson, together with all lands, seas, sea-coasts, etc.", and by the Treaty of Washington in 1818, the rights granted to United States fishermen on the west coast of Newfoundland and northward along Labrador, equally with British fishermen, were declared to be "without prejudice however, to any of the rights of the Hudson's Bay Company." Both the Treaty of Washington and the Treaty of Utrecht, in 1713, reaffirmed the charter of the Hudson Bay Company, which, as is well known, was granted by Charles I. in 1670.

Thus it is plain that the jurisdiction over Hudson Bay, asserted by Great Britain in the granting of that charter, which gave the Company rights over the Bay itself, is recognized by the treaties mentioned. The ingenious and far-fetched argument that the above-referred-to words in the Treaty of Washington with reference to the Hudson's Bay Company, might be construed to mean that the United States fishermen could fish in the waters of the Hudson Bay, if, and where, they did not infringe upon the rights of the Company, as set forth in the charter, is surely too ingenious and far-fetched to be taken seriously and allowed to outweigh the principle of international law enunciated by the Hague Tribunal.

A STORE THAT SHOULD BE VISITED BY EVERY WOMAN

Attractive Departmental Store of T. C. Elliott---Only the Most Up-to-date Lines of Goods Are Shown---Millinery Display Cannot Be Excelled---Ready-to-wear Suits and Coats.

A visit to the Bee Hive and ladies' big ready-to-wear store, the splendid apartments of Mr. T. C. Elliott, should be made by every woman in Peterborough who realizes that she must wear the best in the line of ready-made suits, dresses, millinery, shoes, gloves, collars and belts. With his usual enterprise and good taste Mr. Elliott has chosen the best that is to be procured in the several lines in which he deals. His store strikes one as the proper place to shop. His goods are conveniently displayed and attract one's attention on first entering the store. Recent improvements have rendered it's establishment among the most up-to-date in the city. For the convenience of the customers, an elevator, the only one of its kind between here and Montreal, is placed at their disposal. The ground floor is devoted to hosiery, kid gloves, yarns, collars and belts, and furs. The music department, presided over by a capable pianist, with all the latest sheet music, is also on this floor. Of the hosiery department, little need be said. This store has always been known for its wonderful stocking bargains. Only the best makes in kid gloves are kept, and the newest designs in collars and belts are on exhibition. The shoe department has been greatly extended and the special brand, "Our Canadian Lady," excels all others for style, comfort and wear.

THE MILLINERY DEPARTMENT

The new hats at the Bee Hive millinery department have attracted large crowds of ladies since the openings. These apartments can hardly be surpassed in point of attractiveness. The main room on the second floor is a large and spacious one, and is very prettily arranged. A small fitting room off the showroom is a decided improvement and no doubt will be greatly appreciated by Peterborough women. Regarding the stock and styles of hats it might be mentioned that the hats shown are the latest New York and Paris designs. Miss Noble, he head of the department, has certainly showed admirable taste in her selection.

Several unique shapes have been observed among the latest French importations. When these are selected it is more for their quaintness and attractiveness than for the beauty of outline or proportions, for these latter attributes are entirely foreign to many of the newest products of Paris modistes.

A very CURIOUS TURBAN SHAPE that has made its appearance has a medium large crown that is twice as wide from side to side as it is from front to back, the crown suggesting, more than anything else, an elongated elliptical pill box. An infinitesimal brim, not wider than an inch, is turned up close to the brim all around. It is a hand-made covered shape, combining in one instance a heavy silk crown with a velvet brim.

Another model that is of unusual shape has a medium large sized box-crown about five inches high and slightly narrower at the top. The downward sloping brim is about four inches wide and has an upward-turning ledge about one inch wide all around. This narrow upward-turning ledge or brim is a feature of quite a number of new hats, all more or less odd in shape. A brim of this kind is often attached to the cloche shaped hats and adds variety and distinction to a type that is already over-popular.

Undisputable novel as the HATS COVERED WITH SUEDE OR UNDRESSED KID. These are shown in white and colors and very frequently have a band and garniture of the same material. Like all the other fabrics of the season, this is also used in combination with another material.

A suede crown will be seen with a velvet brim, or a velvet or beaver hat will have a trimming of suede. A unique hat with velvet crown and beaver brim was adorned with strips of white suede cut in quill shape and stamped to simulate the midrib and fronds.

BLACK this season is very PROMINENT for dress hats; a large number of semi-dress hats is also shown in black. BLACK AND WHITE IS THE FAVORITE COMBINATION for hats of all types and grades of millinery. Models of all colors are seen, but a greater measure of pominence is accorded the medium and dark blues, among which royal, old er French blue and midnight blue stand out.

READY-TO-WEAR OPENING

The ready-to-wear department has been greatly extended this season. All the Parisian and New York models, as well as the more moderately priced garments are being shown. Some very beautiful coats in the latest designs in fine bradeloth, pony-cloth and new seallette are displayed. Children's coats, ladies suits, dress skirts, and fall waists are shown in abundance, and the most fastidious can be suited at the Bee Hive.

From St. Louis To Canada
Story of Unique Trip

Written for the Examiner by Joseph Greenaway, of London, Eng.

I was in the city of St. Louis without a cent in my pocket. It is a terrible feeling to be utterly stranded in a strange town, to be hungry and homeless, to have not a single friend to turn to. If you have never been afraid before, this will put fear into your heart, however brave and stout it may be. This will make you forcibly realize the potent value of gold, aye, and of even silver and nickel. This will bring out all the native wit you may possess. All petty troubles are at once forgotten you will have no time for soliloquising or day dreaming. It is a time for action, a fierce, savage struggle against overwhelming odds, and your whole mind is fixed on the one acute proposition as to how you may get food. One sharp, hard experience like this will either dishearten you, and make you afraid, or steady and harden you for the rest of your life.

How I happened to get into such a predicament matters little. Here was the plain fact that on this cold February night I was in the windy city of St. Louis, absolutely without any visible means of subsistence—broke to the wide. I hadn't tasted any food for nearly 24 hours, and being young and hardy I felt tempted to smash the first baker's shop window I came to. I wandered slowly down Market Street, with hands thrust deep into my trousers pockets. A burly nigger, half intoxicated, pushed into me. He wanted a quarrel, but I was in no fighting humor, walking along the track for nearly 100 miles from Jefferson City, with very little to eat on the way, had taken all the pluck out of me.

However, it was no use giving way, I had to do something: it was no use stopping at St. Louis, so I made my way towards the brightly lit station a little further down Market Street. Inside the station was fine and warm, and although near midnight many people were moving to and fro. Everywhere was life and movement; people were waiting for the trains that were to take them to the east and west. I also felt that I must leave this dreary, miserable St. Louis anywhere, away from the city of degradation. I therefore made up my mind to beat my way back home to Canada, a distance of nearly 1,500 miles, through the States of Illinois and Michigan, up to Ontario. For after all, it was best to be under the old British flag, especially when you are down.

I was hanging on behind the engine, on the blind baggage, as the train swaying to and fro dashed through the midnight air towards Chicago. Beside me was a young fellow, some two years over 18 years or so. We had met accidentally at the railway station in St. Louis, and had decided to steal aboard the fast express together. It was fine banging on behind this huge iron horse as it dashed madly along over the steel road towards the north. The cold troubled us a great deal though, and later a misty rain began steadily to fall. But for all that I was glad to leave behind St. Louis, to know that I was rapidly moving towards the north—to Canada—towards home.

Once we thought we were discovered. This was just as we got outside St. Louis on the iron bridge that spans the Mississippi. For some reason or other we remained on this bridge for some time, and at first we thought we had been the cause of the delay. However, we were mistaken: some trifling accident or other had occurred. I can see the broad waters of the Mississippi now. I had often seen pictures of this great old river, with all its quaint paddle steamers and pale moon reflecting deep into the water. Here was now the reality—yes, here was the Mississippi, and silently amid stream lay the quaint Yankee paddle steamers with their tall funnels, the moon softly lighting up the whole scene. I had lived on the banks of this great river, and although fortune had dealt hardly with me, I was sorry to say good-bye. I felt that was the last I should ever see of the fine broad waters of the Mississippi.

We were off again, and soon dashing through the cold night air. Neither of us spoke much, as the rattling of the wheels made it difficult for us to hear each other. The cold air penetrated right through our clothes, and although the young fellow had paid for two fine meals before we had started, we both began again to feel the pangs of hunger. At his suggestion we clambered up on top of the water tank. It would be warmer, he said, as we could shelter ourselves behind the coal. The train had been tearing at full speed for some time now, when suddenly we heard the heavy jarring of the brakes. "It's Springfield," he said. "Lay well back, or we shall get caught; we are in Springfield." And sure enough soon after the lights of the town flashed by, and we were standing beneath a glaring electric light outside Springfield station.

We were both put in the lock-up in the little town of Bloomington. It happened in this way. We had both been laughing and shouting at each other as we dashed along, when suddenly the train pulled up before the station of Bloomington and before we hardly knew where we were the force of the law ordered us off. At first I suggested making a run for it, but that would have been useless; two constables were stationed at each side of the engine, so we got down and had to submit to be quietly arrested.

We were taken to the little gaol, where, after being questioned and examined we were put into a large room. In here were about fourteen or fifteen others, most of them typical hobos. We were not so sorry after all to be in here out of the cold and wet—riding on the train through the rain had drenched us to the skin. Most of the hobos had taken off their clothes and were sound asleep upon the floor, so we followed their example and hung our clothes upon the radiators to dry.

Fortune deals very strangely with some of us. I had really done very little harm, and I know my partner was the most charitable of souls in the world—had he not shared his last quarter with me? There had been no other alternative but to get out of St. Louis—and now we had been arrested and branded as criminals. It was no use worrying, however; we had both learned in a hard school, that it was not a bit of use being thin-skinned in this life, so we both curled down on the floor and were soon far away from Bloomington—both asleep.

Next morning we were dismissed and told to clear out of the town. We all scattered in different directions, some this way and some that. The young fellow I had met in St. Louis drifted away, so that I was now walking along the track by myself. I felt miserable. When you are down and have no partner—no one to whom you can say a word to—it drives you to despair—it breaks the heart of a lion. Later on I fell in with four fellows who were making their way to Chicago. Night was falling fast, and they suggested we should make a big fire by the track.

These fellows knew their way about; they got coal from one of the trucks standing in the siding, and soon a fine warm fire was blazing away beside the track about half a mile out of the town. They then brought out big parcels of food, bread and cheese, dainty ham sandwiches, portions of roast fowl and corned beef. It was a quaint meal this, by the side of the track in front of the red fire. Over our heads was the dark blue sky, through which peeped the twinkling stars. One old chap was piling in my lap feed of all sorts; beside me was a big tin of hot coffee. We were all talking and laughing with our mouths crammed full. Not one of us cared a bit what to-morrow might bring forth. As I looked in the old chap's hard, wrinkled face I thought what tales these tramps could tell, what tales on the outer edge of life—the life on the track, what tales of daring adventure.

A little before twelve the old chap woke me up and told me to come with him if I wanted to get to Chicago. There was an empty cattle train waiting in the siding that was soon to be off to the big cattle yards of Chicago. We boarded the train, and in the early twilight of the morning we had reached the hustling western town.

I tidied myself up as best I could and wandered into the heart of the city. At nine the streets were crowded with busy people. I forget the the names of the different places I went through, but I remember seeing the Iroquois Theatre, which a few days later was burnt to the ground. Opposite here was a dingy little restaurant displaying a card "Boy Wanted"; so I went in and got the job of washing dishes.

It was the dirtiest kitchen I had ever been into—an old, broken-down wooden shed. A big black cook was the boss—or the chef, as he termed himself. The under-cook was a dis-spirited little Yankee (life seemed to have been a horrible struggle to him, and he had become disheartened). The waitresses chipped me continually as they came into the kitchen. They could see I had not been used to the work. The old black cook was not so bad. After the day's work he told me to cut myself off a steak, which he fried and served up with chipped potatoes. He wanted me to stay, but I don't think the life would have suited me, so I drew my day's pay and said good-bye to that dirty little cook shop of Chicago.

I only saw the dark side of Chicago, but there seemed to be plenty of it. Around Polk Street station were dozens of idle men of all nationalities, and a pretty hard-up lot they looked. I began to fear that I should have a rambling city, but I meant to stick difficult job to get out of this great attempt it that night. I meant to catch the Wabash express from Polk Street station to Detroit.

It was easy to get behind the Wabash express. I inquired in the station what platform it started from, then a few minutes before the time of starting I clambered on behind the engine. It was this impudent coolness that saved me from being stopped. If I had been at all diffident suspicion would have been aroused, and I should have been once again arrested.

Nothing happened during the journey to Detroit except at one of the stopping places I was detected and ordered to get off. When the train started again I was too late to get on the blind baggage, so I climbed up beside the mail coach. This was rather a frightening experience—I had only a thin iron rod to stand on. Every minute I expected to be thrown off the train and dashed to pieces. The light of the window was full in my face as I clutched on to the window ledge. I could see the clerk working inside the mail coach; if he had happened to have opened the door it would have meant instant death.

But, thank heavens, the train did not run very far before it made another stoppage—this time to change engines. I instantly got off my awkward perch and made for the blind baggage again. The driver of the new engine was a decent fellow: he invited me inside, and I helped the stoker to shovel in the coal. The train ran at high speed the whole of the journey, so that I was soon in Detroit. The driver then shook hands, and in his palm lay a half-dollar. Yes, that driver was as decent a fellow as anyone could wish to meet with on the road. Shovelling coal, however, had made my face as black as any nigger. At first I was rather put about as to how I was to get a cheap wash, when I saw an Italian shanty, where a lot of swarthy sons from sunny Italy were washing. I walked straight in and asked for a piece of soap. They objected at first till one young jolly looking Roman placed a big piece of yellow soap in my hand, and I buried my face into a large pail of hot water.

I could see the Canadian border over the river from Detroit, but it was impossible to get across, the place was too carefully watched. It would only have led to my arrest. The trains went across here to Windsor in specially constructed steamers, so I determined to get over to Canada through the tunnel at Port Huron, about 80 miles north. This journey from Detroit to Port Huron was the hardest of the lot. I had to walk the whole way, and it took me over two days. There is little more to tell; I had now practically reached the goal. I got a freight that was going through the tunnel, but after the hard experience I had gone through since I had left St. Louis in the south, I could hardly bring myself to realize that I was really again under the old British flag.

"Am I in Canada?" I asked a brakesman. He looked at me rather surprised. "Yes, my boy," he answered; "you are in the land of the Maple Leaf."

"Hurrah!" I shouted.

"Where have you come from?"

"St. Louis—St. Louis in seven days without a cent in my pocket."

IDEA FOR WOMEN

Tells How Radiant Hair Can Easily Adorn Any Head

It's a mighty good thing for the women of Canada that Parisian Sage can now be obtained in every town of consequence.

No preparation for the hair has done so much to stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff and make women's hair beautiful as Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage is the only certain destroyer of the dandruff microbe which is the cause of 90 per cent. of hair trouble.

These pernicious, persistent and destructive little devils thrive on the ordinary hair tonics.

Parisian Sage is such an extraordinary and quick acting rejuvenator that Wm. Madill, who is the agent in Peterborough, guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is most daintily perfumed, it is an ideal preparation, not sticky or glossy.

It is a magnificent dressing for women who desire luxuriant, lustrous hair that compels admiration.

And a large bottle of Parisian Sage costs only 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and at leading druggists all over Canada. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package. Made in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., who fill mail orders, all charges prepaid.

ORANGE STATE RULES.

It May Refuse to Support the South African Government.

Johannesburg, South Africa, Sept. 17.—The position of the parties, as a result of the first election for the Parliament of United South Africa, is now:

Nationalists, 52.
Unionists, 36.
Labor, 4.
Independents, 10.

A report that Rt. Hon. Louis Botha will resign the Premiership is unconfirmed. For several minutes after the confirmation of his defeat at the poll, Botha, who is not strong, was speechless and livid.

Minister of Commerce Moor is defeated, making three Ministers down. Nationalists are in consternation at the results of the elections.

The fear that extremists will rule is probably dealt a death blow.

The Unionist majorities are large, and 16 or 17 seats in the Orange Free State have gone solidly Unionist. The state will probably refuse to support the Government except on its own terms. Each man is pledged to extend Hertzogism.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Alfred W. Young was killed by falling from a building at Port Colborne.

Building operations at Brandon, Man., may reach the million mark this year.

The seventh international congress on tuberculosis will be held in Rome, Italy, Sept. 24 to 30, 1911.

The Canadian Manufacturers' excursionists at Calgary indulged in some plain talk to the farmers on tariff matters.

That the San Francisco police department is so permeated with graft that it must be completely re-organized is the substance of a report sent by Mayor McCarthy to the police commission.

Alex. McBain and John W. Bruce of the local plumbers and steamfitters union left yesterday for St. Paul, Minn., to attend the international convention of their union. Two important subjects will be discussed: the establishment of a defence fund and increased death benefits.

Flax Scarce.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 17.—"Never in the history of the trade have the wholesale paint manufacturers been called upon to face such a serious problem as now confronts them in the shortage of their principal raw stuff, turpentine," was the statement made yesterday in an interview with C. C. Ballenty, managing director of the Canadian division of the Sherwin-Williams' Paint & Varnish Co. The chief cause of the scarcity and corresponding high prices of paint was, Mr. Ballantyne explained, not so much due to the failure of the flax seed harvest as it was to the total inadequacy of the crop to meet the enormously increased demand for the commodity under discussion.

At Fort William the price of flax yesterday was $2.53 a bushel, exactly $1 a bushel more than it was a year ago. Paints have increased in price about 25 per cent. this year.

Gauthier It Is.

Rome, Sept. 17.—Archbishop Gauthier was appointed Archbishop of Ottawa on Sept. 6. The Pope has ordered a consistorial congregation to transmit to Mgr. Gauthier his letter of nomination.

New York Wide Open.

New York, Sept. 17.—That gambling is being run wide open throughout the city and under the "protection" of the police, is the information which Acting Mayor Mitchell is said to have obtained.

A Sudden Death.

St. John's, Que., Sept. 17.—Ostaid Marchand, M.P.P., proprietor of The Canada Francaise, was attacked with a fit of indigestion shortly after dinner yesterday and died in a few hours.

MAGNIFICENT MILLINERY DISPLAY BY RICHARD HALL & SON STORE

Peterborough's Big Store is Crammed From Top to Bottom With the Best Offerings of the Markets of the World---Spirit of Autumn Prevails Everywhere in the Huge Establishment --- Record First Day Sales on Thursday.

With a showing that surpassed every previous millinery display in the history of the big store, the annual sale millinery re-openings of Richard Hall & Son Limited, an event that is of supreme importance to feminine Peterborough, took place successfully on Thursday. Never in the annals of the firm has been an opening so auspicious & an opening day marked by more sales. This season's styles, of which Messrs. Rich. Hall & Son Limited make a complete showing, are so becoming that customers had little difficulty in quickly securing a hat that satisfied and pleased and the result was that Thursday's sales were in advance of any first day millinery re-opening in the career of the firm.

The commodious and handsomely appointed show-rooms on the second floor have been thronged every moment since the opening on Thursday, and the display has been the subject of a host of complimentary remarks. Nothing is shown that does not display the stamp of fashion's approval and the markets of the world are represented.

A glance over the stock of Messrs. Hall & Son reveals the fact that dominating the season's fashion is the becoming mushroom brimmed hat in all sizes, from the very large Romney effects, through many medium-sized models, to the little drooping affairs that remind one of Kate Greeneway pictures and the quaint days of the Empire. Most of the very little mushrooms are long in the back and have a little poke effect, showing a variety of sizes in crown and trim, though as a rule they are quite close fitting. Charlotte Corday effects with frilled brims of lace and chiffon are still popular for the very young and the turbans suggest this effect by plaited ribbons over their mushroomed brims.

Velvet and satin again strike the dominant note in material as shown by Messrs. Hall & Son's display. Velvet and satin combinations, while not new, are always appropriate, and will this season be carried out in several ways. Popular among the trimmings used will be found verdure and gobelin tapestries into some of which are interwoven with fine gold thread, making a very effective trimming. Messrs. Hall & Son are making a special feature of a pretty smart automobile cap of a new model that seems destined to be popular. The firm has only expert designers in the milliners department and one of the finest millinery plants n Canada.

SOME MAGNIFICENT RUGS.

The coming of autumn, indicated in the millinery section, is again attested to in the carpet and rug department of the store. Here the lover of the beautiful will find a display that is indeed magnificent. Among the many features in this section, and some French Wilton rugs that are exact copies of antique Oriental rugs are sure to attract attention. These splendid rugs were shown at the Toronto Exhibition. The very latest lines in carpets, rugs and draperies are on view. The Richard Hall & Son firm prides itself, and reasonably too, upon this department, which is certainly a credit not only to the store but to the city. There are some Axminster imitations of ancient rugs that are well worth seeing. Another feature is the showing of Scotch Axminster seamless rugs, which are exclusively controlled by the firm in this city. Some of these are shown in the very latest innovation, some in three shades of green and others in three shades of brown. This effect is carried out in the draperies that are also shown. The firm designs and cuts draperies for different windows and doors, giving the customer the benefit of years of experience in this line of work and the services of experts in designing.

Popular in the drapery lines may be mentioned a French poplin, beautiful material which is shown in a wide range of colorings. Another dominant material that is much in vogue is the Chantecler scrim, used for over curtains in dining rooms and sitting rooms. Still another popular and artistic draping material is Jaspe stripped velours, sold in many different shades. All these lines are the very latest designs selected with the utmost care and are commended to those who appreciate artistic and beautiful material.

The ladies' ready-to-wear department, always an important feature of the firm's business, also shows the effects of the coming of cooler weather, and is one of the busiest sections of the store. So rapid has been the growth of this department that its capacity has had to be increased and just now the showing in ladies ready-to-wear garments is the largest ever made by the firm. The stock, carefully selected by experts in this line, is the largest and finest that Messrs. Hall & Son have offered to the public. The ladies' fashion centres have been ransacked to stock this section, and the most critical customer finds a ready response to her demands. The latest designs in ready-to-wear garments—opera cloaks, etc.—are to be found here. It is learned that shadowed effects over satins will be the most popular for afternoon and evening gowns through the present season.

One gets an introduction into the spirit attendant upon the annual re-opening before one enters the store. A magnificent window display, probably the most ambitious and artistic that the firm has ever made, is an indication of the splendid stock within. The main window is devoted to millinery, the window south of the entrance to exploit the ready-to-wear end of the firm's business, and the north window is devoted to the carpets and rugs. The two south windows especially show an originality and a grasp of the artistic that have called forth enthusiastic commendation from all who have seen them—and who among the ladies of Peterborough has not? The main window represents a lady gowned and hatted according to Fashion's latest commands, passing through the gateway of a mansion. The effect is borne out by massive-looking stone walls, and the result is a charming window, filled with the spirit of autumn.

Throughout the big store every department is thoroughly equipped and ready for the rush of fall business. Everything is new and modern with the best that the world's markets offer, and a visit to Peterborough without a thorough inspection of the establishment of Messrs Rich. Hall & Son would not be complete. To Peterborough people it is not necessary to dilate at any length upon the advantages this huge, well-managed store affords its customers. In its autumn dress, as it is just now, and with the showing in every line it makes, however, the store will surprise even its most regular customers.

Scotland Yard's Crime Cabinet

In the great, rather grim, red-brick building which, like a mediæval fortress, dominates the Thames, within a stone's throw of the Houses of Parliament, there is a large, barely-furnished room, which holds more secrets than any other in London, with the possible exception of the room of Cabinet mysteries. It is the nerve centre of our great and complex detective system, which controls the currents radiating all the world over for the discovery of crime; and it is in this secret chamber that the mysterious Council of Seven hold their meetings to unravel the tangled skeins of tragedy.

If walls could speak, the walls of this room could unfold stories of romance, tragedy, and mystery such as would drive the writer of fiction to despair; for there is no form of crime which has not been dissected and laid bare there in all its complex and naked hideousness. But walls are dumb; and so are the members of this secret Council, who recognize that silence is one of their most powerful weapons.

This Council has not long been in existence; in fact, it is practically unknown to the outside world. It is only a short time since it occurred to the authorities of New Scotland Yard that, in place of casual conferences between detectives engaged in the solution of some problem of crime, it would be well to appoint a body of their cleverest detectives—men of acute and astute brains, with long experience of crime and criminals—to combine their efforts in solving the principal mysteries; and, as might be expected, the plan has worked admirably.

The greatest care has naturally been taken in choosing men for this responsible work. It was important that the Council should, as far as possible, cover the whole range of crime. The detective who has specialised in murder or burglary may know little of, say, coiners and begging letter impostors; and thus the leading expert in each of the principal branches of crime was chosen—men who know about their own branch and its professors, and whose names even are a terror to evil-doers the whole world-over.

HOW IT WORKS

But let us see how this Council works. Suppose that a mysterious murder has taken place in London. Within a few minutes later it has been reported to the nearest police station, the detective-inspector and his assistants are on the spot making investigations. Meanwhile the news has been flashed to New Scotland Yard; and almost before the local men have well commenced their enquiries a member of the Council—the man whose special province it is—appear on he scene and take charge of the operations.

If the problem is a fairly simple one, as it often it, and the murderer is speedily run to earth, the services of the Council are naturally not required. But if there is no sufficient clue to the assassin, or he has made his escape good, the Council is at once summoned, and takes the case in hand.

All the available evidence is placed before it and thoroughly sifted, deductions are made, a plan of campaign is drawn up, and the whole of the complicated and far-reaching machinery of Scotland Yard is set to work under the collective guidance of the cleverest detective brains in England. How energetically and thoroughly the Council does its work has been shown in the recent Crippen case, in which a closely meshed net was in a few days thrown round the world for the capture of the criminal.

And who are the members of the secret Council? Naturally, they vary from time to time, due to retirements and other causes, but the principal members have so far remained the same. The head of the Council is, by virtue of his office, Sir Melville Macnaghten, Chief of the Criminal Investigation Department a man who probably knows more about crime than any other in the United Kingdom.

Few men look less like a catcher of criminals than Sir Melville, who suggests rather a prosperous and genial stockbroker than a Sherlock Holmes. But, all the same, he is an expert in crime to the tips of his fingers Apart from his long experience of crime and its professors, he is a born detective, if ever there was one. So intuitively clever is he that it is said he can tell, after a few minutes conversation with a criminal, of what particular branch he is a specialist, and his resource and tenacity are just as wonderful as his instinct for discovering clues.

KNOWS ALL OVER THE WORLD

After Sir Melville, who controls the Council, its principal member is Superintendent Froest, whose fame and prowess as a detective are world-wide. As a sleuth-hound of justice he has won laurels in every part of the world from North American to Australia, and from California to Spain There is scarcely a criminal in Europe who does not know of and dread him.

He has nerves of steel and muscles of iron So ignorant of fear is he that he thinks as much of breaking a sixpence or bending a poker round his neck as of tackling a gang of desperados single-handed. He has risked his life a hundred times and has always come out unscathed A typical sample of his daring one of scores was when a few years ago he boarded an American cattle-boat at Queenstown to arrest a murderer of enormous strength and fierceness.

At sight of Froest the murderer whipped out a formidable knife and sprang at him. Then ensued one of the most terrible life and death struggles ever seen. The detective seized the murderer in his powerful arms, and writhing, struggling, swaying, the two men fought frantically up and down the deck. Again and again the assassin tried to bury his knife in Froest, who finally succeeded in throwing him, and, pinning him to the deck, disarmed and bound him. Froest's clothes was slashed to ribbons, but he was scarcely even scratched.

Another valuable member of the Council, entitled, perhaps, to rank next to this terror of criminals, who, by the way, is one of the most amiable and genial of men, with a ready smile and laughing blue eyes, is Chief Inspector Dew, who has figured so prominently in the Crippen case. Chief Inspector Dew is an importation from Bow street, where he made a very wide and useful acquaintance with criminals. A slight, quiet man, rather suggesting a keen solicitor, the Chief Inspector is a terror to evil-doers. No man is keener in scent than he, or better able to run a criminal quickly to earth. He probably knows more about London's crime and criminals than any other detective, and is specially the enemy whom housebreakers most dread.

OTHER MEMBERS

Among other recent and present members of the Council is Chief Inspector Drew—tall, debonair, gentlemanly, and past-master of disguises—who has made a special study of the sharpers of all kinds in Europe and America; and who, in a variety of costumes, ranging from a milkman to a Piccadilly lounger, has made many notable captures of criminals.

Others are Chief Inspector Collins, an expert in the lower walks of crime, to whom the slums of London are an appeals to every horse lover and their excellence suggests the Scotchman's retort to Dr Samuel Johnson's joke at the Scotch. "In your country you feed your men on oats, in Ireland we feed oats to horses." "But" said the Scotchmen, "What men, and what horses?"

The Horse Races.

With big prizes hung up, and with the added advantage of possessing the best half mile track in Canada it was but natural to expect good horse races at the Industrial, and the anticipations of the crowd were not astray, for the programme on the track was perhaps the classiest in the history of the fair. There were big fields in both main events and every heat was a race. There was not a dash all the afternoon that was not close, and in several cases heats were won literally by a nose. Some of the finishes had the crowd on its feet in wild excitement and the programme aroused general enthusiasm.

The management was fortunate in again having the services, as starter, of Dr Sinclair, of Cannington, who gave such splendid satisfaction last year. The doctor knows his business thoroughly, and the drivers soon realized that there was no foolin with him, with the result that there were few delays in scoring and the horses were gotten away in good style much to the satisfaction of the crowd.

The 2.35 Class.

The 2.35 class, trot or pace, was a great race, requiring five hard fought heats to decide the winner, the big end of the purse finally going to Lulu Chimes, T. McIvor's speedy bay mare driven by Eddie Jones, of Peterborough. There were six other starters, Lew Jean, T. Hodgson, Orillia, Harry Mack, D. McMahon, Renboro, Percy H. M. Storey, Peterborough, Tom Tariff, C. Fife, Keene, Picket Boy, R. Simpson, Campbellford, and Curtis Colt, Geo. Curtis, Lindsay.

Starter Sinclair got the big field away in splendid style in the first heat, and the crowd watching the horse bunch, settled back for an afternoon of splendid racing and they had it, too. The first heat was a battle royal. They bunched all through the mile, and Harry Mack, Tom Tariff and Lew Jean came down the stretch in a driving finish, almost in a row, being awarded the positions in the order named. Curtis' Colt was fourth, Lulu Chimes fifth, Picket Boy sixth and Percy H. seventh.

The second heat was almost a repetition of the first, save that the speedy Peterborough mare, Lulu Chimes was a contender all the way, nosing Lew Jean out of second place and was chasing Harry Mack hard at the wire. The Reaboro gelding won by a scant margin.

The crowd was with Lulu Chimes and cheered lustily when the game mare flashed in front in the third heat, Lew Jean led in this heat until the three quarter pole, when Lulu Chimes made her drive and came away handily. Lew Jean was second and Harry Mack third.

Lulu Chimes repeated this in the fourth heat, making a fifth heat necessary to settle the race. Curtis' Colt did not start in this heat on account of an accident to the bike in a collision in the succeeding race.

Only four horses started in what proved to be the final heat, Lulu Chimes handily with Lew Jean second and Tom Tariff third. Harry Mack upset his sulky in this heat, but the driver escaped without injury.

The summary follows:

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lulu Chimes, Thos. McIvor, Peterborough | 5 | 2 | 1 | 1 |
| Harry Mack, D. McMahon, Renboro | 4 | 1 | 3 | 3 dr |
| Lew Jean, T. Hodgson, Orillia | 3 | 3 | 2 | 2 3 |
| Tom Tariff, C. Fife, Keene | 2 | 5 | 4 | 4 3 |
| Curtis' Colt, Geo. Curtis, Lindsay | 4 | 4 | 6 | dr |
| Picket Boy, R. Simpson, Campbellford | 6 | 7 | 5 | 5 dr |
| Percy H., M. Storey, Peterborough | 7 | 6 | 7 | 6 dr |

Time—2.24¼, 2.24¼, 2.24¼, 2.24¼, 2.29.

The 2.22 Class.

The 2.22 class brought a field of five, well known performers, Bourbon Brook, Elmhurst, Keene, Planet, L. McDowell, Toronto, Holland Boy, Dr. Leach, Peterborough, Patterson, E. W. Jones, Peterborough, and Ned Wilkes, W. A. Fanning, Lindsay.

Bourbon Brook won the race in straight heats, but it was a fight all the way from wire to wire in each. The drivers were out to win, and every inch was fought out, the result being three remarkably close heats. The Elmhurst horse had a little the legs of its field, standing off the furious drive of the others in the stretch, and carrying off the big end of the purse in three heats, all of which were close. Planet finished second in all three, but in second heat was set back to last for foul driving on a complaint from Eddie Jones, driver and owner of Patterson. It was a nice race and pleased the crowd.

The summary:—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Bourbon Brook, Elmhurst, Keene | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Planet, J. McDowell, Toronto | 2 | 5 | 2 |
| Patterson, E. Jones, Peterborough | 3 | 2 | 3 |
| Ned Wilkes, W. A. Fanning, Lindsay | 5 | 3 | 4 |
| Holland Boy, Dr. Leach, Peterborough | 4 | 4 | 5 |

Time—2.18¼, 2.18¼, 2.18.

The green race for three year olds did not fill, but the management cut the purse and let the two entries, Fred Jones, owned by Cleghorne, of Otonabee, and Hazel Brook, H. Elmhirst of Otonabee, fight it out for the reduced purse. Fred Jones won the first heat handily in 1.16, but the second was a drive all the way down the stretch, Hazel Brook finally winning by a head. The third and deciding heat was even closer. It looked almost like a dead heat, but Fred Jones got the decision and the race.

Summary:—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Fred Jones, Cleghorne, Otonabee | 1 | 2 | 1 |
| Hazel Brook, Elmhirst, Otonabee | 2 | 1 | 2 |

Time—1.16, 1.18, 1.18½.

The conditions were best two out of three, half mile heats.

The officials were Dr. Sinclair, Cannington, starter, Mr. Carew, Lindsay, R. J. Munro, D. B. Denison and Dr. King, judges.

Presentation to Scouts.

An interesting feature of the afternoon's programme was the presentation of a handsome silk British ensign to the Peterborough patrol of Boy Scouts as a mark of appreciation of their fine showing at the Toronto Exhibition. The scouts, twenty-five in number, in charge of Scout Master D. O. Waring, formed up at the west end of the grounds and marched down in front of the grand stand, while the band played "The Maple Leaf" and "Rule Britannia." The youngsters in their khaki uniforms and Stetson hat made a fine showing, as they swung along with their wooden lances at the trail and they were given a rousing reception by the large crowd. The patrol was drawn up in front of the grand stand, while President R. H. Leary made the presentation in the following words:

"Scoutmaster Waring and Members of the Peterborough Boy Scouts.—As President of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, I wish to thank you for your presence here this afternoon and at the same time to express the congratulations of the citizens of Peterborough upon the showing you made at the Toronto Exhibition when you were singled out by Sir Robert Baden Powell himself as the cleanest and smartest patrol in the parade. Such a distinction should not be allowed to pass without notice. I ask you to receive the thanks of the people of Peterborough and at the same time accept this British ensign from the Peterborough Industrial as a mark of our appreciation."

Scout Master Waring replied in a neat speech, thanking the directors on behalf of the scouts for the splendid flag.

The Evening's Programme.

In point of attendance the evening performance at the great Peterborough Industrial Exposition, is said by those who are in a position to know, to have been the greatest on record up to the afternoon. Between nine and ten thousand persons are said to have been there, and this is not a difficult thing to believe when one watched the steady stream of people from early in the evening until long after the hour of eight o'clock, at which time the programme was scheduled to commence. It was one long line of citizens before the grand stand office, all anxious to get a place, but owing to the excellent arrangements made by those in charge of the stand there was no unnecessary crowding. Before the stand was a surging, seething throng, and all along the fence were lined hundreds of people. In fact every vantage point was seized upon. The midway did a thriving business, the miniature railway and the merry-go-round both proving popular drawing cards.

The fireworks display under the direction of Prof. Hand, of Hamilton, was a pleasing feature of the evening's performance. Although the evening was somewhat bright for fireworks, they showed off well. These displays were given between acts, given by the acrobatic troupes, namely, the Malvern troupe and the Japanese troupe of six performers. Their work was of the highest order and won well deserved applause. The fifty-seventh band under the direction of Mr. Rupert Gliddon rendered a programme of its usual high standard of excellence.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

The Mendel Studio.

The exhibit of high class photography made by Mr. Louis Mendel in the fine arts section of the main building at the Exhibition is one that has been surrounded by a coterie of admirers ever since it was placed in position. The display of the Mendel studio is a revelation of the really new and very latest ideas in photographic work. It is a convincing proof of the fact that Mr. Mendel is an artist in his line of work; no other Canadian studio could hope to turn out these down-to-the-minute specimens. The display exhibits the albumen prints, a process used by the best artists of Europe, but which is known to only a few photographers on this side of the Atlantic. It has been pronounced the most perfect process known to photographers and it speaks volumes for the enterprise of Mr. Mendel that he should have made himself an expert with this method. The result is shown in some strikingly realistic portrait work. One picture in particular, a large photograph of the late John Maloney was almost startling in its fidelity to the original. The nature of the work turned out by Mr. Mendel is shown by the fact that the was awarded two gold medals and a certificate from the best judge of photography in America at the exhibit of the Wyoming Valley Camera Club at Wilkesbarre, Pa. Just now he is showing some specimens of his work at the Brussels, Belgium Exposition and in London, Eng. A visit to the Peterborough Industrial, which did not include the Mendel exhibit, was not complete.

The Roy Studio.

There is no one in Peterborough county or in this district who does not know of the Roy studio, or who cannot attest to the artistic and realistic nature of the portrait and general work turned out by this well known Peterborough firm. "It it's by Roy it's the best" is a familiar and truthful expression, and it has been earned by the merit of work of the studio. Naturally, the Roy exhibit in the main building at the Peterborough Industrial is a veritable work of art, the display being a unique demonstration of what high class methods can accomplish. A glance over the exhibit indicates the superiority of the Roy methods and reveals the acme of photographic art. The striking realism of the portraits shown was a feature that impressed everyone who saw the collection and many were the admiring comments heard yesterday. That the studio has a large out-of-town clientele was indicated by the number of photographs of outside people included in the display. The Roy firm makes a specialty of rapid photographic work. They have all the necessary and up-to-date machinery for this feature of photographic work, and accomplish some really brilliant action pictures. The firm was prominent at the Exhibition yesterday not only because of their display but on account of the presence of a representative, who secured some splendid photographs of the features of the Exhibition, including the Peterborough patrol of Boy Scouts and Hon. Mr. Stratton's showing of prize winning hackneys in action. Anywhere that there is anything out of the ordinary going on in Peterborough and vicinity you are almost certain to find two persons, one an Examiner reporter and the other a representative of the Roy studio, armed with a camera. As a result of this enterprise on the part of Roy, the post cards turned out by this firm are everywhere.

Messrs. Young and McConkey.

One of the most interesting exhibits on the grounds, particularly to the farmers, at the Peterborough Industrial was the magnificent showing of machinery and implements by Messrs. McConkey and Young, the local agents for the famous International Harvester Company machinery. A finer display in this line has never been made in Peterborough and it was no wonder that there was an eager crowd viewing the exhibit yesterday. Messrs. Young and McConkey, whose headquarters are at 388 Water street, have gone to a lot of trouble in arranging their display and the attention it received must have been gratifying to them.

Among the interesting features is a potato digger which is a marvel in point of construction and usefulness. This was introduced last season, and a large number are now in commission on the progressive farms of the district. Something new in the line of ploughs shown is a reversible sulky plow, an entirely new device that attracted much attention. Other lines of riding plows were also on view. Messrs. Youn gand McConkey showed in addition new types of washing machines, cream separators both hand and power types and steel ranges, the latter the well known Corona range. A feature of the exhibit was a four horse power gasoline engine running a grain grinder. The efficiency of this machine was demonstrated beyond cavil by feeding shingle nails which were ground into dust by the powerful machine. The engine was kept running all through the fair and was greatly admired by the interested farmers. A small engine, mounted and capable of doing a vast amount of useful work around the farm was also exhibited and one wonders how any farmer could get along without the assistance of this wonderful engine. It is not necessary to say very much about the excellency of the implements manufactured by the International Harvester Company. Their manufactures are world famous and their reputation is built upon the solid and unshakable foundation of merit. Messrs. Young and McConkey have proven themselves energetic and wide-awake representatives of the famous firm, and have been most successful in disposing of the implements in this section of the country. Their showrooms on Water street are always open for the inspection of the public.

F. R. J. McPherson Company.

The F. R. J. McPherson firm has the honour of having one of the most attractive and well arranged exhibits in the whole exhibition. Their display, located on the first floor of the main building, is a tasteful and at the same time complete demonstration of the stock carried by the well known Peterborough firm. One of the chief features of the exhibit, was the showing of the famous Supreme ranges for which a saving of fifty per cent in fuel is claimed and a long test shows that the claim is justifiable. These ranges, which burn either coal or wood, were shown in all styles and sizes, and attracted much attention from the thrifty housewives who were enraptured with the handsome appearance of the range coupled with its very unique features. In addition to the ranges, the firm displayed some splendid heaters, including the Supreme Oak, the Walker, Brilliant and the Record Oak. All three lines have given satisfaction wherever used. The F. R. J. MacPherson store also show a splendid mantel and fire place, a line in which they specialize, as many of the best homes in Peterborough testify to. One of their best models was on view at the Exhibition and with an imitation fire in the grate formed a pleasing feature of the display. There was a magnificent showing of electrical fixtures, portable lamps, electric fans, electric toasters, electric plate heaters, electric irons and other labour and time saving devices operated by electricity. The booth was tastefully arranged and set out and was decorated with flags and bunting in a most attractive manner, being perhaps the most artistic in the main building. It never lacked visitors all through the Exhibition.

What One Woman is Doing to Relieve the Suffering of Womankind

If there is one woman in all America who has done more than her share to relieve the suffering of womankind that woman is Mrs. Frances E. Currah of Windsor, Ont.

Mrs. Currah was at one time a great sufferer from diseases peculiar to her sex. She had tried many remedies, but found no cure and had almost given up hope of ever being well again. But one day she was persuaded by a friend to try what was then a little known remedy. Much to her astonishment she was immediately benefitted and in a short time completely restored to robust health.

From that time until the present day Mrs. Currah has devoted her life to interest women in this remedy, which has now become famous under the name of ORANGE LILY and is advertised in page six of this publication.

Mrs. Currah's sympathetic nature leads her to perform the most charitable acts and she is now offering to send, free of charge, a 35c box containing enough ORANGE LILY for a ten days' treatment. Hundreds are taking advantage of Mrs. Currah's generosity, and doubtless many readers of this paper will seize this opportunity to try this wonderful remedy at no expense to themselves.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

Well Springs of Profanity.

It is hard to tell what constitutes profanity nowadays. Like everything else, strong language is undergoing an overhauling at the hands of Puritan correctors, which may or may not be for the better. The ideas of some people as to what constitutes a bad word, are somewhat amusing. A learned professor in a Toronto college is credited with telling a class of young ladies that he would sooner hear them say "Damn" than use the common ladylike expression, "Dear me." He said the former meant nothing, whilst the latter was the modern form of the ancient expletive "Deamea." This is about on a par with the statement of an old teacher of the writer, who told him that there was no harm in saying "go to blazes" as it was really a devout expression having been originally "go to St. Blasius." It would be interesting to know how much research was needed to arrive at such an intelligent derivation of both terms.

Peterborough and Longevity.

The return of Mr. Mantell, after a two months' visit to friends in Western Ontario, which he accomplished entirely unattended, is an event, the accomplishment of which, at his advanced age, is truly remarkable. It will be remembered that a few years ago, a certain senator from one of the Maritime provinces, travelled to Ottawa when in his hundredth year, in order to perform the duties devolving upon him. These are only two instances out of many that might be furnished to show that the Canadian climate, however much it may be assailed on account of the extremes of temperature that it furnishes, is certainly conducive to longevity.

Peterborough itself has several citizens, hale and hearty and well advanced in years, in its midst. Only a few Sundays ago, the writer, whilst taking a constitutional along Reid street, stumbled across two ancient persons, taking the air, one of whom was 95 and the other 93 years of age. And there are several others quite as advanced in years, although not quite so active, living amongst us, all of which goes to show that amongst its many other advantages, Peterborough possesses the priceless one of a healthy location.

Dr. Cook.

The despatch stating that Dr. Cook is on his way north for the purpose of obtaining more evidence in regard to his discovery of the North Pole, if true, is pitiful. If he relies upon the statements of two uneducated Esquimaux to substantiate his claim, however true it may be, he gives the world at large credit for more charity and a greater disposition to take the part of the underdog in the fight than it really possesses. A lost reputation, is a harder thing to find than even the North Pole, and proofs will have to be incontrovertible indeed, to reestablish Dr. Cook in the good graces of society. At present, no matter how much he may be wronged, he stands in imminent danger of being handed down to posterity as the peer of Ananias, Psalmanazar, and Henri Rougemont.

Thoughts of Summer.

In the silence of the night,
When the moon sheds forth her light,
O'er the landscape near and far,
I can see the pine woods grave
Watching by thy silvered wave,
Lovely, lonely Kushaqua.

There with swift and sudden feet,
Whispering winds and waters meet;
There each cool, each dim recess,
Through the long-drawn summer hours,
Calls to rest within thy bowers,
Type of woodland loveliness.

"Isle of rest" thou art in truth,
Whence all thoughts of bitter ruth
Flee as flees the morning haze;
Skies of softest, purest blue,
Shores in many a varied hue
Burst upon the wondering gaze.

Alpine heights the heart may please,
Shimmering seas the bosom ease,
Golden joys, perchance, they are;—
Yet, no greater boon I crave
Than to bie me where the wave
Laves thee, restful Kushaqua.

Big Building Collapses.

Winnipeg, Sept. 17.—An accident, which almost resulted in the loss of many lives, occurred here yesterday morning when the building owned and occupied by the Manitoba Clothing Co. collapsed a few minutes after the alarm had been given, and everybody got out safe.

A large hotel is being built next to the building, and the Manitoba Clothing Co. blame the contractor for undermining them. There were between 40 and 50 employes of the company at work when Max Goldstein, the proprietor, noticed some plaster falling. He got everybody out just in time.

The loss may reach $75,000, including lost time, building and stock.

Woman, at 74, Jailed.

St. Catharines, Sept. 7.—Phoebe Ann Martindale, aged 74 years, who has been a character in Caister Township for over half a century, is now prisoner, in the county jail, in this city. On Aug. 4 last she was accused and convicted of selling liquor without a license. She was fined $100 or three months in jail, and has 3 paid up.

ST. VITUS DANCE

A Striking Example of its Cure by the Tonic Treatment

St. Vitus' dance is the commonest form of nervous trouble which afflicts children, because of the great demands made on the body by growth and development, and there is the added strain caused by study. It is when these demands become so great that they impoverish the blood, and the nerve fails to receive their full supply of nourishment, that the nervous debility which leads to St. Vitus' dance.

The remarkable success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing St. Vitus' dance should lead parents to give their children this great blood-building medicine at the first signs of the approach of the disease. Pallor, listlessness, inattention, restlessness and irritability are all symptoms, which early show that the blood and nerves are failing to meet the demands made upon them. Mrs. A. Winters, Virden, Man., says: "When my little girl was six years old she was attacked with scarlatina, which was followed by St. Vitus' dance. Her limbs would jerk and twitch. Her speech became affected, and at last she became so bad that she could scarcely walk, and we hardly dared trust her alone. She was under the care of a doctor, but in spite of this was steadily growing worse, and we feared that we would lose her. As Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had cured her elder sister of anaemia I decided to try them again. After the use of a few boxes, to our great joy, we found they were helping her and in the course of a few weeks more her power of speech fully returned, and she could walk and go about as well as any child, and she has been well ever since. When illness comes to any one of our family now, we never call in a doctor, but simply use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they never disappoint us."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY.

Dr. Woodrow Wilson May Be Democratic Nominee.

Princeton, N.J., Sept. 17.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, who was yesterday nominated for governor of New Jersey by the Democratic state convention, said yesterday afternoon that he would offer his resignation as president of Princeton University to the board of trustees at its next meeting on Oct 20.

Wilson for governor of New Jersey in 1911 and for President of the United States in 1912. This is said to be the program of New Jersey Democrats and others.

Woodrow Wilson has never been known as a politician, although he has been an educator of prominence, a writer on political and historical subjects, and in his 55th year. For a year he practiced law in Atlanta, Ga. It has been his ambition to become an authority on government, and he has read and written extensively on politics, the science of government and history.

Outlining his views on political questions of the United States and of the commonwealth over which he hopes to preside after next election, he said yesterday:

"What I wish most for the State of New Jersey is a system whereby the haphazard business of the state may be ended and a more thorough and conscientious system devised. I want the state's business done with the thoroughness and honesty that should pervade in a business house. I intend to bring that about if I am elected.

Secondly, I would like to see the taxation of the state equalized. I do not believe that the taxes of the state are equitably adjusted. Property held by citizens is paying an undue tribute to the state, while the corporations—and by that I mean the railroads—are escaping taxes which should be imposed upon them.

"Guilt of corporations is personal and penalties for guilt should be made personal."

Escaped From Jail.

Toronto, Sept. 17.—John Thompson, alias Burnap, escaped from Toronto jail on Thursday afternoon by scaling a wall of the yard. He was supplied with clothes on the outside, or stole them, and made a clean getaway. He was serving 60 days for theft, having been convicted a week ago.

He was arrested Thursday night in a G.T.R. box car and sentenced to 10 days in the Police Court yesterday, where he was not recognized. He did did not have the same luck at the jail, and will be compelled to finish the original term before he starts in on the second one.

When arrested the second time he gave the name of William Boyd.

Successor to Sbaretti.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—Credence is lent in semi-official circles to the report that Mgr. Sbaretti, now absent in Rome, will not return to Canada to resume the duties of papal abiegate.

For some time past Rev. Father Lepether, superior-general of the Sulpicians, has been in Canada making an extensive tour throughout the Dominion.

In certain quarters this prolonged stay is regarded as an indication of the possibility of his appointment to the legation at Ottawa.

"Bolsh Yer Kaiser.

Berlin, Sept. 17.—A special despatch to The Morgenpost from Fuenfkirchen, Hungary, says that a formidable bomb was discovered Thursday lying on the railroad track in front of Emperor William's train in which he was proceeding to a hunting lodge at Mo[illegible], 25 miles southwest of Fuenfkirchen.

London Sees Q.O.R.

Minister of War Haldane and Lord Roberts Inspect the Canadians and Express Appreciation of the Work That Is Being Done to Bind the Imperial Family — The Press Also Extends Its Welcome.

London, Sept. 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Minister of War Haldane and Lord Roberts inspected the Queen's Own yesterday morning.

Lord Roberts, who arrived first, addressed the men, observing that as an honorary colonel of the regiment, he wished to bid them welcome in person. A great step was made towards the unification of the British army when the Canadian regiment and contingents from Australia, New Zealand, and Tasmania so loyally and so promptly came forward to take their part in the South African war. To-day another very important step was made in the visit of the Queen's Own, in order to take part in the manoeuvres, he said.

"I wish I could make you understand how thoroughly I appreciate the loyalty and soldierly spirit which induced you to take this long voyage and undergo the certain amount of work and discomfort for the sake of the Mother Country, and to say how thoroughly I believe that your action will do much to strengthen the bond that unites her and her children on the other side of the Atlantic," said "Bobs."

Mr. Haldane, addressing the men said: "This is an occasion, this visit of your regiment to these shores, which has deeply stirred the imagination, not only of the people at home in these islands, but of the Empire."

The march cityward then commenced, and along the entire route of five miles, people were massed on every point of view, and the Q.O.R. met with a magnificent reception. Arriving at Guild Hall, the men stacked their arms in the hallways, and the officers were welcomed by the Lord Mayor in his library.

The Times says it is because all Englishmen regard the Q.O.R. as a component and valuable part of the "Imperial army" that they are so warmly welcomed. The zeal which they have shown during the manoeuvres, their discipline and their fine soldierly qualities have made a deep impression.

The Daily Graphic says Col. Pellatt and that the employers of all the men of the Q.O.R. are paying their wages during the trip, and that clearly there are some things they do better in colonies.

The Standard says the reception represents a very genuine feeling, wherein the whole nation unites.

The fact that Winnipeg is now the greatest wheat centre of the world is announced in triumph, and is received here with the greatest gratification.

"The Bowery" It Must Always Be.

New York, Sept. 17.—"They will only change the name of the Bowery over my dead body," angrily shouted "Big Tim" Sullivan yesterday, to a delegation of gentlemen workers who called to enlist his aid in having the historic old thoroughfare named Third avenue.

"It would be an outrage to have the Bowery known as anything but the Bowery," he continued. "The trouble has been the Bowery people have been misunderstood. The Bowery has been pictured as a place where people have been waylaid and robbed. That is false. The Bowery, either by day or by night, is safer than Fifth avenue."

Take Off The Fat Where It Shows

Most women suffer much humiliation because of great quantities of fat, so located that, not matter how they dress, everybody sees that they are not normal. This is the day of the slender figure, and fat women are simply not tolerated either in business or social affairs. Women may not know it, but men when they see a fat woman pass them on the street or in public places make all manner of sympathetic remarks about her. They do not mean to be unkind or to seem unmanly, but it is natural for a man to dislike fat on a woman. Where fat shows the most there is where it must be removed, and as quickly as possible. This season's dresses seem to be made for the fat woman's misery and the slender woman's delight. They expose all the charms of woman and her ugliness as well. Exercise and diet will not remove fat. This has been proved. The famous Marmola prescription which has met with such phenomenal success and has so many of our society women as its sponsors, is now being sold in tablet form to meet the demand of the public for this style of treatment. These little tablets go into your system just like food. They stop the stomach and digestive apapratus from producing fat and reduce the fat upon the body at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. They are harmless and can be carried in your purse and taken even after you have indulged in a hearty meal away from home. They are sold at all drug stores at 75 cents a case, or if you prefer you may write the Marmola Company, 933 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Many Subjects of Importance to Union Men Are Discussed at Gathering In Port Arthur — Immigration and Eight-Hour Day Get Big Discussion—Pensions Advocated For Blind—Importations of Men.

Port Arthur, Sept. 17. Nearly a score of resolutions were rushed through at yesterday morning's session of the Trades and Labor Congress. Among the more important were:

To make arrangements for international peace conference of labor organizations.

To get Government pensions for the blind.

To get legislation requiring greater care in the erection of scaffolds and temporary floors upon which artisans are required to work. (Introduced by Delegate Nicholls, amalgamated carpenters, Toronto.)

Against the practice of using troops in labor disputes.

Approving of the principle of co-operative stores and factories.

To require heating street car vestibules as well as its interiors for the protection of conductors and motormen in winter.

When the settlement of the long-standing strike of the Bucks Stove & Range at St. Louis, Mo., was announced, Delegate J. H. Barnett of Toronto announced that the iron moulders were still on strike at the

WILLIAM GLOCKLING.

Bucks Stove Works at Brantford, and that these two firms had no connection with each other.

The report of the special committee on immigration precipitated a discussion of several hours. It entailed the sending of a representative to Britain and the opening of an office there permanently by the Trades and Labor Congress. Most of the delegates were opposed to this, and preferred to spend the money in having the immigration laws enforced in Canada, and this was carried.

In the discussion of this report all legislation by order-in-council was denounced as vicious and inimical to the best interests of the people.

Delegate A. Verville, M.P., was opposed to the Government having power by order-in-council to stay any existing law to the detriment of the wage-earners of this country.

"Just imagine. Here we have a law making it punishable by a fine of $1,000, and then the simple order-in-council sets it aside," said the Labor member.

The importations of men for the Guelph Carpet Works, Montreal building trade, Penman knitting mills, and the Coppley, Noyes and Randall Clothing firm of Hamilton were mentioned in the discussion.

The policy enunciated by Ed. Stephenson of Toronto for the congress, or organized labor in Canada, sending a Canadian to the British House of Commons, has not been mentioned in any way during the convention.

A resolution bearing on the eight-hour day was introduced by President Wm. Glockling of Toronto advocating an eight-hour day campaign.

The congress placed itself on record as favoring the chartering of all trades and labor councils in Canada by the trades congress, in preference to by the American Federation of Labor.

Was Killed By Maniac

Lawyer Newton Gets Two More of Them to Admit That They Cannot Determine the Sex of the Remains —Defence Said to Be About to Allege That Body Is That of Victim of Previous Tenant.

London, Sept. 17.—Two more of the Government's witnesses in the Dr. H. H. Crippen murder hearing admitted on the stand yesterday that they were unable to determine definitely the sex of the body supposed to be that of Belle Elmore Crippen.

Dr. W. H. Wilcox, the Home Office analyst, testified that the character and position of the organs submitted to him proved that they were from a human body, and that "probably the body was that of a female."

B. H. Spilsbury, one of the leading pathologists of London, would not go even this far, frankly admitting that he was unable to determine the sex from a microscopical study of the remains.

"The person believed to have been Mrs. Belle Elmore Crippen met death through the administering of a dose of hyoscin," said Dr. Wilcox in his evidence. "This dose, while somewhat more than the amount required to produce death, was near enough to the exact amount required for fatal results to indicate expert judgment in preparing the dose. I am satisfied that death followed within an hour of the administering of the poison."

Inspector Dew, on cross-examination, admitted that up to the finding of the body, he had no suspicion that a crime had been committed.

According to one report, Crippen's defence will include a contention that before Crippen occupied the house in which the body was found, the tenant was a murderous lunatic, who is now confined in an asylum. The body, he will say, was that of a victim of this insane man, and was buried in the cellar before Crippen moved into the house.

Two Section Men Killed.

Lyn, Ont., Sept. 17.—George East, aged 50, and David Graham, aged 23, employed as trackmen on the Lyn section of the Grand Trunk Railway, were struck while working on the track near Lyn station about seven o'clock yesterday morning by a freight train and instantly killed. There was a heavy fog.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—A dynamite explosion wrecked the main entrance and blew out every pane of glass in the general office building of the Winslow Bros.' Co., iron manufacturers, at West Harrison street, and South Forty Sixth avenue, Thursday night. Nobody was injured.

The concussion was felt for a mile distant.

The police regard it significant that the bomb was placed directly under the centre of the pattern shop, and that 25 union pattern makers severed their connection with the firm about three weeks ago.

To Tell the Ghost.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 17.—Despatches received yesterday from Tokio tell of a unique telegram sent by the Governor-General of Kores, instructing young Prince Ito to inform his late father's spirit that annexation had been completed.

Doubts Very Much That Williams Made 100 Yards In Nine Seconds

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—A hundred yards in nine seconds flat! This is the feat timers and witnesses say Richard Perry Williams, physical director and coach of the Berkeley School, New York, accomplished at New Lynn, Mass., late in August.

A hundred yards in nine seconds! If Williams actually sprinted the distance in that time he reached a goal which clenched fists, pounding hearts, bursting lungs, spring steel muscles, and iron determination have struggled for in vain since the days of the Greeks.

Williams clipped three-fifths of a second off the official A. A. U. 100-yard sprint record made by Dan J. Kelly at Spokane, Wash., June 23, 1906.

Three-fifths of a second! What is that? The quiver of an eyelash, the twinkling of a star, a heart beat, the flutter of a bird's wing. But it's a great deal.

Let Williams and Kelly race 100 yards, each running the distance in his best time, Kelly in 9 3-5 seconds, Williams in 9 flat. Both runners leap into the air at the crack of the pistol. They come down the stretch blurred by their speed.

But Williams breaks the tape when Kelly has still 18 feet 9 inches to go—half the width of a city lot. That's what a heartbeat, three-fifths of a second, is in the 100-yard dash.

Williams had to cross 33 feet 4 inches each time a watch's second hand moved.

Williams made the record in the presence of a small gallery of Pine Grove, Mass., summer residents on the track at the state camp grounds. Two men with stop watches caught the time at nine seconds flat. The watches agreed. The track was straight and level. No wind was blowing.

The A. A. U. will not accept the record, made unofficially as it was. Later, at some of the authorized meets, Williams will be given the opportunity to run an official 100 yards. He is confident of making the official record, for he claims to have run the hundred in 9 1-5 several times in practice. Williams claims to have lowered other sprinting and jumping records in unofficial trials. He is 36 years old, 4 feet 10½ inches tall, weighs 165 pounds. This summer he was physical director of the New London vacation school.

Pirate Chieftain Says The Public Knows Only The Brightest Side

Examiner Special.

Pittsburg, Sept. 14.—"The Philosophy of Baseball" would be a good caption for the talk given yesterday afternoon by Fred C. Clark, manager and captain of the Pittsburg baseball team. Fred usually reserved and reticent concerning the game which holds such a charm for him, grew interested as the talk progressed, and after he had warmed up to his subject, gave utterance to many truths which, more the pity, are overlooked entirely by those who attend ball games and whose curiosity never leads them to take a peep behind the scenes.

These remarks, coming from a man seldom given to talking to newspapermen, are all the weightier. One of the best players and leaders the national game has ever known, Clarke has ever considered it his duty to refrain from talking for publication. Unlike other noted baseball managers, he dislikes to "see himself in print" and as a result is seldom quoted.

When the writer ran across Sir Frederick, the Pirate pilot was searching for a hardware store in order to buy a pair of pliers.

"My machine needs a little tinkering with; and as it's raining to-day I just thought I'd turn mechanic for a while," was his explanation.

"You don't look like a ball player to-day," was suggested.

"I never look like a ball player," was the reply. "Sometimes I feel like one, but to judge from the remarks of some of my critics I never look like a real player."

This little outburst made an opening for other questions and soon Clarke was fairly launched upon his subject. Said he:

"This baseball business is peculiar. In a city like Pittsburg there can be no half-way; it must be all or none. That is, we must win or we must lose (this evidently meaning the pennant).

"A week ago yesterday we played great ball, yet we lost two games to New York. Yesterday we played sloppy ball and won a pair from St. Louis. Those who witnessed these sessions came away vowing that we had played good ball, whereas we did nothing of the sort. After the game the boys saw where grievous mistakes had been made. We discussed the matter and made up our minds to do different the next time.

"You see," continued Fred, "our business is so much different from any other. A business man can start out along a certain line and when he finds he is in wrong he can retrace his steps and take the right path. In baseball we are forced to think and act quickly. Situations are created on the instant. We must place ourselves in position to grapple with them. If we hesitate, the opportunity passes and there is no remedy. Games are lost through a slight oversight—a slight mistake. Sometimes we think too rapidly for our own good.

"The business man isn't called upon to act or think as quickly as we are. He can take his time—he can map out his course of procedure and then feel his way carefully. As I have said, when he finds he is going wrong, he can stop; he can place himself right."

THEIR VOTES ARE PRIZED.

In New Zealand Women Are More Than Welcome to the Franchise.

The statute extending the franchise to New Zealand women was passed in 1893. Since then there have been six Parliaments elected by the joint votes of the men and women of New Zealand. In all of these elections, says the North American Review, the women of the country have taken their full share.

The proportion of women who voted at each election compared with those whose names were on the rolls have been almost exactly the same as that of the male voters. There are not at present in New Zealand as many women as men, and the actual voting power of the women is nearly 10 per cent. less than that of the men. Practically, however, all who can do so vote at each election.

The fears expressed at the time the franchise was given them that the result would be either that the women would vote just as their husbands and fathers told them to vote or that the new privilege would mean dissension in families and the practical degradation of the women have not been justified by the experiences.

The women of New Zealand vote at elections as a matter of course just as they partake of their meals or do any other ordinary duty of everyday life. The principal change produced by the new order of things, as far as the family life of the people is concerned, would seem to be that what may be called political questions have become matters of general interest instead of being as formerly matters which were tacitly presumed to be outside the sphere of one-half the family.

In the matter of the extended franchise, therefore, it was not theory but practical experience that won the day. It was not because women were human beings as much as men; it was not even because they were intelligent human being to whom men were ready to entrust the case of their homes and families; it was because the, believed on the evidence of experience that women if they could vote would take an intelligent interest in public questions and would by their votes forward the best interests of the country and its people.

Paralyzing an Army.

Some strangely warlike speeches were made at the meeting of the International Arbitration and Peace Association, held the other day in London. Mr. Maurice Hewlett, who presided, was the first to cause astonishment by suggesting the declaration of a general strike by the organized workers of Europe as a preventive of proposed war.

War scares might come upon them at any minute, said Mr. Hewlett, and of all immediate preventive measures that he knew, there was only one worth consideration. Speaking plainly, the issue depended upon the fathers and brothers of those who could make army corps mere lumber. He would suggest that organized labor, all over Europe, should, upon the threat of European war, threaten a general strike. They would thereby paralyze any army and prevent it taking the field.

The general strike was undoubtedly the most dangerous and terrible weapon at the disposal of the organized workers, and he believed the mere threat of it would be enough to paralyze the financiers, who were the real war makers. It was, at any rate, the only remedy that suggested itself to him for making war impossible. The working classes had all to lose and nothing to gain by war, for victory, as well as defeat, made their country bankrupt.

Another Notion Swatted.

Sir Frederick Treves, one of the eminent physicians in England, has attacked what he calls the "old wives' theory" that persons catch colds in draughts. He recommends draughts as excellent things for the health and as preventive of colds. "The idea is absurd," said he. "No cold ever had such an origin. Colds are the result not of draughts but of stuffy rooms. Don't mind sitting in a draught. It will do you good. In this age, when women are clamoring for something to do, surely it would not be amiss for them to take up an educational crusade against the scourge of consumption." Another physician, commenting on this opinion, said: "By rebreathing the air of a stuffy room the germs of a cold are likely to be taken into the system, especially if there is another person in the room who has a cold. But introduce a draught in the room and sit in the draught, and, no matter how many persons with colds are in the room, if you breathe the pure air in the draught you will not inhale the cold germ, and you will be all right. I, for my part, know of no disease that is due to a draught."

AN UNPLEASANT TASK.

Which Falls to the Lot of England's Lord Chamberlain.

To the Lord Chamberlain of the English court is intrusted the delicate and certainly unpleasant mission of quietly intimating to men and women, sometimes of the highest rank, that their presence at court and at entertainments which royalty may attend is no longer welcome.

These intimations are not necessarily the result of any public scandal. They are sometimes a manifestation of royal disapproval of conduct and of indiscretions that are known to relatively very few. It is in this way that King George and Queen Mary, like Edward VII and Queen Alexandra in the previous reign, may be said to police unobtrusively English society.

Queen Alexandra took a far more active part in this than is generally known. True, she is reluctant at all times to believe wrong of anyone, and, differing from Queen Victoria, has a hatred for gossip. For the old Queen used to delight in knowing everything that was going on in society, and in being kept thoroughly posted by her ladies in waiting. But once Queen Alexandra had her attention drawn to conduct of which she disapproved, she became adamant in her refusal to hold any further intercourse with the person in question.

There are plenty of things which never reach the ears of the public, which never get into court, but which, nevertheless, are sufficient to bar people from court.

For instance, what may be described as social conspiracies, "romances" in which money is allowed to play a part, neglect payment of debts of honor, the social promotion of undesirable people in return for cash, etc., all sooner or later—generally sooner—reach the ears of the King, and of his entourage, and the result is that the names of the offenders are removed by the Lord Chamberlain from what may be described as the royal visiting list.

NOTHING IS TOO QUEER.

To Be Placed In the Distended Ear Lobes of a Masai Belle.

Among certain tribes in British East Africa an enormously distended ear is one of the surest signs of beauty and ultra-refinement. A belle who really wants to lead her "set" spares herself neither pain nor inconvenience to achieve the sort of ear which fashion dictates. One of the favorite methods employed is to pierce the lobe of the ear and insert a small wedge made of wood. Gradually this hole is enlarged by the introduction of thicker pieces of wood, until it is large enough to receive a stone with a groove running round it. These stones vary in size, but the ultimate result is the transformation of the lobe into a rounded, cord-like loop, which in the black ears of these men and women looks like a rubber band. Among the Masai women the full-sized ear is considered to have been attained when the cutaneous ring on one side will meet its fellow over the crown of the head.

When the lobe has been stretched to its utmost capacity it becomes the receptacle of many strange things, such as plugs of wood, rings of horn or of ebony; occasionally a can or a gallipot will be found in it. The women wear a curious ear ring, as well as a necklace made of iron wire. These coils of iron wire resemble the firework known as a Catherine wheel.

Woman's ear rings are of great consequence, for no woman ventures to have them off during the husband's lifetime. Should she happen to take them off while doing her work she would, on the approach of her husband, run into the hut and resume them, so that he would not see her without them. If the husband went away from home she would not venture to take her ear rings off for fear other men should see her without them.

Suffragette Throws Policeman.

A practical test of suffragette jiu-jitsu has taken place between Mrs. Garrud, an expert in the Japanese art, and a policeman. Mrs. Garrud is one of the organizers of the woman athletes' branch of the Women's Freedom League, and her object is to make jiu-jitsu an additional weapon of woman's fight for the vote. A policeman good naturedly agreed to test her. He weighed thirteen stones, but for a good few minutes he could not get a grip of the woman, who stands but four feet ten inches. Then suddenly the thing happened. In a flash the woman fell on her back, with the massive policeman towering above her. Up shot her feet to meet his diaphragm. Her little arms strained, and as he pulled against himself the man lost his balance, swirled over her head. In less than ten seconds the suffragette had thrown the policeman. Five minutes later, when he once more condescended to stand upright, the puzzled policeman again carefully regarded Mrs. Garrud. Contemplatively he scratched his head. "If that had happened on the pavement instead of this mat the police force would be one man short at this moment," he said.

Huge Fossil Found.

An interesting discovery of the fossilized remains of an extinct monster was recently made at Mafeking, N.S.W. The animal's backbone measured eighteen feet, while the bones of the leg measured nine inches through. The find was sent to the Sydney Museum, where it was studied by Dr. Anderson, who said he had come to the conclusion that the remains were those of a Diprotodon, ages ago extinct.

Tried to Wreck Train.

A serious attempt was made recently to wreck the Darjiling mail train at Mandal Ghat, India. A large boulder had been deliberately placed on the line. Owing to the train running slowly it was not derailed. This is the fifth attempt at train-wrecking that has been made on the Eastern Bengal Railway. The motive for the deed is believed to have been political.

Tortoises 300 Years Old.

Two of the largest elephantine tortoises ever seen in England have arrived at the Zoological Gardens with three smaller companions. Their weight is measured in hundredweights and their age in centuries. If the estimate of the 250 years which were allotted to their predecessor "Methusaleh" was correct, the giant brethern which have just been placed in the tortoise paddock must have seen three hundred summers at least. Shakespeare and Sir Walter Raleigh were living men when these two reptiles first broke their shells in Aldabras the island in the Seycheles group of the Indian Ocean—from which they are now unwilling emigrants.

India's Native Armies.

The native states of India altogether have armies aggregating more than 100,000 men. The more important ones maintain imperial service troops to the number of 18,000. These troops are under the regular inspection of British officers, and belong absolutely to the states, although they are available for the Government service when needed. They have the same armament as the regular soldiers of the Indian Government, and are well trained. Some of them have served in China and Somaliland.

Halifax Firemen Injured.

Halifax, N.S., Sept. 17.—Two firemen were seriously injured last night in a fire that gutted three buildings on the Market Wharf and came dangerously near sweeping away the southern end of the waterfront.

The men were fighting the flames on a ladder when the burning roof fell on them, burying both in the debris. They were rescued with difficulty and taken to the hospital.

Three Men.

When H. H. Rogers was in the prime of his power, says a New York writer, he formed a "friendship partnership" with Mark Twain and Thomas Brackett Reed and took personal charge of their affairs, looking after them as he would a couple of children. It was great fun for all three, and especially Rogers. Neither Clemens nor Reed had any sense for business. The big ex-speaker came to New York a poor man. Five years later he died suddenly, and his estate assayed over $600,000. He probably had no idea what he was worth at any stage. Rogers made as much or more money for Clemens.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

The Origin of the Old Saying, "Robbing Peter to Pay Paul."

The greatest landmark in London is doubtless St. Paul's. Its massive outline and lofty towering dome, whether seen from the busy street or the quiet river constitute a characteristic feature and form a picture which out of countless spectacles and the blur of seemingly endless traffic most visitors take away with them as the predominant impression of the greatest city in the world.

It is, however, to Westminster Abbey that the tourist naturally turns when he desires to see a standing embodiment of antiquity and the greatest of the British Empire. It is more than 600 years older than St. Paul's. Founded in 1065 by the gentle King, Edward the Confessor, it saw in the following year the coronation of Norman William and the establishment of the present royal line. Filled with the tombs of kings and poets, warriors and statesmen, of prelates and philosophers, it appeals alike to the memory and the imagination and arouses an interest that goes on increasing with the flow of time.

Yet (says a writer in The Washington Post), of the hundreds of thousands of foreigners who visit Westminster Abbey annually, it is safe to say that but an infinitesimal minority is aware of the proper style and title of the venerable pile. Nor is this strange, for the British people themselves have in the long lapse of ages and in the vicissitudes which the ages have brought ceased to remember it. The late Dean Stanley, who loved the glorious old church with a great love, once remarked that there are probably but few Englishmen who care to be reminded that the full title of Westminster Abbey is the "Collegiate Church, or Abbey of St. Peter."

Stanley also adopted the opinion generally held that the proverb "Robbing Peter to pay Paul" took its origin from the diversion of certain of the abbey estates about 1550 from their original purpose to the benefit of the old St. Paul's. This view may, however, reasonably be doubted, for the saying "Crucifying Paul to redeem Peter" is traceable as far back as the twelfth century, and the phrase "Robbing St. Peter to clothe St. Paul" is found in 1515, and a similar locution occurs in early French.

The form of the expression now in vogue was solidified and rendered current by the agitation started in the city of London proper, as distinct from the city of Westminster, where the abbey stands — that the great Earl of Chatham should be buried in St. Paul's. To deprive the abbey, in favor of its younger rival, of the distinction of enshrining the remains of the greatest statesman that in her rough island story, England has produced would be to rob Peter to pay Paul with a vengeance, and the taunt was so freely bandied about that the peculiar form of verbiage has ever since had an abiding place in the English language.

Queen Mother's Kindness.

Lord Tennyson, the late poet laureate, used to relate a story showing the thoughtfulness of Queen Alexandra. It was on the occasion of a voyage with Mr. Gladstone, and many distinguished people were on board. Tennyson, as related by a friend of his, read, "The Grandmother" on board because the Princess of Wales asked for it. "I read it," said Tennyson "in a cabin on deck. The princess sat close to me at one side and a young lady whom I didn't know on the other. The wind came through an open window, and the princess whispered, 'Put on your hat'; but I said I ought, if possible, to make myself balder than ever before so many royalties. She said again, 'Oh, put it on!' so I did, and I heard afterwards that the King of Denmark's court fool, who was in the background (they really kept a court fool), remarked 'He may be laureate, but he has not learned court manners.' When I was done the ladies praised me and I patted the unknown one on the back by way of reply, and presently I found that she was the Empress of Russia."

"Had you any talk with the Czar?"

"Hardly any. He said he couldn't speak English. Perhaps he was disgusted at my patting his wife on the back. His head was up in the cabin ceiling as he walked about below."

Gypsy Wordless Language.

To communicate with one another, gypsies now use letters—and they use the telegraph, too, when necessary—especially in this country. But the modern Romany also follows the "patteran," tracing the footsteps, or wagon tracks, of his friends on the road by the same method employed by his ancient prototype, reading directions where no words are written as clearly as the gorgio does a roadside signboard. But the patteran can be read by the gypsy only—it is hidden and secret, although it may be in plain sight, as a signboard is open and public. The patteran may be formed of sticks or stones or grass, placed cross fashion at the parting of roads in such manner that only a gypsy would instantly notice and understand. To him it means much; first of all, the direction taken by

AS AN ERRAND BOY

Sir Baden-Powell Tells Interesting Story of Sir Thomas Lipton

Major-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell, addressing the boys of the Mercers' School, Holborn, London, at the annual prize-giving the other day, told an interesting story of the early life of Sir Thomas Lipton, with whom he had been staying.

Sir Thomas, he said, started work as an errand boy. He afterwards went to America as a cabin-boy, and on arrival a hotel agent touted among the passengers. Seeing the boy forlorn, and hearing he hadn't a penny, the agent offered him ten days' free board and lodging if he could bring twelve emigrants to his hotel. Lipton brightened up at once, because he had become very friendly with the emigrants through writing their letters, he being theonly one in the steerage who could read and write. The emigrants were quite willing to go to the hotel, and the boy got his free board and time to look round for a berth.

The fire brigade received a call this afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Catholic Orphan's Home, on London street. The brigade arrived at the place promptly and the blaze was extinguished without the aid of water. One chemical was used and little damage was done.

WEST END CLAIMS PENMAN SHIELD

Thinks Barber Should Not Have Been Given First Place

Examiner Special.

West End Y. M. C. A. are claiming the Penman Shield although the official meet at Peterborough on Labour Day shows Central and West End to be tied with 51 points each.

The Queen Street club have a very good case, and have the rules to back them up. The whole question hinges on the warding of the points in the high jump. Marshall of West Ends, and Barber of Central, were tied for first place, and when the roll was lowered Marshall cleared the bar in the least number of jumps. After going over he went to the dressing room, but Barber kept on jumping, and finally made the same height as the West Ender. Because Marshall had retired from the field the judges gave "Tiny" first place. According to the rules Marshall should have got it, and was more than surprised when informed of the decision of the judges. J. H. Crocker, of Brantford, once physical director of Central, did not agree with the officials, and said that Marshall should have earned five points. With Barber in second place West End would have taken the shield within a margin of four points. Toronto News.

Fred Waghorne Takes a Position in the Sporting Goods Department.

Examiner Special.

Fred Waghorne, the well known lacrosse and hockey referee, has taken a position in the sporting goods department of the T. Eaton Company. "Wag" is known from one end of the country to the other in sporting circles. He now has a plan on to consolidate all the outdoor hockey leagues in Toronto under the name of the All-Toronto Hockey League. There are about ten different leagues in the city, and it is "Wag's" idea to so arrange them as to provide for play-offs at the end of the season between the champions of the various leagues. All games will be played under the O.H.A. rules

VETERANS' RACE

F. H. Hurley and J. W. Geddes Will Meet in One Mile Race.

Examiner Special.

Thursday morning at 11 o'clock the two old veterans, F. H. Hurley and J. W. Geddes, met in a one mile match race, Geddes conceding a forty-yard start to his opponent. At the crack of the gun Hurley started fast, and soon increased his lead, winning easily by about 100 yards in the fast time of 5.36. Both men are over fifty years of age. F. C. Waghorne acted as referee, and Scotty McKay handled the gun. P. C. Adams, the police 100 yards champion, was judge at the finish.

Geddes started favorite at 2 to 1, but evidently the talent had the wrong tip for Hurley, who was in the pink of condition, was never in danger.

Scotty McKay has offered gold and silver medals for a return match between the two, and arrangements are now under way to have the two meet on September 29. Lou Marsh has been asked to act as referee on the occasion.

GOLF

The second monthly competition was held last Wednesday. There was a large attendance. The medal round, the prize presented by Mrs. R. S. Davidson, was won by Miss Harstone. The approaching and putting contest, the prize presented by Mrs. W. H. Hill, was won by Miss Helen Davidson.

Mr. Denham has kindly offered prizes for mixed foursomes, to be played for on Saturday, Sept. 24th. Players will please be ready to start at 2.30 sharp.

The Championship.

The following is the result of the draw in the first round for the championship of the Peterborough Golf Club:

Mrs. R. R. Hall vs. Mrs. W. H. Hill.
Mrs. R. S. Davidson vs. Miss Harstone.
Mrs. Coulthard vs. Miss Moore.
Mrs Gardiner vs. Miss Perks.
Mrs. McClellan vs. Mrs. Sanderson.
Miss Kingan vs. Miss H. Davidson.
Miss Halliday vs. Miss G. Hall.
Miss D. Hall vs. Miss Dumble.
To be played Sept. 26, 27, 28, 29.

NO DEVELOPMENT IN BELMONT MYSTERY

Authorities Are Baffled as to the Assailant---"Woman Was Simply Scared to Death" is Coroner's Opinion---Wounds on Body Were Not Sufficient to Cause Her Death.

Examiner Special.

HAVELOCK, SEPT. 19.—No clue has yet been found as to who was the murderer of Telsia Deline, and the mystery is as deep as ever.

Briefly, the facts of the case are these: That on Thursday night Hugh Deline left the farm of Jas. Buchanan, with whom he had worked during the day. He arrived home, according to his own statement, at 8.30 o'clock. He found his wife dead and at once ran to Mrs. Sam. Newal (45 minutes walk) but it is stated that he did not arrive there until ten o'clock, but there is some uncertainty as to the time. He notified Buchanans, on the other concession, at about 12 o'clock, and Coroner Kindred, of Havelock, next morning. The woman's face was scratched, as if by finger nails; there was a scalp wound, and her wrists were scraped, as if they had been bound. No one had been seen entering or leaving the place during the day. The place is in a clearing, about a mile from the road, and about eight miles north of Havelock. The question is, "Who committed the deed?"

It does not seem possible that suspicion should point the finger to the husband, thus left with two little children, aged three months and two years. There seems to be a difference in time, as stated by the husband and the neighbours, but that is uncertain. The husband seemed to attribute her death to a bad pain his wife had in her head, but cannot account for the pain which she had in her head.

He told the neighbours about the pain his wife had in her head, and said that he might go home any night and find her dead. He seemed to feel badly over the death of his wife, and said he could give no explanation of his wife's death.

The farmers who live in that neighbourhood know very little about the family as they lived so far from the road. Watson Parks, a cousin of the deceased, who has lived near them for a year, said that as far as he knew their family relations were of the happiest.

Deline stated that his wife had suffered at intervals during the past few years from violent pains in her head and that they had been worse lately, and he had sent to Havelock on the day of the tragedy for a bottle of medicine for it.

Two suspicious characters were seen about that settlement about a week ago, and have annoyed several of the farmers, but had not been seen lately.

A post mortem was performed on the body on Saturday by Dr. Holdcroft, of town, and Dr. Ford, of Norwood. The inquest will be resumed in the town hall, Havelock, on Friday next, Sept. 23rd.

The circumstances surrounding the unfortunate woman's death are so peculiar that, though the local police have been working on the case since Friday morning, when they were informed of Mrs. Deline's death, they are still absolutely at a loss to discover who the assailant was, and though hopes are entertained that some light may be shed upon the tragedy at the inquest to be held on Friday afternoon, they are mingled with a feeling in the Havelock community that the mystery attached to it may never be solved.

Startling Developments Possible.

While the crime remains a mystery it was stated from a reliable source to-night that startling developments may possibly follow. Those acquainted with the nature of the medical evidence and with certain circumstances connected with the finding of the body are disposed to take the view that the assailant had attempted violation without, however, accomplishing his purpose, and this supposition has led inquiries to be made in the vicinity which may have sensational results.

Attacked in the Kitchen.

The one thing clearly determined so far is that some time between 8 o'clock and 10 on Thursday night Mrs. Deline, after putting her two children, aged two and one-half years and two and one-half months, respectively, to bed, was attacked in the kitchen of her primitive home by an unknown assailant, and that in the desperate struggle which seems to have ensued she received a shock, which caused her death. At first it was thought that the woman had died as the result of the injuries inflicted on her head, arms and body. When seen by Coroner Dr. Kindred early on Friday morning the body certainly had the appearance of having been treated with great violence. The face was lined and interlined with scratches, as it it had been clawed by some wild animal; there was an abrasion on the left side of her forehead, her body was bruised in several places.

AWAKENED THEN KILLED BY A NEGRO BURGLAR

Special to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, ILL., SEPT. 19.—Awakened early this morning by the screaming of his children, Clarence B. Hiller, chief clerk of Rock Island Railroad System, grappled with a big negro burglar, who threw him downstairs and fired three bullets from a revolver, killing Hiller instantly. The police and neighbours secured the neighbourhood and Wm. Jones, coloured, was arrested with a revolver, indicating that it had been recently discharged. Some of the neighbours clamoured for lynching, but the police managed to get Jones away to the station.

TRYING TO ESTABLISH A MOTIVE FOR THE CRIME

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., SEPT. 19.—Continuing the Crippen case to-day the Crown authorities were more successful in establishing a motive for the crime. Miss Emily Jackson and other neighbours stated that Miss Leneve told them she was anxiously waiting a divorce for Crippen, so that she could marry the doctor. The girl was generally tearful. Witnesses also stated that the scar on the remains was similar to the scar carried by Mrs. Crippen as a result of her operation.

The grandstand receipts are about seventy-five dollars in excess of the last exhibition, the amount this year being approximately $375. A total detailed statement of the actual figures, as regards both the attendance and the receipts, will be furnished the public by the directors, just as soon as it can be arranged.

The Cause

of Eye Troubles is usually not disease, but defect in the structure or muscles of the Eye.

Consider the incessant work of the Eye, the instantaneous and exact adjustment demanded that sight may be always equal, single and ready to every change in position, distance and light. The nerves compel and control the mechanism in these instant adjustments. The mechanism may be defective, that is—

There may be defects in the structure, or focus of one or both Eyes;

The Muscles may be imperfectly balanced, so that both Eyes do not work in harmony;

There may be inability to focus for close work;

There may be strain through overwork, abuse, poor lights, bright reflections, etc.

INDISCREET ZEAL.

Montreal is doing its share in furnishing theological or semi-theological sensations. Following the Father Vaughan incident comes another incident, which tends to produce more serious results. The former was only provocative of controversy. The other seems ill-judged intolerance and Pharisaism, which appears to threaten injury to a great moral interest, —the sanctity of the Sabaath day. A convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrews was held in Montreal, and arrangements had been made to hold a mass meeting in the Princess theatre. But the local secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance interfered and insisted that the holding of a mass meeting for men on Sunday would be a violation of the city by-law prohibiting the opening of theatres on Sundays. That the character of the meeting was good is shown by the fact that the prevented meeting was held in a church. This would not permit of so many attending, nor of so many, many of whom do not go to church, being brought under moral and religious influence. But the blue law spirit was vindicated. The letter of the law, may have been observed, but it does not seem that having all things in view, the insistence upon the letter of the law in this case was more justified than Shylock's insistence upon the letter by his bond—his pound of flesh. The St. Andrews Brotherhood is a religious organization, based on the missionary spirit, the spirit of St. Andrew, who brought his brethren to his Master. The religious services and the addresses given would have aimed to uplift and help men in their religious life and have had a distinctly improving, if not reforming, moral effect. The by-law referred to was aimed at preventing demoralizing plays and exhibitions. The insistence upon enforcing the by-law was an excess of zeal, which threatens the interests of better Sunday observance. Unwise assertion of the letter of even a good by-law, will tend to defeat its object. Reason and common sense were given us to help us avoid mistakes. We have divine approval of the good policy of joining the wisdom of the serpent to the innocence of the dove. We have also the divine condemnation of the scribes, pharisees and hypocrites, who paid their tithies of herbs and omitted the weightier matters of the law. In Montreal we have the Scriptures fulfilled in our sight — we have the weightier matters of the law omitted in the blue-law denial of opening a theatre to the preaching of the gospel, and in the assumed interest of a cause which stands to be discredited in the eyes of the unthinking by the bigotry of its official custodians. Law without discretion is a dangerous weapon.

THE LOGIC OF FACTS.

Some of our Conservative contemporaries are preaching the doctrine of extreme protection for Canada, in the face of fact and logic. They do not choose to remember that the days when the high protection policy of their party was in full fettle, were dark days for Canada; that trade was stagnant, population stationary, revenue falling, debt increasing, and that prosperity was only to be found in the dictionary. They forget that when the Liberal government took the sting out of our tariff—practically made it a revenue tariff—provided that the taxes paid by the people went into the public treasury instead of into the pockets of protected and favoured beneficaries, the revenue increased, trade took a tremendous forward sprint, prosperity overflowed the country like a benign wave, population increased, industry took new heart, and everything sailed ahead at a tremendous rate as it is still doing to-day. They forget that our long suffering Yankee cousins after testing the doctrine of high protection to the extremest point, after munching much Dead Sea fruit, are undermining the foundations of the pedestal, upon which they elevated their fiscal idol, and threatening to shake it from its base, and smash its feet of clay and dint its cheek of brass. A big moiety, of the protective party in the United States is in open revolt, and the sweeping victory of the anti-protection party in Maine is regarded as a forecast of what will happen when the general electoral shaking-up takes place. "Remember the Maine" will have some real significances for the Republican party. The election in that state is a lusty straw showing the direction of the fiscal wind. There is not much danger of any popular excitement in Canada over fiscal matters. The people of Canada are sane and prone to judge from results. The prosperity and progress of Canada under the Liberal fiscal policy have been so great, are so great, and promise so great continuance, that there will be little desire to return to the old slow order of things. The progress of Canada in all ways, material and moral, in standing, and promise, has been too great during the past fifteen years to justify a half hearted, and interested demand for a change. The revision of the tariff in 1897 was made with an eye to the peculiar circumstances and needs of Canada. A similar course, if necessity indicates, will be pursued now. The logic of facts is against the advocates of high taxation and low revenue.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Dr. Sheard, medical health officer for Toronto, gives the honest farmer his due. He says that the water in Toronto's daily supply of weakly milk, is put in by the city dealers after it leaves the farmer's hands. This is an unfortunate matter. If Toronto would encourage the farmer to put the water into the milk, it would at least be clean water, and not the sewage-garnished city water, muddy with microbes.

Old country journals bring an exceeding amplitude of ignorance to bear upon their discussion of Canadian affairs. Then can tell us all (wrong) about Canada's fiscal arrangements; they can read the hearts of Canadians and tell them what they want and especially what they should do, in the way of holding the poor old empire together. The ability of the great London journals to speak with authority on Canadian matters, is shown by the London Daily Telegraph's touching epitomized history of the Queen's Own, now "doing the grand" and the goose step in England. "The Queen's own are raised in Ontario and are the class corps at that town."

The Riches And Resources Of Canada's "Farthest North"

(Monetary Times.)

The pen and the pencil invaded the Peace River country when a party of Canadian and American newspaper men left Edmonton towards the end of July. The trip was planned by Mr. J. K. Cornwall M.P.P for Peace River. With the party was a representative of The Monetary Times. The Northern Transportation Company conveyed the men, who went to spy out the land, by steamers from Athabasca Landing on the Athabasca River to Grouard on Lesser Slave Lake, a distance of 210 miles. For the journey from Peace River Crossing to the Chutes below Fort Vermilion and return, a distance of 700 miles, the Hudson's Bay Company's steamer, "Peace River," was used. The intervening distances were covered by stages, as also was the trip from Peace River Crossing to Grande Prairie and return, a distance of 200 miles.

The Athabasca River is difficult to navigate during the low water season, which is in the fall of the year. For this purpose the Northern Transportation Company has recently built a small steamer drawing only eight inches of water. This vessel is also used on a portion of Lesser Slave River to navigate the Rapids. The Dominion Government are at present engaged in improving this river by building wide dams.

The Athabasca River could also be greatly improved by dredging a few sandbars. This would enable the navigation company to reduce their freight charges to a certain extent, and would prove beneficial to the incoming settlers.

The Peace River is a much better waterway than the Athabasca for steamboat navigation. The river should provide means of transportation for the Peace River District for many years to come. A railway that taps the river at any point between Fort Vermilion and Hudson's Hope, will be able to have its freight distributed by steamers along this stretch of country a distance of 700 miles. It is conservatively estimated that there are about 30,000,000 acres of prairie land tributary to the river.

At Fort Vermillion, 700 miles north of the American boundary, wheat has been successfully grown for years. The Hudson's Bay Company has a roller flour mill with a capacity of fifty barrels per day in operation. They also have a saw mill, which proves a benefit to settlers. A mill is also being operated by a private company in Grand Prairie, and is working to full capacity, so great is the demand being made by settlers for lumber. Dressed lumber (spruce) is sold at $20 per thousand; rought lumber $15. No combine exists there.

The Peace River District should later furnish a market for Eastern wholesale houses and manufacturers. The present problem is transportation. The steamers on Athabasca River, Lesser Slave Lake and Peace River are a great assistance to settlers, but the wagon roads intervening and running into Grande Prairie act as a great handicap. The Provincial government annually votes sums of money for this purpose, but they are inadequate, as the districts to be improved are large.

Despite this drawback, new settlers are daily entering the country and the map is gradually being rolled north another two hundred miles. The first railway to enter the district will find a large settlement waiting for it.

The soil north and west of the Peace River has been proved to be equally as well suited for farming as Grande Prairie District to the south. The picturesqueness of the latter district appeals to newcomers. It is about eighty miles square, and is composed of a series of saucer-shaped plateaus, all well watered by small lakes and streams. The rolling nature of the country enables the settler to obtain land sloping in any direction, and small poplar bluffs are scattered throughout. These ridges are gradual, being hardly perceptible when driving over them. Little difficulty will be presented to railway construction.

Eyes are being focused on this valuable and undeveloped country. In the meantime Mr. Cornwall is to be congratulated upon the success he made of his excursion, which covered a distance approximately of 2,000 miles.

CLEVER VIOLINISTE

Has Been Added to the Staff of the Princess Theatre

The staff of the Princess theatre has been greatly strengthened by the addition of a capable pianist, in the person of Mrs. MacKenzie, an English player of much ability, and a most talented violinist in the person of Miss Fenwick, who comes to the Princess after a long engagement at the Crystal Palace, Toronto, where her playing has been one of the most popular features of the bill. Miss Fenwick is a very clever violinist, who seems destined to become a prime favourite with Peterborough audiences, as those who have heard her have bee delighted with her finished work.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

The Lord's House In the Top of the Mountains

"It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it" (Isaiah ii, 2).

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 18.—Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle preached twice here to-day to the local branch of the International Bible Students' Association. He had an excellent hearing and large and intelligent audiences. One address was entitled, "The Great Hereafter." The other we now report. The speaker said:—

Our text has not yet been fulfilled, but we believe the beginning of its fulfillment to be near. It pictures Messiah's Kingdom, for which Christian people have long been waiting and praying, "Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as in heaven"—the same Kingdom for which the Jews so long waited and are still waiting. Our text relates, not to the spiritual part of the Kingdom, which the Gospel Church is called to share, but to the earthly part of the Kingdom, which belongs to the natural seed of Abraham. A great mistake has been made by many of us in the past, in that we have not discerned and acknowledged the two Israels, spiritual and natural, and the separate rewards and blessings apportioned to these by the Divine promises of the Scriptures. Both are to be used of God in fulfilling the promise made to Abraham—in blessing all the families of the earth.

After the completion of Messiah Head and Members, on the plane of glory, the New Covenant will be inaugurated with Israel, as the Scriptures distinctly teach (Jeremiah xxxi 31-34). Our text, therefore, waits for its accomplishment until the last member of the elect Church of Christ shall have passed beyond the vail.

In the symbolic language of the Scriptures a mountain is always symbolical of a Kingdom. Hence the mountain of the Lord's house means the Kingdom of God and that royal house or family recognized by him. For instance, we read that David sat upon the throne of the Kingdom of the Lord and that God made a Covenant with him, "even the sure mercies of David"—viz., that none but his Seed, his posterity, would ever be recognized as the Divinely appointed representatives of God in kingly authority and power. In other words, Messiah was to be the offspring of David, the great antitypical David (Beloved), who must "reign from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth."

The Messiah-King on the spirit plane, the Son of God (and like God invisible to men, as are also the angels), is the antitypical David and the antitypical Solomon, the wise, the great, the rich. In the days of his flesh our Lord was the Son of David according to the flesh, though begotten of a divine life not tainted by any human imperfection. He was, therefore, holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners. His faithfulness to the will of the Father made him subject to all of the experiences of suffering and death, as expressed in his own words. The cup which my Father hath poured for me, shall I refuse to drink it? His obedience unto death, even the death of the cross, demonstrated his loyalty to the last degree and he received the high reward appropriated. "Him hath God also highly exalted and given a name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, both of things in heaven and things in earth."

Exalted to the right hand of Divine favor he waits only for the Father's time to take to himself his great power and reign (Revelation xi, 17). Meantime, in harmony with the Divine will, purposed before the foundation of the world, he acts as advocate for such as have the hearing ear and the obedient heart and will now respond to the special invitation of the Gospel Age. That call is to leave the world, its sins, its pleasures and its hopes, and to walk by faith in the exceeding great and precious promises of God — the things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man. These are the heavenly things promised them as the Bride and joint-heir with their Redeemer in his glorious Kingdom to come and its blessed work of uplifting Israel and the world.

We have before our minds the antitypical house of David, Messiah's kingly household, the royal priesthood Divinely prepared. As a Kingdom it will be at the top, above all the kingdoms of earth. Not only will this be true of spiritual Kingdom (invisible to men as the angels are invisible), but it will include also an earthly Kingdom composed of "Israelites indeed." At their head as princes in all the earth will stand the resurrected Ancient Worthies, perfected as men and samples of what all mankind, by obedience to the laws of the Kingdom, may attain to, with eternal life. These Ancient Worthies are enumerated in the Scriptures—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, the prophets, etc., and described by St. Paul in Hebrews xi, 38-40. To these belong the earthly promises of the Old Testament. They never heard of the heavenly or spiritual promises. Their loyalty will find its reward in the fact that they will come forth from the tomb no longer blemished and imperfect, but fully, completely restored to the perfection originally enjoyed by father Adam. Additionally these will have the special guidance and instruction of Messiah (Head and members) in all the affairs of mankind. These as the Master said, speaking of that time, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and the prophets in the Kingdom" (Luke xiii, 28).

God's Kingdom will be represented in the earth by Israel—especially by those ancient men of Israel, resurrected perfect, who will be the special appointees and representatives of the Messianic rule. As it is written, Instead of thy fathers (the ancient worthies) thou were styled "the fathers," as Jesus was styled the Son of Abraham and David) shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth (Psalm xlv, 16). These princes, acting under and continually in contact with the spiritual Kingdom and rulers styled in the Scriptures "the royal priesthood," will, of course, be so superior in their wisdom and power as to command the obedience of the whole earth. The nation of Israel, with whom they are related, would naturally respond more quickly than others to the New order of things, which will be just that for which they have been waiting and praying for more than thirty centuries.

In these words the Lord through the prophet assures us of the wonderful success which will attend the establishment of the New Empire of earth the dominion of the Prince of light, which will supersede the dominion of the Prince of darkness, when Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, that he may deceive the peoples no more. Messiah's Kingdom will be high above all other Kingdoms, not only in its grandeur, majesty and authority, but also in the lofty principles which it will represent. Thus it is written, "He shall lay righteousness to the line and justice to the plummet and the hail (Truth) shall sweep away the refuge of lies" (Isaiah xxviii, 17). Nevertheless, as the world shall come to appreciate the new order of things all nations shall flow unto it, flow up to it—contrary to the downwardness of fallen human nature. It will make manifest such wonderful rewards for righteousness and obedience to God and it will so make manifest the stripes that must attend all willful disobedience to the Divine arrangement that the Scripture will be fulfilled which declares that when the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness (Isaiah xxvi, 9).

Humanity for six thousand years has been learning "the exceeding sinfulness of sin," its downward tendency in every sense of the word. Every form of Government has been tried in an endeavor to secure the greatest amount of blessing. But the uniform results have been that those exalted to place and influence and power have proved themselves unequal to the opportunities and temptations of the positions and have abused them selfishly. Whoever is acquainted with history realizes the truthfulness of all this. If some of us have hoped that the general education of the masses and the general enlightenment of the race would abolish sin and selfishness and demonstrate the truthfulness of the Proverb, "Honesty is the best policy," we are willing to confess that this has been a mistake. We perceive that the greater the wisdom and intelligence granted to a selfish mind and heart the greater will be its opportunities for evil and incitement thereto.

As a consequence the world is losing confidence in itself. All, whether politicians or judges or governors, great or small, of one party or another, of one nationality or another—all are accused of being tarred with the same stick of selfishness. The Bible clearly indicates that this distrust is not without reason and that the great time of trouble soon to come upon every nation (Daniel xii, 1) will be the direct result of this loss of confidence. The Bible's description of the matter briefly summed up is, Every man's hand shall be against his neighbor (Zechariah viii, 10; xiv, 13). It will be after that great time of trouble shall have thoroughly sickened humanity as respects itself and any hopes it might have had of bringing about a Millennium by its own efforts—that God will manifest his Kingdom in the top of the mountains—higher than all other kingdoms every way, and all people shall flow toward it. As it is written, "The desire of all peoples shall come" (Haggai ii, 7).

This is described in the verse following our text which reads, "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, let us go up to the mountain (kingdom) of the Lord, to the house (temple) of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths, for out of Zion (the spiritual unseen Kingdom of Messiah) shall go forth the Law and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem (the seat of earth's Empire to be). And he shall judge among the nations (rewarding and punishing justly), and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." All Christians agree that these words apply to the Messiah's Kingdom. They tell us clearly and distinctly of how the judgments of the Lord will be abroad in the earth, causing wars to cease and the knowledge of the Lord to fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep (Isaiah xi, 9).

We have already noted that this prophecy belongs to natural Israel and not to spiritual Israel. As the first verse declares, it concerns Judah and Jerusalem. By the time this prophecy will have begun to be fulfilled, spiritual Israel will be beyond the vale. It is in full harmony with this that we read in the fifth verse, "O house of Jacob, Come ye and let us walk in the light of the Lord." This is particularly the time when this message to natural Israel should go forth. We understand the Scriptures to teach that during the next few years the Lord will have special dealings with Israel in connection with this call. He will [illegible] from the way of righteousness and the great privileges that are theirs as a people, because of Divine promises to their fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, etc. But only those who respond by turning to the light of God's Word to walk in it will be in the proper condition of heart and obedience to promptly get the blessing at the beginning of Messiah's reign. Those most prompt to respond will get the greater blessing.

Verses 8-10 portray some of the reasons why God's favor has been withdrawn for a time from natural Israel—aside from the fact that his special favor was for the time to be given to Spiritual Israel. Then follows a description of the time of trouble, in which present institutions will succumb, to be followed by Messiah's empire. Let us read some of these verses and note their applicability to our day and the correspondence between these statements and very similar pronouncements in the Book of Revelation, applicable also to the time in which we are living. We will quote and paraphrase from verse 11 to the end of the chapter.

The lofty looks of man shall be humbled and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. One of the greatest obstacles in the pathway of humanity, hindering approach to truth and righteousness, is pride. The Almighty God is not sufficiently reverenced. The very learned men of all our colleges seem more and more to doubt that there is a God and that the affairs of earth are subject to any other regulations than those of chance, except as the learned can regulate them. The time of trouble when the various theories of man will be tried and found wanting will demonstrate most thoroughly that the wisdom from above is neglected in favor of earthly wisdom. The Lord says in another place, the wisdom of their wise men shall perish and the understanding of their prudent men shall disappear.

For the day of the Lord of Hosts shall be heavy upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up, and he shall be brought low, and upon all the cedars of Lebanon that are high and lifted up (the ecclesiastically great) and upon all the oaks of Bashan (the politically strong); upon all the high mountains (the kingdoms of the world) and upon all the hills that are lifted up (the smaller princedoms); and upon every high tower and upon every fenced wall (representing human organizations for strength and protection) and upon all the ships of Tarshish (labor organizations) and upon all desirable prospects and ideals of earthly ambition, the arm of the Lord will be heavy. The result will be that the loftiness shall be humbled and the haughtiness shall be made low and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day; and the idols shall be utterly abolished. God must be first under the new order of things. No peace or blessing will otherwise result.

Those in distress and perplexity will in that time of trouble flee to the holes and the rocks and the caves of earth for fear. As Revelation (vi, 16) expresses it, they shall call to the rocks, "Fall on us and hide us from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne." We are not to understand this more literally than its context. It does not signify that people will be so foolish as to literally pray for rocks to fall upon them, when they could more easily destroy their lives in another way. The thought is the very contrary of this—that they desire protection, shielding, hiding, covering from the trouble of the coming day of the Lord. These shelters of the rocks and caves of the earth symbolically represent the attempted protection of human organizations — insurance companies, secret societies, etc. But none of these will be able to protect from the trouble which is coming—which will be world-wide and involve every earthly thing and interest, religious and secular, financial and political.

This will take place when the glory of the Lord and his Majesty are manifested in connection with his standing up to assume command of the world and when "He will shake terribly the earth (society), that everything contrary to righteousness and holiness may be uprooted and overthrown." St. Paul pictures this same time of trouble and declares that the only thing that will not be shaken will be whatever is in harmony with God's Kingdom of righteousness (Heb. xii, 26-29).

THE PILLAR OF LIGHT.

"He said it represented the effort of an uneducated man to make a speech. Every time his vocabulary gave out he lifted his voice to show he wasn't half through with his ideas."

"Oh," said Constance, "that is neither kind nor true, surely."

"Well," agreed Pyne, slowly, "that is the view a friend took of the remark. So he asked the professor if he had a nice agreeable sort of definition, all ready for use, of the ways Englishmen clipped their syllables. The other fellow allowed that he had not pondered on it. 'I guess,' said my friend, 'it represents the effort of an educated ass to talk English'"

Though the laugh was against them they were forced to snigger approval.

"I think," said Constance, "that our chief national failing is pomposity, and your story hits it off exactly. In one of our small Cornish towns we have a stout little Mayor who made money in cheese and bacon. He went to see the Paris Exhibition, and an Exeter man, meeting him unexpectedly at the foot of the Eiffel Tower, hailed him with delight. 'Hello, Mr. Mayor—' he began. 'Hush,' said the Mayor, glancing around mysteriously, 'I'm ere incog.'"

None who heard these light-hearted young people yelling with merriment would imagine that they had just dined off a piece of hard-baked bread made without yeast and washed down with water tasting of tar and turpentine.

"Now, Miss Enid, your turn," cried Pyne.

Here eyes danced mischeviously.

"Unfortunately, by the accident of birth, I am deprived of the sense of humour," she said.

"It seems to be in the family all right," he hazarded, looking at Constance.

"Alas!" said Enid, "I am an American."

"I'll smile now, if that is all," said Pyne.

"But, please, I am not joking a little bit. When you go ashore you will probably hear all about me, so I may as well take the wind out of the sails of gossip. I am a mere waif, who came sailing in out of the West one day in a little boat, which must have come from the New World as no one appeared to have lost either me or it in the Old. Dad picked us both up and adopted me."

Pyne did not know whether to take her seriously or not, until he sought confirmation in a pair of tranquil eyes which he gaze into at every opportunity.

"It is quite true," said Constance, gravely. "I suppose that the mysterious affinity between parents and long-lost children which exists in story-books is all nonsense in reality. No family could be more united and devoted to each other than we are, yet Enid is not my sister and my father is her's only by adoption. He found her, half dying, drifting past this very rock, and before he could reach her he fought and killed a dreadful shark. We are very proud of dad, Mr. Pyne. You see, he is our only relation. Enid knows neither her father nor mother, and my mother died when I was a baby."

"Great Scott!" cried Pyne.

He turned quickly towards the door. Mrs. Vansittart, very pale, with eyes that looked unnaturally large in the faint light, stood there. For an instant he was startled. He had not seen Mrs. Vansittart since they came to the rock, and he was shocked by the change in her appearance. He did not like her. His alert intelligence distrusted her. But it was not his business in life to select a wife for his uncle, as he put it, and he had always treated her with respectful politeness. Now, owing to some fleeting aspect which he could not account for, some vague resemblance to another which he did not remember having noticed before, he viewed her with a certain expectant curiosity that was equally unintelligible to him.

She held out a scrap of paper.

"Mr. Traill is here," she said quietly.

"Here!" he repeated, wondering what she meant, and perplexed by her icy, self-contained tone, whilst he thought it passing strange that she had no other greeting for him.

"Well," she said, "that is the best word I can find. He is near to us, as near as a steamer can bring him. Mr. Brand has received a signalled message; he wrote it out and sent it to me by a man. I inquired where you were, and was told you were engaged in the kitchen."

For some reason Mrs. Vansittart seemed to be greatly perturbed. Her presence put an end to the gaiety of the place quite effectually.

The young man took the paper in silence.

He read: "Dear Madam—a signal just received from the Falcon runs as follows: 'Mr. Cyrus J. Traill is on board and sends his love to Etta and Charlie. He will make every preparation for their comfort ashore and trusts they are bearing up well under inevitable hardships.' Yours faithfully, Stephen Brand."

Pyne strode to the door.

"I must see if I can't get Mr. Brand to answer the old boy," he cried. "Perhaps you have attended to that already."

She did not make way for him to pass.

"No," she said. "I came to seek to you on that account. If not too late, will you tell your uncle that I do not wish to delay a moment in Penzance. He will please me most by arranging for a special train to await our arrival at the station."

"What's the hurry?" he demanded.

"A woman's whim, if you like, but a fixed resolve, nevertheless."

"Will you travel in that rig-out?" he asked quizzically.

"It is an easy matter to call at a shop if we reach shore by daylight. Then I can purchase a cloak and hat to serve my needs. Otherwise, it is matterless how I am attired. Will you do this?"

"Why, certainly."

She gave a little gasp of relief. In another instant Pyne would have gone, but Enid, who happened to glance through the window which opened towards the northwest, detained him.

"There is no hurry now, for sure," she said. "The Falcon is half way to Carn du by this time. I do not suppose she will return until it is too dark to do more than signal important news very briefly."

"But this is important," cried Mrs. Vansittart, shrilly, "It is of the utmost importance to me."

"'Fraid it can't be helped ma'am," said Pyne, civilly. "Anyhow we're not ashore yet, and I can't see that any time will be wasted."

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Do you know who your next door neighbours are?

Have you ever done any little acts of kindness to them?

How perfectly absurd that must sound to my country and suburban readers. About like asking, "Do you eat three meals a day and go to bed at night?"

But you see those queries aren't meant for them at all, but for those unfortunate folk, the city dwellers, whose lack of neighbours always makes me think of the old couplet—

"Water, water everywhere; nor any drop to drink."

The absolutely heartless way in which folks in the city live for years, jammed together side by side, or more likely over and under each other, without taking the slightest interest in the sorrows and happinesses that transpire so close to their own, is perfectly extraordinary to me.

I was recently visiting a woman who lives in a huge apartment house in the city. She has an apartment on the third floor. We were climbing the stairs one day when I noticed a black streamer on the door of one of the apartments in the first floor.

"My dear, look," I cried; "someone is dead. Why, you didn't tell me anyone was ill."

"I didn't know it," answered my friend.

Later I found by inquiry that the crepe was for the mother of the family, that she had been ill for several weeks with typhoid fever and that she had three small children.

As far as I could find out, none of the other tenants had in any way interested themselves in their neighbour's trouble. Two other families in the same apartment, with whom my friend was acquainted, were, as surprised as she at the death in their midst.

Now I know that if that family had lived in the town where I live, or any town like it, all the neighbours for at least half a mile around would have known of its trouble, and would have tried to do something to help out.

They would have carried the delicacies of their table and garden to the sick mother. They would have helped amuse and take care of the children. They would have shared the doctor's words of encouragement with the father with a sympathy and interest that would have helped to make him feel less lonely.

And chief among those to try to do something kind, I know my city friend would have been, for she is a very kind and generous woman. It is only that the city's cruel and thoughtless habit of unneighbourliness has her, like all the rest, in its grip.

I know just exactly what the city dweller is going to answer to this arraignment.

She is going to say that in the city where people are constantly coming and going, and where there are so very many, it is impossible to make friends of all the people about you.

Granted, city dweller.

I'll go a step further and even admit that it would be undesirable, even if it were possible, to make FRIENDS of all the people about you. I don't believe in mere propinquity FRIENDSHIPS any more than you do.

But you can take a little interest in them, know a little about them, be ready to help them in trouble, treat them as if you were living among human beings like yourself and not among creatures of an alien race, can't you?

You can make neighbours of them, can't you?

And if you want a definition of that word or any further suggestion as to know how to be neighbourly, I refer you to a Source so great I need not name it, and to a definition that you have probably already read a dozen times.

Ruth Cameron

NORWOOD AND OMEMEE TENNIS PLAYERS WERE ENTERTAINED

Peterborough Players Won Majority of Games From the Visitors---Three Courts Were Used and Tea Was Served at the Golf Club Afterwards---An Enjoyable Occasion.

The Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association played the Omemee and Norwood Tennis Clubs, using simultaneously the Y.M.C.A., Bowling Club and Golf Club courts. After the down town players had finished they united at the Golf Club. A large and distinguished assembly of ladies and gentlemen enjoyed the many interesting and hard fought contests. Tea tables began to appear, spread on the lawns, about 5 o'clock, when little tete a tete parties from the gallery sat down. After all the matches were finished the gladiators of the clubs sat down together with some of their friends, to the number of 25, when Mrs. H. D. Burnett poured tea, which added much to the enjoyment of the afternoon. This part of the events was enjoyed to the full. Following this, bright speeches were made by Mr. F. D. Kerr, for Peterborough, Dr. Sutton for Omemee, Mr. Roxborough for Norwood, and Mr. Cluxton for the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association. Auld Lang Syne and cheers for the different clubs ended a delightful gathering. The games follow:

F. D. Kerr (Pet.) beat T. E. Finlay (Nor.)—6-3, 6-3.

H. D. Burnett (Pet.) beat W. Stevenson (Om.)—6-1, 6-1.

W. Landry, (Pet.) beat J. B. L. Grout, (Om.)—6-1, 6-2.

Dr. Sutton, (Nor.) beat S. E. M. Henderson, (Pet.)—3-6, 6-2, 6-2.

W. Richardson, (Pet.) beat Dr. Sutton (Om.)—6-0, 6-1.

W. Coleman (Pet.) beat Rev. Earle (Om.)—6-0, 6-1.

Dr. McPherson, (Pet.) beat J. E. Roxburgh (Nor.)—6-2, 6-3.

W. Coleman and W. Richardson, (Pet.) beat Dr. Sutton and Rev. Earle (Om.)—6-0, 6-1.

S. Hall and W. Landry, (Pet.) beat J. B. L. Grout and W. Stevenson, (Om.)—6-2, 6-1.

F. D. Kerr and H. D. Burnett, (Pet.) beat Dr. Sutton and T. Finlay (Nor.)—6-4, 7-5.

Mr. W. Richardson and Miss G. Hall, (Pet.) beat Mr. T. Finlay and Miss Vera Finlay (Nor.)—7-5, 0-6, 6-2.

Mr. Henderson and Miss M. Burnett (Pet.) beat Dr. Sutton and Miss Burns (Om.)—6-2, 6-2.

SALVATION ARMY TO HOLD HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL

The Harvest Thanksgiving services, in connection with the Salvation Army, will be held in the Temple, Simcoe street, on Saturday, Sunday and Monday next, Sept. 24, 25, and 26. The hall will be tastefully decorated with grain, flowers, fruit, etc. and appropriate music will be supplied by the Siver Band, the songsters, and the children of the Sunday School. The public are cordially invited.

In connection with these services, the annual appeal is being made to the friends and sympathizers of the Army, for thankofferings in aid of special funds, established for the benefit of officers in Canada, during times of illness, bereavement, or special need. There are in this country about 1,000 men and women, who have given up their secular callings—and, in many cases, lucrative positions—and who, without any guarantee of salary, are devoting their lives to the work of uplifting and helping fallen mankind. Out of the mere pittance received by hundreds of these officers it is impossible to make any provision against the day of adversity, and they are, therefore, dependent to a very great degree, upon the assistance of the friends, who, while unable to give their lives, are anxious to share in this work, by giving of their means. Without the practical help of these friends it would be impossible to maintain the work of this character of the Salvation Army. We bespeak a hearty response to this appeal in Peterborough.

On Monday evening, 26th inst., a harvest sale will be held in the Temple, in aid of the above funds, and donations of groceries, tea, vegetables, fruit, household requisites, and saleable goods of all kinds will be most acceptable. The hall will be open next Saturday and Monday, to receive donations from their friends, or a telephone message ('Phone 440) or a post card, addressed to Ensign Merrett, 304 Margaret avenue, will bring a messenger to any address for same.

THE EXAMINER WANT ADS. SCORE ANOTHER TRIUMPH

Just another little reminder of the efficiency of the Examiner Want Ad. Column.

On Saturday Mrs. Duncan Mather, of Keene, lost a valuable watch. Convinced that her only chance to recover her property was to advertize in the Examiner, she inserted a notice in the Want Column at 3.30 o'clock, on Saturday afternoon. Fifteen minutes after the Examiner was on the street a boy brought the lost watch to the Examiner office. He had been waiting for the paper to see if the "times" would be advertised, and returned it at once upon seeing the advertisement. A 10c. ad. has resulted in Mrs. Mather recovering a much-prized watch.

If Mrs. Barlow, who advertised in the Examiner for a pair of spectacles, which she lost, will call at this office, she will recover her property.

Chief Howard Will Tell the Council About Trip to Syracuse—Interesting Photographs

Chief Howard of the Fire Department, has completed his report of the Fire Engineers' Convention held in New York recently. The official document has been mailed to the Fire, Water and Light committee, and when presented will be a useful paper.

The Chief also has some pictures which were taken at the convention. He has one of all the chiefs of Ontario, in a group, and one of the whole assembly of chiefs. These pictures are on exhibition at the fire hall, and the firemen are always pleased to show them, as well as other objects of interest, to any visitors who wish to call at the fire hall.

Face was restored to shape, power of speech returned, and he gained in weight. Says he would not return to former condition for all the gold in the country

MUSIC AND DRAMA

JOE MARKS COMPANY.

The old favourite stock attraction, the Joe Marks Company, completed their Peterborough engagement at the Grand on Saturday with a most successful presentation of the comedy drama "A Yankee in Ireland." The drawing ability of these popular players was evidenced by the fact that every seat was sold for their last appearance, and the company got a great reception from the crowded house. Their Saturday night vehicle was one that allowed plenty of opportunity for clean-cut comedy, and the many funny situations kept the audience in a gale of laughter throughout. Frank Byron in the title role carried off the chief honours. Clever specialties were sandwiched in between the acts and were a pleasing feature of the bill, being fully up to the Marks standard of excellence. The Joe Marks company may play a return engagement here later on in the season, in which event they are sure of doing capacity business.

JUBILEE SINGERS

The A.Y.P.A. of St. Luke's church have made arrangements with the Canadian Jubilee Singers to give an entertainment on Monday, Oct. 3, in the Conservatory of Music Hall. The Jubilee Singers come highly recommended. The following is one among many appreciative references made:

Dorchester, Me.

The Canadian Jubilee Singers, under the auspices of the Church of England here, were most heartily received by an enthusiastic audience last evening. The repeated encores showed the appreciation in which the numbers were received. A most thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent and wholesome entertainment given, and I have pleasure in recommending them to any and all.

H. W. PALMER,
Sr. Church Warden.

THEY CAN'T FORGIVE CANADA

Already it has been pretty well demonstrated that certain railways of the North West are fighting desperately to stop the flow of immigration to the Canadian West. In fact, this campaign has extended to the South Western Railways as well. For instance the Texas and Pacific Quarterly, rather a pretentious magazine, published by that Company, and issued at Dallas, Texas, opens its July number with an uplift article, which includes a quotation from Longfellow's "Evangeline":

"All the year round the orange groves are in blossom and grass grows
More in a single night than a whole
Canadian summer."

Meaning, no doubt, the grass. Not the Canadian summer.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

Mr. Kent of Ottawa, has purchased the drug business of Mr. H. S. Macdonald, at the corner of George and Hunter streets, and will take charge at an early date. Mr. Kent has had a wide experience in the drug business, and as a dispensing chemist.

EXPERTS ON THE WEST

A party of American agricultural editors have been touring Western Canada with Herbert Vanderhoof of the "Canada West" magazine. At Edmonton the visitors were received by President Hays of the Grand Trunk, who proceeded to interview them. They told Mr. Hays that they had enjoyed the trip over the Grand Trunk Pacific, which traversed a fine district, showing good crops of wheat, oats and hay in Alberta. In Saskatchewan the wheat was good and oats fair, with every evidence of prosperity in the new towns. They spoke with enthusiasm of the excellent character of the road. Mr. Hays expressed his pleasure at meeting them, and asked them to come again. Arriving at Winnipeg they expressed themselves to the representatives of the press most enthusiastically. Elmer T. Critchfield, of Chicago, said: "I "was the only member of our party, "who had seen Western Canada. I "had been away four years and was "amazed at the growth of the towns "and cities, especially of Edmonton, "Prince Albert, and Saskatoon. West-"ern Canada is all right, and we "found the farmers everywhere thor-"oughly satisfied.

Clarence D. Strow, Managing Editor of "Farm Life," and the "National Fruit Grower and Gardener," Chicago: "Practically everywhere we went we found fine crops and thoroughly satisfied farmers."

A. W. Fulton, editor of "New England Homestead and American Agriculturist," said: "The trip has been "a revelation and an education. I "have read all that ever came my "way about Western Canada, but "must admit frankly that I was ut-"terly unprepared for what I saw. I "am now armed to speak from first-"hand experience in answering the "great number of questions that are "constantly asked down my way "about actual conditions in the Can-"adian West. I have nothing but "good to report, and particularly as "to the success of the American set-"tlers in every part of the West that "we have traversed."

Frank C. Moorehead of the "Iowa Homestead," "Wisconsin Farmer," "Farmer and Stockman," Desmoines, Iowa, was equally enthusiastic: "I have never seen finer crops anywhere. "I was particularly interested in the "Melfort district, where several hun-"dred Iowa farmers have settled. "Without exception they have been "successful, and everyone of them is "thoroughly satisfied. I can only "have one answer to anyone inquir-"ing about Canada and you know "what the answer is."

J. B. Montgomery, editor of the "Farmer Magazine" and "Rural Weekly," Omaha, Nebraska, said: "The Americans are not leaving Can-"ada. They are coming, and more than ever will come."

As a rule they are good farmers, which is one of the reasons for their invariable success. This has been a season "of seasons to show up bad "farming, and for that reason, the in-"variable conditions in certain sec-"tions are by no means an unmixed "evil. Thousands of farmers have "learend a lesson by which they will "benefit in future."

Mr. Parke West, Land Department, Chicago Record-Herald," declared with enthusiasm: "Fine crops and "prosperous, satisfied farmers tell the "story why there is no truth in re-"ports of American settlers leaving "the country. We shall all have the "best of reports to make to all in-"quiries, and our paper alone has "hundreds of them at a time."

"THE BOHEMIAN GIRL" IS THE FAVOURITE

Received the Largest Number of Votes From Music Lovers Here in the Aborn Voting Test

"The Bohemian Girl," the favourite received the largest number of votes from music lovers here in the Aborn Voting test.

Milton and Sargent Aborn, managing directors of the Aborn English Grand Opera Company, which is to come to the Grand Opera House, for one performance, Wednesday, Sept. 28th, have closed the polls on the popular voting test to decide what opera to give, and find that "The Bohemian Girl," by Balfe, is the favourite here. Of the three hundred cards sent to local theatregoers, about seventy per cent. have been returned to the New York offices of the Aborn Company, a remarkably large proportion, indicating a wide interest in English grand opera here.

THE PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL IS OVER WAS THE MOST SUCCESSFUL ON RECORD

Another Big Crowd Was Present Saturday---Much in Advance of the Last Day Last Year and a Big Surplus is Assured---Agitation on Foot to Purchase the Grounds Result of Saturday's Horse Races.

Peterborough's big Exhibition for 1910 is over as far as the public is concerned.

The Fair closed in a blaze of glory Saturday with another huge attendance, the crowd as prophesied being a record breaker for the last day of the Exhibition. The gate receipts for the afternoon were over $900, and the crowd on the ground conservatively estimated at between 6,000 and 7,000, a magnificent assembly for winding up day.

That the Exhibition has been the most successful on record is admitted on all sides. Not a complaint has been heard in regard either to the programme or the manner in which the Exhibition was conducted, while the attendance was far in advance of any other year. Last season's crowd was about the biggest hitherto, but the Fair of 1910 showed a gain of well over 40 per cent of 1909. It is estimated that the total crowd during the Exhibition just closed was at least 21,000 or 22,000. Last year the total was in the neighbourhood of 12,500. The receipts from tickets alone for 1910 were $3,100, so that a very substantial surplus is assured after all are paid. The gain over last year will be at least $600. The phenomenal success scored has aroused the greatest enthusiasm among the citizens and already an agitation is being set on foot to purchase the grounds, so that suitable buildings and grand stand may be erected. If this is carried out and from the present feeling it undoubtedly will be, Peterborough will have an Exhibition worthy of the importance of this city and one of which citizens may feel justly proud. A public meeting will in all probability be held this week to discuss the scheme and the directors of the Exhibition will lose no time in getting to work upon the proposal.

Saturday's Programme.

Saturday afternoon's programme was in its main features about the same as that offered on the previous day and the bill was long and varied enough to keep the crowd in a happy mood all afternoon. The grandstand was crowded during the afternoon. The horse races were again a feature and another splendid list of speeding events was offered. Dr. Sinclair as starter, gave splendid satisfaction and handled the races in masterly fashion, with the result that the bill was run off without a hitch. The programme was made up of the free-for-all, 2.30 class, trot or pace, and mile running, the latter best two out of three heats.

The Free-for-All.

Jennie Price, a chestnut mare owned by R. McGirr, of Meaford, showed her heels to the field in the free-for-all and carried off the big end of the $200 purse in straight heats, although the race was an interesting one. Jennie Price showed a world of speed and stepped the first heat in 2.16 1-4, the fastest mile during the Exhibition. The other starters in the free-for-all were Collingwood Rooker, owned by R. Whitton, Peterborough, the Toronto gelding Planet owned and driven by J. McDowell and Dr. Johnston's Harry Direct.

Jennie Price had too much speed for her field and won handily without much trouble. The chief interest was in the battle for second money between Collingwood Rooker and Planet, the local horse stalling off the Toronto campaigner after several hard battles. In the first heat Jennie Price lead all the way and Collingwood Rooker had the place by a good margin, with Planet third. Harry Direct had not the class and was never a contender throughout the race.

The second heat, however, saw a better race for the place. Collingwood Rooker broke badly in the first quarter and trailed in his field, which Harry Direct paced for the first half. Jennie Price shot to the front end and pulled Planet through after her. It looked like the Toronto horse for second place, but Collingwood Rooker made his drive down the back stretch and walked into second place.

The third heat was easy for Jennie Price, but Collingwood Rooker and Planet had a ding-dong battle that lasted until the wire. Coming into the stretch the McDowell horse had a length to the good but in a whipping finish Rooker came through and won by a scant head. It was one of the most exciting finishes of the day. Following is the summary:

Jennie Price, R. McGirr, Meaford ..... 1 1 1
Collingwood Rooker, R. Whitton, Peterborough ..... 2 2 2
Planet, J. McDowell, Toronto. 3 3 3
Harry Direct, Dr. Johnston, Peterborough ..... 4 4 4
Time—2.16 1-4, 2.20 1-4, 2.21 3-4.

The 2.30 Class.

There were three starters in the 2.30 class, Ned Wilkes, owned by W. A. Fanning, Lindsay, Lulu Chimes, Thos. McIvor, Peterbrough, and Harry Mack, D. McMahon, Reaboro. It was a nice race all the way, although captured in straight heats by Harry Mack, reversing the race of the day before, when the Reaboro horse, after winning two heats went down before Lulu Chimes.

Ned Wilkes, the green trotter owned by Fanning, of Lindsay, showed splendid speed and looked almost good enough to win. Lulu Chimes made the running the first speed for the first half, but was challenged and passed without much trouble by Harry Mack and then by Ned Wilkes. The finish was good.

Ned Wilkes looked like a winner of the second heat until the stretch. The Lindsay trotter showed in front at the wire and gave signs of staying there. He rounded into the stretch in front but Harry Mack was whipped through and won by a small margin. Lulu Chimes was again third. When Harry Mack went off his feet in the first quarter of the third heat and lost thirty yards, it looked like another heat to settle matters. Ned Wilkes was well out in front and trotting with machine like accuracy. However, going down the back stretch for the same time, the Reaboro horse made his drive and rapidly overhauled the pair in front. He was forced to go way round on the outside in turning into the stretch but he was there with the speed stuff and came home a winner by half a length. Ned Wilkes was content with second. The summary:

Harry Mack, D. McMahon, Reaboro ..... 1 1 1
Ned Wilkes, W. A. Fanning, Lindsay ..... 2 2 2
Lulu Chimes, Thos McIvor, Peterborough ..... 3 3 3
Time—2.24 1-4, 2.24 1-2, 2.25.

The Running Race.

The mile running race in two heats was one of the most amusing events of the Exhibition. There were starters consisting of two runners and two rocking horses, and the result was two big races in one. The entries were Cobourg Maid and Princess of India, both owned by J. McIntosh, of Cobourg, the battle being between these two stable mates and Right of Way owned by Harry Teeney and Baltimore Belle, owned by Jas. Beattie. The only class to the last pair was in their names. They had a gait like the coaster dips and about as much speed as a wagon load of cobble stones on a heavy road. The Cobourg mares were cleverly ridden and provided an interesting battle for first place, Cobourg Maid winning both by small margins, but the chief interest was in the performance of the second division. Right of Way was left at the post in the first heat and the Cobourg pair had put a quarter of a mile behind them before he could be persisted to get going. When he broke loose, however, his action was a treat. Baltimore Belle also had a style peculiar to her own and the two were bobbing around on the last half when the winning pair had their blankets on. Their riders added to the gaiety of the occasion by the energetic way in which they wielded the gad. The summary:

Cobourg Maid, J. McIntosh, Cobourg ..... 1 1
Princess of India, J. McIntosh, Cobourg ..... 2 2 2
Right of Way, H. Teeney ..4 3
Baltimore Belle, Jas. Beattie.3 4
Time—1.57, 1.58.

Other features of the afternoon were the clever acts of the Malvern Troupe and the performance of the Japanese Troupe of acrobats. These two attractions were undoubtedly the best vaudeville features the Peterborough Industrial has yet presented.

An interesting event was the parade before the grand stand of the prize winning horses. First, all the carriage classes were shown and then came a procession of the lead horses. The winners in their different classes were loudly applauded as they came before the grand stand.

The 57th Regimental Band provided a choice programme during the afternoon.

Saturday's programme included a soccer game for the R. R. Hall championship of Peterborough County. Havelock, the last holders of the trophy, did not defend it and the Canadian General Electric Company's team tnd the St. James' Methodist church eleven played off for the cup, the Electricians winning by 3 to 0. A full report of the match will be found in another column.

NO DEVELOPMENT IN BELMONT MYSTERY

and on both wrists there were indentations which seemed to indicate that her assailant had attempted to bind her arms or tie her up. At the post-mortem examination, conducted by Dr. Holdcroft, of Havelock, and Dr. Ford, of Norwood, however, it was found that none of the injuries were serious enough to have caused death, while there were distinct evidences that the poor woman had succumbed to shock caused by fright.

Death Caused by Shock.

To use the words of Dr. Kindred, the Coroner, "it was literally a case of the victim being scared to death," and this view was corroborated by Dr. Holdcroft, who assured a reporter that he was satisfied that shock, and not the injuries sustained, was the cause of death. While clear and positive on this point, the doctors and police officers engaged on the case have as yet no answer to the question, "Who was the assailant?" Many theories have been propounded, and the people of Havelock have their own opinions as to who caused Mrs. Deline's death, but up till to-night the authorities had utterly failed to obtain the slightest evidence that would justify an arrest, though the reporter has reason to believe that the trial has been by no means abandoned.

Husband Gave the Alarm.

He it was who gave the first intimation that anything was wrong. Mrs. Samuel Newell, who lives about three-quarters of a mile from the Deline home, stated that about 9.55 o'clock on Thursday night she was called out of bed by Deline, who was sobbing, "My wife is dead," "My wife is dead." Being alone at the time Mrs. Newell says she was afraid to go to the Deline house, so, sending Deline to seek assistance from Mr. Robert Buchanan, whose farm is some distance to the east, she proceeded to the home of Matthew Lyttle and thence to Mr. McMillan's farm, telling what had happened. Accompanied by Mrs. Lyttle and the McMillans, she then hurried to the Deline home, where Mrs. Deline was found lying on the floor of the kitchen, with her head to the door leading out into the yard, her arms at her side, her head turned over, one leg drawn up and the other stretched out at an angle, and her hair mussed. Her only covering was a gown-shaped dress made of flannelette, and she was without shoes or stockings, the appearance of her feet indicating that she had been working outside with them uncovered.

Children Were Asleep.

Supper dishes were on the table, with some potato peelings and eggshells, the remains apparently of a meal not long finished. In the adjoining room the two children were asleep the boy, who is the elder, being on the couch, while the baby girl, born in June last, lay in bed.

The question of time is rather indefinite, however, as Deline, when questioned at his house, Saturday, said he could not exactly remember when he left Buchanan's farm. Beyond a possible discrepancy in the time, and the other circumstances referred to, the reporter was unable to find any evidence to justify the suspicions entertained regarding the husband. His story, told yesterday, in simple language and with considerable emotion, was that on Thursday morning, shortly after 5 o'clock, he left the house to go to Mr. James Buchanan's farm to work, his wife and two children remaining in bed. "I do not remember when I left the farm to go home at night," he said, "but it must have been between 8 and 9 o'clock. On approaching the house I noticed that the door of the chicken coop, which my wife usually closed before darkness set in, was open, and, thinking she might be about, I called her name, but got no answer. The door of an adjoining outhouse was also open, and after closing it I went into the house. Going into the room I lit the lamp, and found the two children asleep, one on the couch, the other in bed. I again called to my wife—still no answer. Then I proceeded to the kitchen, where I found her lying dead on the floor. I was so upset I could not examine her. I could see she was dead, and I at once grabbed my hat and ran to Sam Newell's for assistance." In regard also to his statements as to his not being surprised if he should find his wife dead, it is said by a number of people that Mrs. Deline frequently complained of pains in the head and the heart, and took medicine for them.

Husband Affected.

While telling this story Deline cried, and seemed genuinely affected, moaning "My poor wife" and "My poor children' 'in turn. "We never had a word," he added, "and it seems so hard that she should have been taken away just when we were getting settled down, and leaving me with the children, too." It should be stated that the Delines were in very poor circumstances, their home being of the most primitive kind. The house, a four-roomed frame building, occupies an isolated position, situated in a rough clearing about three-quarters of a mile distant from the road. The family came from Madoc toynship, near Bannockburn about a year ago, and a pathetic feature of the tragedy is the fact that, like her husband, Mrs. Deline was what a neighbour described as 'simple-minded." Of dark complexion, the victim had a comely appearance, and was well liked by all who knew her.

BLACK-LISTER WAS FINED

Another "blacklister" named Wm. Kelly, came up before Magistrate Dumble this morning in the Police Court. He had the misfortune to hang around the Review building on Saturday night until one of the reporters had cause to butt in, and the result is as above stated. He could not pay the fine of $10, so he was sent up to the "hill" for a week or so to reform.

Peterborough Boy With Queen's Own Tells Of Their Reception In England

An Interesting Letter From Mr. Walford Hatton, Son of Mr. G. W. Hatton.

SOME EXPERIENCES

The interest, both in Canada and "At Home" in the visit of the Queen's Own to England, is especially shared by Peterborough from the fact that five Peterborough boys are with the invading regiment which appears to be taking ground close to John Bull's lusty old heart. These are Mr. Walford Hatton, son of Mr. G. W. Hatton; Mr. Holden Blackwell, son of Mr. Wm. Blackwell; Mr. Arthur Wood, son of Mr. R. E. Wood; Mr. Wilfrid Huycke, son of His Honour Judge Huycke, and Mr. Herbert Routley, son of Mr. C. B. Routley. Mr. Hatton who by the way is a sergeant in the 57th, writes, as becomes a dutiful son, drum-head letters to his father that is, letters written on the march, on the back of a knapsack, or other improvised desk. These letter naturally familiar, and from the circumstances, sketchy in style, are very readable, and as first-hand impressions jotted down at the seat of war, give one a better idea of the conditions than the writing of professional correspondents, padded and polished for publication. Below is a letter written from Aldershot, which will be read with interest:

Wesleyan Soldiers' Home, Aldershot Command and Grosvenor Road Brotherhood, Aug. 29th.

Dear Father,—Am writing on the second day at above station. It rained all last night and until about 5 p.m. to-day. We drilled without coats this a.m. and got damp. Our great coats were soaked the night before on duty, and after. This p.m. we went for about a six mile route march, wearing our great coats, it being raining off and on, hard. The meals are certainly first-class. They carve the roasts before our eyes, and the jam is not the turnip and hayseed furnished in some of the boarding joints in Toronto and elsewhere in Canada. I got fine and fat on the boat, and if the grub and easy time keeps up will certainly arrive home in great condition. We are to have permanent passes issued to us and in addition, every man is allowed to have an afternoon off to visit London or go where he likes, once a week. To-night we had free passes issued to us for the roller rink here, and the theatre is to give us a night on Wednesday. We are certainly in common parlance, the "candy kids" here, and we meet people who are not at all like the English in Canada, or perhaps meeting them here has something to do with it. We are having such an experience, that I can hardly begin to write about it, and am sure to miss about three-quarters, so will not try at this time. Had a fine time on the steamer up to Friday, the day before we landed, when the sea went up about twenty feet, and as we were taking it on the slant, our fellows soon felt pretty rocky and nearly all had an attack of mal de mer badly. I was pretty well frightened myself, but managed to keep my own, and we were all glad to land. We were a couple of hours late in landing, and a huge crowd met the ship, Crippen being the main attraction, I think. Our march through Liverpool was pretty fierce, kit and all., with our fellows still feeling their sea legs wobbly and being more or less weak. The run through England almost beggars description, after our own wild and unkept country, even the trunks of the trees here being green all over, if not solitary. The boys scatter everywhere when they get th chance, and are seeing much of interest, especially those who have friends, though the glad hand and open door meet nearly all of us anyway. This is only the evening of our second day here, not counting Sunday, when we had a royal reception at Aldershot, thousands cheering and almost kissing the boys as they passed through the flag decked streets. Some of them were much embarassed, even if they did not blush. Then the soldiers were down, though not in regiments, their bands played us into camp, by the light of several search lights. Our camp is looking down on a fine monument to the Duke of Wellington, and the camp is well laid out, floor boards, straw mattresses, gaood ney blankets, though the ground between the tents is very mussy, owing to rain and the continuous tramping. We all feel more or less damp, but certainly not miserable. Everybody we meet wants to stop and talk to us, nearly got in trouble on Sunday talking to a man and his wife while on sentry-go, as I stopped at the end of my beat. They know more of Canada than we do of England; indeed, nearly all I have met have crossed and spent some time there. Went to church near our camp Sunday night, and the walls were covered with tablets, erected to soldiers who died in action, while there were nearly a dozen flags, all shot to pieces, placed in the sanctuary. They value all these all the more, as the new regulations do away with colours, at least in action. We stayed after service, about a dozen of us, and looked the church over and spoke to the rector.

Well, this all I can think of now.

Another Election

Pageants Are the Death of Republican Spirit In England, Says Expert, and Liberals Are Anxious to Get the Veto Question Settled Before the Outburst of Loyalty Next June When the King Is Crowned.

London, Sept. 19.—An eminent Unionist organizer has expressed the conviction that general election will be held in January, in consequence of the failure of the veto conference. His main ground for this opinion is the effect of the coronation pageantry in stimulating loyalty. The Republican movement in England has collapsed, since Queen Victoria's jubilee, and King Edward's coronation pageants have popularized monarchy and impaired the resources of democracy, and this tendency will be strengthened by the spectacles and revels of next year.

So well is this truth understood on the Liberal side that the best organizers agree that the veto question must be taken up early in the year or dropped altogether. If the Government attempts to continue the present armistice and to defer an appeal to the country until the autumn of next year it will find itself without an issue of paramount importance, and will be overwhelmed by the swelling tide of loyal enthusiasm for the crown and the Empire. This is the opinion of an expert politician, and it is confirmed by evidences of the anxiety of both Nationalist and Labor leaders to hasten the elections. The departure of John Redmond and three associates for American and Canadian bases of supplies indicates an urgent necessity for filling the war chest and being prepared for a crisis at the end of the year.

The labor leaders at the Trade Union Congress have been even more explicit in forecasting a general election in January and a close coalition with Radicalism for legalizing political levies. The pressure of the extremists is increasing for fighting out the constitutional issue instead of compromising it by secret bargaining, and the free traders have persuaded themselves that it will be easier to beat the tariff reformers before than after the coronation. The Unionists are expecting a failure of the conference, and have already begun to canvass in the small towns, where vans are covered with posters, heavily stocked with leaflets and equipped with gramophones and magic lanterns.

Lord Rosebery is expected to play an important part in the political crisis, since his resolutions dealing with the reform of the Lords will have precedence over the veto resolutions. If the conference breaks down, the veto resolutions cannot be blocked, and if the Prime Minister favors an early appeal to the country he may obtain in this way a release from an intolerable situation, in which Messrs O'Connor and Shackleton are constantly threatening the Ministry with desertion and defeat unless their demands are complied with.

Section Practically Completed.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—Hon. George Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, came to the city on Saturday in connection with the coming transfer of the section of the Transcontinental from Superior Junction to Winnipeg. J. D. McArthur, the contractor, was also here, although very little was done, owing to the absence of Mr. Hays in Chicago.

The Minister said, however, that the section, except the completion of a few stations, had practically been completed, and that the company desired to take over the road as early as possible, as they wanted to get all the grain possible over the railway.

Hon. Mr. Graham was recently over this part of the Transcontinental and he pronounces it a very superior piece of railway.

Had to Have Their Smokes.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The smokers' strike is petering out. When the Minister of Finance raised tobacco prices three months ago he expected an additional monthly profit of $300,000. The first month showed a deficit of that amount. The second month showed a deficit of $180,000.

By the third month the smokers had used up all the stores they had laid in before the advance in prices. Others got tired of smoking the cheaper brands of cigars and cigarettes and an attempt to substitute the pipe for cigars came to nothing.

Those who had diminished or abandoned smoking weakened in their resolution and the month of August shows an increase of $200,000.

Stoned Non-union Boarding House.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 19.—The injunction granted two weeks ago upon the application of the Columbus Railway & Light Co. against the striking carmen, was continued indefinitely on Saturday, upon the argument of counsel for both the company and the men. The police were informed that Miles Hysell's boarding-house, where a number of non-union street carmen board, was bombarded with stones early Saturday morning. One brick fell on a bed in which a young women was sleeping.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

William Yates was drowned by his canoe upsetting at London, Ont.

The tariff question is likely to cause a split in the British Unionist party.

A petition asking for the dissolution of the Sugar Trust will be filed at New York this week.

Thirteen balloons left Indianapolis Saturday afternoon in an endurance and distance test.

Tony Toris, Italian, shot and seriously wounded Crosenzo Anitone, at Cobourg. He was arrested.

F. W. Nichol of Westminster Township was kicked by a colt a week ago and died from his injuries.

Two workmen named Hodgens and Bathgate were killed by an explosion in the C.N.R. construction camp near Calgary.

Bishop DuMoulin, Bishop Farthing and Bishop Worrell spoke at the closing meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew at Montreal.

H. Brown was killed and A. Savelberg seriously injured by their rig being struck by a train at a crossing near Hitchcock, Sask.

James Dykeman, aged 30, fell from a third-storey window in Toronto, and was instantly killed. He had been sleeping close to the open window.

Ald. Robertson, police inspector, of Winnipeg, and formerly a well-known resident of Toronto, shot and killed himself in a train from Ottawa, nearing Toronto.

The purchase of the Northern Gravel road by the Oxford committee was completed before the county solicitor saw the papers, and it turns out that the title is worthless.

"I am profoundly touched by the testimonials of respect and veneration shown me as the representative of his holiness the Pope," says Cardinal Vannutelli, in a letter of thanks to Mayor Guerin of Montreal.

The Montreal Herald (Liberal) in an open letter to Premier Whitney, tells him that he has "fallen into a trap set for your feet by the Conservative party of England, which is trying to make the world believe that true imperialism is wrapped within its tariff reform policy."

Making Amends.

Managua, Nicaragua, Sept. 19.—The new municipality of Granada, which was established May 15, has passed an act ordering that the bodies of the Americans, Cannon and Grace, executed by order of ex-President Zelaya, be exhumed for burial at Granada with national honors. A marble monument will be erected to them. If the families desire, the bodies will be sent to the United States.

A decree was published Saturday outlining the program for the government of the country until the constituent assembly formulates the new constitution. The program includes a complete change in the present judiciary, and provides for the security of property and individuals, the inviolability of the domicile and epistolary and telegraphic correspondence, freedom of worship and speeches, freedom of the press and trial by jury, and the abolition of capital punishment and torture.

Jealousy the Cause.

Vancouver, Sept. 19.—Jealousy between two rival trappers was responsible for a cold-blooded murder in the north, news of which reached Vancouver Saturday, when Constable Minty of Rock Bay brought down Donald MacDonald, a Salmon River rancher and trapper, and the body of his neighbor, Frank Savage, shot by MacDonald Sept. 14, during a quarrel.

A charge was laid against McDonald for having beaver skins illegally in his possession, and Savage was sworn in as special constable to execute a search warrant at the trapper's home. MacDonald resisted execution, and Savage called in the aid of another rancher, P. Cushman. As the two special officers came out of MacDonald's hut, after making their search, the latter shot Savage through the breast, killing him instantly. He gave himself up to the provincial police.

Chicago Second City In the U.S.

Washington, Sept. 19.—The population of Chicago as announced by the United States census bureau Saturday is 2,185,283, an increase of 486,708, or 28.7 per cent., as compared with 1,698,575 in 1900.

This announcement leaves Chicago ranking in population as the second city of the United States, and the fourth in the world. Chicago has almost doubled its population since 1890, when the figures were 1,099,850.

Amazing In Tolerance.

Winnipeg, Sept. 19.—Rev. Dr. Hanson of Belfast, Ireland, at the evening Anglican Alliance meeting in the Walker Theatre here yesterday afternoon, said that the intolerance expressed in the recent speech delivered by the Roman Catholic archbishop of Montreal was amazing in this enlightened century. Rev. Dr. Hanson's remarks were loudly applauded by those present.

Turkey and Roumania Allied.

Paris, Sept. 19.—The Temps confirms the report that Turkey and Roumania have entered into a military alliance, and say that the convention indicates Turkey's rapprochement with the powers in the triple alliance.

Fatal Car Collision.

Union City, Ind., Sept. 19.—Two men were killed and thirteen persons injured when two traction cars met in a head-on collision here Saturday night.

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of women is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

Larsen Makes Trip

Just After Getting Past the Whirlpool Boat's Motive Power Ceases and the Navigator Is Sport of the Waves—He Is Thrown Up Into the Air Many Times and Is Once Overturned, Injuring His Leg.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 19.—It was not five minutes after he had told a party of newspaper men that he would not make the trip that Capt. Klaus Larsen of Cleveland, Ohio, suddenly changed his mind yesterday afternoon and successfully negotiated the five miles of water between the Maid of the Mist landing and a point a mile and a half above Lewiston.

Larsen's motor boat, the Ferro, became disabled about an hour before he was scheduled to make the trip. He tied up at the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canadian side and attempted to get his engine going, without success. About 3 o'clock he announced that he would not make the trip, and thousands were disappointed. Then an expert worked at the engine for over an hour before he got it running. Larsen had given it to much oil.

When Larsen found that his boat would run, he suddenly announced that he would make the trip. Pulling off his coat and handing his wallet to someone ashore, he started his little craft out into midstream. He stood erect in the cockpit, with the canvas covering tied securely about his body, just above the waist, leaving his arms free outside the boat. This prevented his getting at his engine, and the machinery again stood still just after the Ferro had successfully passed the whirlpool.

Larsen kept in midstream until he neared the head of the rapids. Then he went in towards the Canadian shore. Most of the rocks in the rapids are near the American shore.

As the Ferro struck the rapids, great waves tossed her clear of the water with as much ease as they would have buffeted about a huge cork. The little craft battled manfully with the seething, tossing waters, at times rearing up and taking a leap, after the manner of a racing auto on an ordinary country road, only more pronounced in her movements into the air. Ten feet leaps into space were taken so many times that Larsen was unable to enumerate them after the trip.

In passing the whirlpool, which was reached in less than three minutes, the Ferro went in towards the American shore, cutting across the eastern corner of the pool. She experienced no difficulty in getting past this treacherous piece of water, but had hardly negotiated the feat when the engine stopped.

"It's the luckiest thing that happened on the trip, that the engine held out until I got past the pool. If it hadn't, I would not be here now, I think," said Larsen after he left the boat.

Three minutes after the engine stopped the Ferro struck a big wave that completely overturned the craft in just about the Devil's Pool. She righted herself with no difficulty. It was here that her intrepid navigator injured his leg. He said it all happened so quickly that he had no time to think.

From now on Larsen was the plaything of the mighty river, unable to hold the course, the boat swinging from one side to another. After getting through the Devil's Hole, the Ferro swung toward the rocks on the American side of the river, about a mile and a half above Lewiston, rolled over one boulder and went fast between two others. There Larsen stayed for five minutes, forty feet from shore, working desperately to release the craft. Larsen finally liberated her by working the rudder from side to side, was hit by a comber and sent careening toward the middle.

At the bend, with the Lewiston bridge in sight, the boat drifted toward the American side again, and was then caught in the shore eddy. The Ferro grounded again, this time near enough to shore to be caught by Roy Rockwell of this city, who waded into the water and caught a rope thrown by Larsen.

Larsen wanted to continue the trip, but, having accomplished the worst part of the journey, he was persuaded to board a trolley to Lewiston, setting the boat adrift. She drifted down to Lewiston and was picked up by a fishing boat at five twenty. It was four forty-five when Larsen started on the trip. Only a scratch on the back of his right hand and an injured leg was sustained by Larsen. He was all smiles after he got over his chagrin at the stopping of his engine.

An Automatic Warship.

Berlin, Sept. 19.—A new type of warship, invented by Messrs. Wirth, Beck & Nuremburg, is causing a great sensation in naval stations. All the movements of the new vessels can be controlled from a land station many miles distant.

During recent experiments at Dutzendteich, a 30-foot boat was made to go forward, backward, turn in a circle and fire mines and torpedoes, all its operations being directed from the shore. Nobody was on board the boat.

Representatives of foreign naval powers are negotiating with the inventors. Experts predict a great future for the new craft.

Ottawa Cadets Cut Loose.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—There was a small-sized riot at the close of the Ottawa Exhibition, when the members of the Capital Cadets and Wits of the 43rd Regiment, who had been engaged for the grand stand shows, cut loose in the midway, upset many shows, and did damage all round, until the police could be got together to suppress the affair. Now the exhibition authorities blame the local cadets, and will take the damage out of their pay, and hereafter forbid them from the fair grounds.

Sinking Spells Every Few Days

"At the time I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I was having sinking spells every few days. My hands and feet would get cold; I could scarcely breathe, and could feel myself gradually sinking away until I would be unconscious. Those about me could not tell there was life in me. After these spells I would be very weak and nervous, sleepless and without appetite; had neuralgia in my head and heart. After taking the remedy a short time all this disappeared and in a few weeks all the heart trouble was gone."

KINGSTON PONIES WERE TOO MUCH FOR THE T. A. S. TEAM

Locals Could Not Hit When Hits Meant Runs, and Their Errors Counted---Rahmal Pitched for the T. A. S. and Was Bumped in Bunches.

The Kingston Ponies bunched their hits and outfielded the T.A.S. team Saturday in the exhibition game at Riverside Park, and the result was an easy victory for the visitors by a score of 10 to 4. The Penitentiary City took the lead in the opening innings and finished under wraps. At one stage the score was 6 to 0, in their favour. The locals could do nothing with Saunders when hits counted and the Kingston man administered the ozone treatment to thirteen. On the other hand the Ponies bumped Rahmal in bunches, while his support showed holes in several places. Iron Man Quinlan, who pitched a double-header in a tournament in the wilds of the Mariposa district on Friday, played first base and finished the last innings on the slab. The box-score would indicate that the Iron Man makes a better pitcher than a first-baser. The fielding feature was a pretty running catch by Campbell, of the West Ends, who played in the T. A. S. outfield. Connie Murphy, acrobat and conversationalist, did some nice fielding and had two two-base hits to his credit. The genial West End manager, Mr. J. Oldham, umpired. He took out another insurance policy just before the game, but it was not needed.

The weather could not have been improved upon, but the crowd was only fairly large.

The result, by innings, is as follows:

First Innings.

Kingston—Laird, leading off, drove the first pitched ball at O'Hearn, who threw him out at first. Connell doubled and took third, while Gerow was striking out. O'Neil was walked and Laird came home on a bad throw.—One run.

T.A.S.—O'Hearn made first, when Brown let the third strike get away. Wylder beat out a tapper. Murphy forced O'Hearn at third. Quinlan and Campbell fanned.

Second Innings.

Two hits, a pass and two errors, one of which was a wild throw, gave the visitors three runs, Saunders, LaFuer and Mathias counting.

O'Brien fanned; McFadden singled and went to third, Corkery swinging in vain. Rahmal went free; O'Hearn was hit and the bases were full. Wylder's contribution was a grounder on which he was retired. No runs.

Third Innings.

Murphy was shifted to third, Corkery to second and O'Hearn to short. O'Neil skied out to McFadden. Brown was safe on Rahmal's fumble, and went to second; Saunders died, pitcher to first; LeFuer was passed. From third, Brown scored on a wild pitch, and in the throw to get LeFuer, at second, nobody covered the bag, and the runner went on to third, and scored on Mathias' single. Pond was safe when the throw to first was dropped. Laird was out, short to first.—Two runs.

Murphy sent a long fly to Mathias. Quinlan was walked, and stole second. Campbell fouled to Brown, and O'Brien was hit. McFadden fanned.

Fourth Innings.

Wylder missed Connell's third strike, but got him at first. Gerow grounded out pitcher to first, and O'Neil sent a high and hard chance to Campbell, which was accepted.

Corkery, Rahmal and O'Hearn were fanned in succession.

Fifth Innings.

Brown popped out to Murphy; Saunders out, Corkery to Quinlan. LeFuer was safe, when Quinlan dropped the throw from O'Hearn. Mathias was out on a high one to O'Brien.

Wylder let loose a single and stole second. He scored on Murphy's double. The attempt of Cornelius to take a third cushion was successful, Connell dropping the throw, after it looked as though the runner was caught between the bags. Quinlan and Campbell fanned, but O'Brien's single sent Murphy home. O'Brien beat his way around to third and tallied when McFadden singled. Corkery missed three.—Three runs.

Sixth Innings.

Bond went out, second to first. Laird took a pass. Connell was safe on Quinlan's error; Laird was caught at second; Murphy fell down on Gerow's grounder; Quinlan dropped the throw, but threw the runner out at the middle bag.

Rahmael was an easy out at first. O'Hearn flew out to left, and Wylder croaked, Saunders to Gerow.

Seventh Innings.

The visitors were retired in order, O'Neil and Brown grounding, and Saunders, when he tried to stretch an easy double into a triple. O'Brien sent a perfect throw to Murphy, and the runner was nailed—likewise the baseman, but on his leg.

Murphy doubled again and was sacrificed to third by Quinlan; Campbell struck out; O'Brien clouted out a lusty two-bagger, Murphy scoring; McFadden was out, Connell to Gerow. One run.

Eighth Innings.

LeFuer and Mathias walked. Pond went out, pitcher to first; Laird's single scored LeFuer, and Mathias came in on Connell's donation. Gerow kept up the good work, and Laird took third, from where he scored on O'Neil's sacrifice. Connell made it four, on a passed ball. Brown was retired, after a short bunt. Four runs.

It was one, two, three order for the T. A. S. on infield plays.

Ninth.

Quinlan took the box and Rahmal first bag. Saunders grounded to pitcher, LeFuer sent one to the fence, and behind the foul flag, which was disputed, but allowed by the umpire. Mathias sent up a foul to Murphy and Pond fanned.

Wilder and Murphy were easy outs at first, and Quinlan didn't try to beat out his attempt to the pitcher.

QUINLAN WON AND LOST AT THE WOODVILLE FAIR

Won His Game Against Hartley 17 to 1 But Keslick and His Manilla Team Beat the Iron Man 2-1 in the Final---The Manilla Kid Saved Himself for the Last Game.

Quinlan, of the T.A.S. pitched a double-header in the baseball tournament at the Woodville Fair on Tuesday and won and lost. He was on the slab for Woodville and had to doff his colours to Kid Keslick and the Manilla team after beating Hartley. Manilla put Kirkfield away in the first round. The Lindsay Warder says of the games in which Quinlan took part:

Sam Lovett's Hartley Invincibles bumped into Ben Stacey's Woodville outfit in the second game and were defeated by the score of 17 to 1. It was the biggest surprise of the day and the worst defeat that Hartley has sustained in their baseball career. The Hartley [illegible] day off and [illegible] field, although [illegible] rall, pitcher Gentlemen who are bald, is [illegible] assisted by [illegible] and covering, far superior in [illegible] played [illegible] style and durability to any other [illegible] could [illegible] manufactured. At the present day [illegible] over 80,000 of these are in use through [illegible] out Canada and the United States [illegible] Call and have free demonstration.

and Woodville was one of the finest exhibitions of ball ever presented to a victoria county crowd. "Prunes" Quinlan and "Kid" Keslick were on the rubber and they had a pitcher's battle for the entire 7 innings, with the result that Weslick and his followers were returned victorious by the score of 2—1. Both Quinlan and Keslick pitched great ball, with the honours slightly in favour of the 'kid' wonder who has made a reputation for himself this season and can now be classed as one of Ontario's greatest amateur twirlers. It was a great game and both teams put up a good exhibition of ball, a couple of errors being responsible for the runs scored by Woodville. Stacey and Edwards were the star fielders, and played their positions to the king's taste. Both pitchers were given the best of support by their catchers, Dixon and Wilder. Manilla are now the unchallenged champions of Victoria, and without doubt the team going at their present clip can be classed with the best teams in the province. There is a weak spot in the team and any man can hit and run bases—but the combination which coupled with the high class pitching of "Kid" Keslick, is hard to beat. Batteries: Manilla, Keslick and Dixon; Woodville, Quinlan and Wilder.

C. G. E. TEAM WIN THE HALL CUP

The Canadian General Electric Company added the title of champions of Peterborough County to their Midland League honours Saturday at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition when they defeated the fast St. James Methodist church team by 3 goals to 0, in a game for the R. R. Hall Challenge Cup, won last year by the Havelock team. A large number of interested spectators saw the battle and were handed out a good game, although the field was anything but lawn like in its character. The Midland League title holders proved to have too much speed and combination for the Methodists and had things pretty much their own way, scoring twice in the first period and once again in the last half. They were pressing all the time, and besides the three that beat him, Hall was called upon to take care of some wicked drives and made some brilliant saves. All the winners played well. The teams were as follows:

C.G.E.—Goal, Carlton; backs, D. Evans, T. Evans; halves, Pagett, Sparrow, Allen; forwards, Hampton, French, Hitchens, Williams, Baird.

St. James — Goal, Hall; backs, Crebb, Braun; halves, Bennett, Mason, F. Bennett; forwards, Fallis, Curtis, Elliott, Irvine, Riddell.

LABOR CONGRESS ENDS.

Many Resolutions Hurried Through at Last Moment.

Port Arthur, Sept. 19.—The twenty-sixth session of the Trades and Labor Congress closed here Saturday noon with a brief address by Fraternal Delegate J. J. Manning.

Many resolutions were rushed through the last hour, among which were to seek an increased tariff on cut stone, a provincial or federal pension for those totally blind, for the appointment of more fair wage officers by the Dominion Government; an amendment to the compensation for workmen's injuries act; to seek to amend the railways act to prevent railway engineers, firemen, etc., from working too long hours. An act for compulsory voting was laid on the table. The one against military manoeuvres and displays on Labor Day was carried. The resolution for establishing a monthly magazine by the congress was referred to the executive for a report at the next convention. The adoption of a universal design for a union label by the various international unions was voted down. Unions were enjoined to support the labor press.

The two resolutions that took most of the morning were the ones to appoint a permanent organizer for Western Canada, and the Socialist resolution. With the former the name of W. R. Trotter was coupled. The delegates from the east protested against the appointment of an organizer for any particular section, and charged the western delegates with a desire to create a job for their man. The resolution was voted down, and the appointment was left with the executive council. If a man is appointed it will likely be President Glockling?

The discussion on the Socialist resolution, although brief, was exceedingly hot. Pettipiece of Vancouver led the radicals, while Landers of Hamilton, as chairman of the committee on law, led the anti's. On division the vote stood for the collective ownership of the means of wealth and production 30; against, 60.

The ways and means committee allowed Secretary Draper $800, Fraternal Delegate Pettipiece $400, Solicitor O'Donoghue $200, and the Moral Reform Association of Ontario $50.

The Cause of Ireland's Freedom.

Queenstown, Sept. 19.—John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist; Joseph Devlin, M.P., secretary of the United Irish League; T. P. O'Connor, and Daniel Boyle, M.P., for North Mayo, arrived here last evening on the steamer Lusitania.

Mr. Redmond in a brief speech said that he was going to tell the Americans that the cause of Irish freedom was tied up inseparably with the well-being and freedom of the democracy of Great Britain. The struggle to-day, he added, was between the whole mass of democratic forces in Ireland, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, combined against the last relic of feudalism. The moment the power of the House of Lords disappeared the road to home rule, he declared, was absolutely clear.

Gaynor Will Consider Governorship.

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 19.—Mayor Gaynor's first word since he took office as to his own attitude toward the movement now on foot to nominate him for governor, was received here Saturday. In a letter to Frank Gick, secretary of the Saratoga County Democratic convention, who had informed him of the resolution adopted by the convention, endorsing him for the Democratic nomination for governor, and pledging him the support of Saratoga County, the mayor replied:

"I thank you exceedingly for your letter, and the resolution which you enclose. I shall have to carefully consider the matter in the near future.

"I am now quite restored to my usual strength, but have not yet fully recovered my voice."

Mother and Daughter Arrested.

Belleville, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Mary Desislets, aged 37 years, and her daughter, Vivian Desislets, aged 19 years, are in the county jail here awaiting preliminary trial, on a charge of concealing the body of a dead child. It is alleged that the daughter is the mother of the child, and that its body was unlawfully disposed of.

Entire Block Destroyed by Fire.

Grand Valley, Sept. 19.—At an early hour yesterday, a fire broke out and entirely destroyed the McIntyre block. The building was occupied by J. McIntyre & Sons, flour and feed; Geo. Lawson, shoes; Weather Insurance head office, and George Davey, gents' furnishing. Very little of the contents were saved.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The village and township clerk's office was situated in the building, and unfortunately nearly all of the village and township records are lost.

An Ambitious Project.

Boston, Sept. 19.—A tour by an aeroplane from Harvard aviation grounds on the Atlantic coast to the Los Angeles driving park on the Pacific coast is formally proposed in a letter just sent to the National Council of the Aero Club of America by Charles J. Glidden.

The tentative plan for the contest, as outlined by Mr. Glidden, embraces a daily flight of approximately 200 miles, with stops at Saratoga, N.Y., Syracuse, N.Y., Buffalo, N.Y., Akron Ohio, Fort St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., Hutchinson, Kas., Syracuse, Kas., Santa Fe, N.M., Fort Apache, Ariz., Phoenix, Ariz., Yuma, Ariz., Los Angeles, Cal.

Held Up by Armed Men.

Portage la Prairie, Man., Sept. 19.—Four armed men held up the night clerk of the Empire Cafe at 2.30 yesterday morning, throwing him into the street, after taking seventy-five cents off him, and followed this by breaking into the till, where they secured $1.50, and then making good their escape.

Cree Indians Consumptive.

Ottawa, Sept. 19.—W. J. McLean of Winnipeg, who has just returned from James Bay, reports that considerable consumption prevails among the Cree Indians, whom he was paying off. They are fairly prosperous, however. He found the waters of the Abitibi River higher than for sixteen years.

The Parker Trial.

Tweed, Sept. 19.—The trial of Robt Parker, over 70 years old, charged with the murder of Wm. Masters, also in his 70's, will begin in Tweed on Oct. 3.

One of Falb's Predictions.

In 1874 Professor Rudolf Falb predicted an eruption of Etna on Aug. 27. He offered a Vienna editor to write an account of it if the editor would send him to Sicily. Falb was commissioned. When he reached Etna there was not the slightest sign of disturbance. As the 27th approached Falb was tortured with anxiety and spent sleepless nights watching the volcano. Nothing happened on the 27th and 28th. The following morning the servant rushed into the professor's room shouting, "An eruption, a terrible eruption!" Falb saw the spectacle and sent off his dispatch.

"One" as a Pronoun.

I have never been smitten with the use of the word "one" as a pronoun. It takes a word juggler to attempt it and get away with it. Unless one finds that one has won one's spurs in this respect and can extricate oneself from the mess one gets oneself and one's readers into one should avoid the use of the word one in referring to oneself as one would a plague.—London Idler.

Credit Men Want Protection.

Winnipeg, Sept. 19.—An important business meeting of the Canadian Credit Men's Association, at the sixth monthly dinner in the Royal Alexandra Hotel, resulted in the adoption of a resolution to start a $10,000 fund for the prosecution of unscrupulous persons. President H. H. Pigott occupied the chair, supported by R. R. Wilson, vice-president, and the board of governors.

A feature of the meeting was the desire expressed for a higher state of efficiency in mercantile agency service, and a determination to obtain more up to date and reliable information by means of harmonious working together on behalf of the members and [illegible] the information.

GOLF AND THE DEVIL.

Bobby Burns' Tale of the Genesis of the Game of "Gowf."

Robert Burns always said the devil invented golf to catch the souls of Calvinists who were proof against other snares. Bobby told a company of tosspots in an Ayrshire tavern that the devil sent a pretty woman once to snare a pious shepherd of Argyle, who was famous for his sanctity and dourness. In time the lady returned to the devil minus her jewels and cash, weeping with mortification over her failure.

"Never mind, my dear," said the devil, grimly, "I'll get him." Catching one of the tears rolling down her cheek, he changed it into a golf ball, and laid it in the field where the saintly shepherd could see. Then he and the woman sat down to await results. Presently the old shepherd saw the ball and struck at it carelessly with his crook and missed it; he tried again and missed it; then he rose angrily and aimed at it viciously, and missed it. Now he was both indignant and interested, and went at the ball with brute-zeal, foozling and failing until his face was red and wet, and the heather rang with profanity. The shepherd abandoned flock and dog to have it out with the ball all day; and day after day, the devil and the lady came to watch him. Soon all his pious neighbors joined him, while the wassailers and wastrels laughed to hear the truly good swear and see them sweat. The ball bewitched them all, and the devil—a good, orthodox Presbyterian devil with horns and hoofs and tail—smiled, and at the end of a week said to the lady, "I've got him now; he can never get away from me." The woman, piqued at the failure of her charms, could not see how the ball or the game helped the devil any better than she had done.

"The ball is merely an innocent incident in the game," said the devil; "its simplicity and lack of guile catch the most holy. I win on the language incidental to the game, and the Scot I can't bait with you I can with this ball."

The lady smiled and nodded, and answered, "I am glad you discovered a rural substitute for my sex; as for me, these rural saints bore and irritate me. I will go back to the sphere where I am supreme, the city; I do not relish competing with a bludgeon and a ball."

The woman went back to town; but golf remained a labor-saving device of the devil.

"You may believe the story or not, as you will," said the rollicking poet. "It's a poor sort of a Scot who will go to the de'il for a game and a ball, when he can gang the same road with a girl and a glass."

King George's Stamps.

The story is going around that when George V. named his private secretary, to take the place occupied by Lord Knollys under Edward VII., the King asked him, familiarly: "What should be the opening of my reign?"

"Your Majesty," was the response, "all reigns begin in the same way."

"And how is that?"

"With the creation of a new postage stamp."

Whereupon the King smiled sweetly. The secretary had struck a responsive chord, for George V. is, in fact, the first philatelist of the century. His unrivalled collection is valued at many thousands of pounds. It contains practically every stamp since 1846, the date of Rowland Hill's innovation, not only of England and the British colonies, but of every country that ever issued a postage stamp.

The new British stamp will, it is said, soon appear, and, of course, it will bear the effigy of George V. in profile, but turned in the opposite direction to that of Edward VII.

The postoffice has its established customs. One of these is that two kings, one following another, must not face in the same direction.

Liberties With Priest.

Mdme. Blanche Marchesi, who has won innumerable hearts with her singing, added another large number to her tally by an unconventional act which brought down upon her a feeble reprimand. The other night she sang at a concert given in St. Joseph's School, London, in aid of the schools, and it was just after her entrance into the hall that the incident occurred. Father Matthew assisted the singers to the platform, and courteously conducted them to their places. Mdme. Marchesi he assisted to the centre of the platform. She appeared to intimate to the reverend father that he should retire, but he apparently did not understand her for the moment. Impulsively, she shook the priest by the shoulder, conducted him to the stairway, and, amid roars of laughter, kissed him on the cheek as a solatium for pushing him down the stairs! This innocent act caused the audience to become boisterous in their enthusiasm, but the worthy priest stood abashed and shocked for a moment, and then permitted himself to smile at the liberty, although he upraised his forefinger reproachfully and shook his grey head.

England's Army of Unemployed.

Despite the $80,000,000 annually spent by Great Britain to relieve distress, there are to-day 7,000,000 people in that country in actual want from lack of work. It is this vast army of unemployed that constitute England's emigrants, and in the last four years the Salvation Army alone has started over 50,000 of them on their way to Canada. The general worthiness of this class is testified to by the fact that of all those emigrating under the auspices of the Salvation Army, less than one per cent. failed to make good.

Bolt Cut His Threat.

A peculiar fatality occurred at Warrenheip, Victoria, lately, a farmer named Patterson being the victim. He was feeding a maize cutting mill when he was caught in the machinery and drawn against the sharp edge of the driving belt, which cut his throat, severing the windpipe and causing instant death.

Indications Favorable.

"Is he careful with his money?"

"I don't know. I never saw him handle any of it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE ANDORRANS.

All the Inhabitants of the Little Republic Are Related.

The inhabitants of Andorra, the little republic which is wedged in between France and Spain and which has existed since the year 782, are very proud of their blue blood and ancient lineage. In their eyes a gavache (foreigner) of any description or nationality is merely an inferior being, a sort of mushroom upstart in comparison with themselves. During 1,200 years they have continually married and intermarried to such an extent that at present all the inhabitants are practically cousins, yet, strange to say, neither their physical, mental nor moral qualities seem to have suffered. Both sexes are strong limbed, broad shouldered, bright eyed, hardy and long lived, retaining their hair and their teeth to a green old age. They are also keen witted and intelligent, alert and happy hearted, sober, industrious, hospitable and devout. The feminine Andorran has not a vestige of coquetry about her. She is just the female pure and simple. She is a thrifty housewife, a helpmate to her husband in the most literal sense of the term—ready and able to trudge off across mountain and valley beside him with a pack of smuggled goods on her back in case of need.—Wide World Magazine.

PROMOTED THE COOK.

An Error Made Him a Professor of History in Russia.

Some years ago the minister of education in St. Petersburg was appealed to by telegraph for a cook, to be hurried to Moscow. The operator got his dashes and dots mixed, but by next train a man arrived and was ceremoniously conducted to the university, where he was introduced to the assembled faculty and students as the new professor in history.

The unhappy fellow protested that, while he might be a professor of pots and pans, he knew nothing about history. But in Russian official life it is harder far to correct an error than to make one, so for several years the cook has held his professorship, though no one attends his lectures.

Another laughable story comes from the Suwalky school for boys. A doorkeeper there who could scarcely read or write had grown so untidy and slow that he was no longer useful, but as the headmaster did not want to set him adrift he promoted him to a teacher's post and had him transferred to a distant school. He, too, will be a professor some day.—Moscow Letter in New York World.

Miss Leneve Told Landlady In a Fit of Jealousy How Much She Hated Mrs. Crippen, and That Doctor and She Were Only Awaiting a Chance to Get Married—Testimony of the Prisoner's Closest Friend.

London, Sept. 20.—Something of what Ethel Claire Leneve suffered as half mad with jealously, she impatiently awaited the fulfilment of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen's promise to make her his wife, was revealed at yesterday's session of the inquest into the death of Belle Elmore, with the murder of whom the doctor and his typist are jointly charged.

In her distress, Miss Leneve confided in her landlady, Mrs. Jackson and the story that the latter told on the witness stand rivaled the most sensational evidence introduced at the murder trial.

Mrs. Jackson said that the accused girl gave up the room which she had occupied at the home of the witness on March 12, explaining that she was leaving to be married to Dr. Crippen.

Until the first week in February Miss Leneve had slept regularly at Mrs. Jackson's. After that she stopped at the house only occasionally. She said that she spent the other nights at the homes of friends. On one occasion Miss Leneve mentioned having been at the Hilldrop Crescent home of the Crippens, early in February, to help the doctor in a search for a bank book which showed an account for $1,000. She added that a diamond tiara and rings had been found in the house and that the doctor had raised $850 on these.

About the middle of February the witness said Miss Leneve appeared most miserable and depressed. The landlady insisted upon an explanation, telling the girl that she must have something awful on her mind to be in such a condition. The witness testified that the other replied:

"Would you be surprised if I told you that it was the doctor and Miss Elmore? He was the cause of my trouble when you first knew me. She is his wife, and when I see them go away together it makes me realize my position, as to what she is and what I am."

Mrs. Jackson asked: "What is the use of worrying about another woman's husband?"

To this Miss Leneve answered: "Miss Elmore has been threatening to go away with another man. Dr. Crippen has been waiting for her to do so when he would divorce her."

Solicitor Newton, who is looking out for the interests of Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve, suggested that her lodger's excitement was due to the landlady having resurrected a trouble which the girl experienced during her earlier association with Crippen, but the witness maintained the correctness of her evidence as given.

Another blow was given to Dr. Crippen's fight for liberty when the wife of Dr. T. H. Burroughs, Crippen's closest friend in London, identified a lock of hair, which was disinterred with portions of the human body, in the cellar of the Crippen Hilldrop Crescent home, as being from the head of Belle, as Mrs. Crippen was known on the stage.

Prof. Pepper, the pathologist, repeated the testimony which he had given at the trial in the Bow street police court. In response to questions by the coroner he said:

"I can form no definite opinion as to whether the parts found were those of a male or female. If I take the hair discovered into consideration there is a strong presumption, almost conclusive evidence, that the parts were those of a woman."

Investigating Unemployment.

Paris, Sept. 20—Former Premier Bourgeois, in opening yesterday the first international conference on unemployment, said that the purpose of the congress was to investigate the scientific causes of unemployment, with the object of organizing methods for conserving human resources. Besides discussing means of combatting unemployment, the delegates will attempt to lay the basis for a labor legislation between the city and the country districts, and between different countries.

Col. Gibson In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20. The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. J. M. Gibson, arrived in this city at noon, and was met by a delegation of prominent Scottish Rite Masons. Last night a reception was held by the craft in the Masonic Temple. Mr. Gibson, who is being entertained at Government House, said "the bountifulness of what I have already seen in the West strikes me as most impressive. Ontario, for her part, is blessed with a rich harvest this year."

White Gloves For Judge.

Kingston, Sept. 20.—When Hon. Justice Falconbridge opened the fall assizes yesterday afternoon there were no criminal cases and he was presented with the customary white gloves. There was one jury case, that of R. S. Johnston v. Thousand Islands Railway Co., for $5,000 for the death of his wife in Gananoque on May 16.

The "Rue Edouard VII."

Paris, Sept. 20.—Paris will in a few months have a new street. It will be called the Rue Edouard VII., after "the most Parisian of Kings," and as a fashionable shopping and lounging thoroughfare it will probably rival the Rue de la Paix.

The Rue Edouard VII will be a rainbow-shaped street, about a quarter of a mile in length, situated between the Rue Scribe and the Rue de Caumartin.

HE INFLAMED WEAK MINDS

Mayor's Mail Was Flooded With Clippings From The New York American and Journal, and He Purposely Avoided Brooklyn Bridge — Did Not Realize That He Was Shot Until a Long Time After.

New York, Sept. 20.—Mayor Gaynor's own story of the attempt upon his life was published yesterday in the form of a letter written on Sept. 2 by the mayor to his sister, Miss Mary Gaynor of Utica, N.Y. It is a remarkable human document, in which the mayor describes in detail his feelings following the shooting.

The mayor directly accuses the Hearst newspapers of instigating the attack, in which Gallagher was the active agent. False articles, he says, worked upon people of wicked or disordered minds to such an extent that these persons flooded his mail with clippings from the Hearst papers, and caused him to abandon his habit of walking across the Brooklyn Bridge.

"I was not surprised when I was shot," wrote the mayor to his sister. "I had been expecting an assault."

Miss Gaynor, in giving out the letter, said that she did so because she felt it belonged to the whole public, and that the publication would do much good.

Mayor Gaynor, in referring to the pictures of the Reno prize fight, said he had no way to stop the threatres from showing them.

That was the beginning of the attack on him by the Hearst papers. "But the Hearst newspapers kept on denouncing me for not stopping them," says the mayor.

"Finally," continues the mayor, "one day they printed in large type an officer of the Christian Endeavor Society who had called on me and asked me on behalf of that society to stop the pictures, and stated that I told him he was a fool, and was sent by fools. I had never said such a thing.

"Meanwhile, people of wicked or disordered minds would cut these articles out and send them to me with abuse and threats.

"Finally they printed that terrible cartoon of me, entitled 'The Barber.' I was dressed up as a ruffian, standing outside of a prison fight with a cane and barking for people to go in and see the sport. Two men slugging each other, one of them down and bleeding, were exposed in the ring."

The mayor says that he has not read a line of what has been published of the shooting, nor does he now remember the name of the man who shot him. Mayor Gaynor wrote that after the shot was fired:

"My next consciousness was of a terrible metallic roaring in my head. It filled my head, which seemed as though it would burst open. It swelled to the highest pitch, and then fell and then rose again, and so alternated until it subsided in a continuous buzz. It was sickening, but my stomach did not give way. I was meanwhile entirely sightless.

"I do not think I fell, for when I became conscious I was on my feet. I supposed they saved me from falling, and they were supporting me. My sight gradually returned, so that after a while I could see the deck and the outlines of the crowd around me. I became conscious that I was choking. Blood was coming from my mouth, and I tried all I could to swallow it, so those around me would not see it.

"Though the thing had not entered my head that morning, I was not surprised when I realized that I was shot. I had had a feeling for some weeks that I might be assaulted, on account of anonymous threats I was getting by mail. I had not received so many nor so regularly since I was opposing the ring corruptions and the McKane conditions in Brooklyn and Gravesend when I was a young man."

Robert Adamson, the mayor's secretory, said last night that the mayor's condition continues to improve. "It is true," he explained, "that he has had pains on the right side of his head since he was shot, but they are due to neuralgia. It is true also that his voice is husky and low. This is because he has been compelled to do too much talking since he left the hospital. The mayor plans to return to his desk at the city hall on Oct. 3, and in the meantime to do as little talking as possible."

Will Send Big Delegation.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—Orangemen here will send a big delegation to Toronto if any demonstration is planned there for July 12th. They are entirely in sympathy with the proposal to have an Orange demonstration there on a large scale to offset the remarks of Roman Catholics in the recent Eucharistic Congress at Montreal.

Threaten to Tie Up Every Contract.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—At a meeting of striking plumbers yesterday, it was said by one of the officers that a settlement of the dispute might be reached on Wednesday. If they failed to reach a settlement, the threat was made that every important contract in Montreal would be tied up indefinitely.

APARTMENTS WERE BURNED

Workmen on Big Apartment Block Have Great Difficulty Escaping With Their Lives From Burning Building — Several Beautiful Residences Are Destroyed by the Swiftly Spreading Blaze.

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—Fire, which broke out at 2.30 yesterday afternoon in the fashionable residential district of Fort Rouge, and which was not under control till night, did damage roughly estimated at $125,000, while thirty men working on the roof of the unfinished apartment block in which the fire started had a narrow escape.

It broke out in the apartment house of Hicks & Patterson, being erected at a total cost of $150,000, totally destroying it, and then jumped back to McMillan Block, where seven frame houses were speedily licked up. The apartment house was brick and stone, wood finished, and the fire started from an explosion of the plumber's gasoline furnace. A high wind was blowing, and the unfinished structure, being not closed in, the flames spread so rapidly that the men working on the roof were cut off before they recognized their predicament.

Some jumped, others slid down by ropes, and all escaped with a few minor injuries. Forty-five men working inside escaped uninjured.

The $80,000 so far expended on the building is represented by $20,000 insurance.

Racing from house to house, the occupants of the burned residences on McMillan avenue had no time to save even their personal belongings.

Seventy-five firemen and five engines battled with the flames, and F. H. Ireton, engineer of Fire Station No. 4, stoically watched the conflagration lick up his own home.

"The Pillar of Light"

BY LOUIS TRACY

The electric bell jangled in the room, causing Mrs. Vansittart to jump visibly.

"Oh, what is it?" she screamed.

"My father is calling one of us up," explained Constance. "It may be a message from Jack. You go, Enid."

Enid hurried away. She had scarcely reached the next floor before Mrs. Vansittart, who seemed to have moods in full compass, said, sweetly:

"Convey my deep obligations to Mr. Brand, won't you, Charlie. Indeed, you might go now and write out the text of my message to your uncle. Some early opportunity of despatching it may offer."

"All right," he said in the calm way which so effectually concealed his feelings. Shall I escort you to your room?"

"By no means. I came here quite unassisted. Miss Brand and I can chat for a little while. It is most wearying to be pent all day and all night in one little room. Even the change to another little room is grateful."

Pyne bowed, and they heard his steady tread as he ascended the stairs.

"Quite a nice boy, Charlie," said Mrs. Vansittart, coming forward into the kitchen, with its medley of queer-looking, hissing, steaming contrivances.

"Yes. We think he is exceedingly nice," said Constance. She wondered why the other woman seemed always to stand in the shadow, by choice. The strongest light in the darkened chamber came from the grate, and Mrs. Vansittart deliberately turned away from it.

"If all goes well he will soon be my nephew by marriage," went on the other. "I quitted New York yesterday week in order to marry his uncle in Paris. Rather a disastrous beginning to a new career, is it not?"

"I hope not, indeed. Perhaps you are surmounting difficulties at the commencement rather than at the end."

"It may be. I am so much older than you that I am less optimistic. But you did not grasp the significance of my words. I said I was to be married in Paris."

"Yes," said Constance, still at a loss to catch the drift of an announcement which Mrs. Vansittart seemed so anxious to thrust upon her.

"Well, the Chinook was wrecked last night, or rather, early this morning. The name of the ship was not made known throughout the world until long after daybreak. It is quite impossible that Mr. Traill should have reached this remote corner of England from Paris in the interval."

For one moment the girl was puzzled. Then a ready solution occurred to her.

"Oh, of course, that is very simple. Mr. Traill was awaiting your arrival in Southampton, thinking to take you by surprise, no doubt. That is sure to be the explanation. What a shock the first telegram must have given him!"

"How did he ascertain that his nephew and I were alive?"

"The very first thing father did was to telegraph the names of all the survivors. I know that is so because I read the message."

"Ah. He is a man of method, I suppose. You are proud of him, I heard you say."

"I think there is no one like him in all the world. We are so happy at home that sometimes I fear it cannot last. Yet, thank God, there is no excuse for such night-mare terrors."

Mrs. Vansittart cooed her gentle way.

"Indeed, you have my earnest good wishes in that respect," she said. "Do we not owe our lives to you? That is an excellent reason for gratitude, if a selfish one. But, some day soon, you will be getting married and leaving the parental roof."

"I do not wish to die an old maid," laughed Constance, "yet I have not discovered a better name than my own up to the present."

She fancied that Mrs. Vansittart winced a little at this remark. Deeming her visitor to be a bundle of nerves, she jumped to the conclusion that the other woman read into the words some far-fetched disparagement of her own approaching marriage.

"Of course," she continued, affably tactful, "I will hold another view when the right man asks me."

"Were you in my place," murmured her visitor, apparently thinking aloud rather than addressing Constance, "you would not be fearful of misfortune? You would not read an omen of ill luck into this dramatic interruption of all your plans? After many years of widowhood I am about to be married again to a man who is admirable in every way. He is rich, distinguished in manner and appearance, a person of note not only in the States but on the Continent. No woman of my years might desire a better match. Why could not the way be made smooth for me? Why should the poor Chinook, out of the hundreds of mail-steamers which cross the Atlantic yearly, be picked out for utter disaster? It is a warning—a threat from the gods!"

The unconscious bitterness of her tone moved the girl to find words of consolation.

"I would not question the ways of Providence in the least," she said. "Surely you have far more reason for thankfulness than for regret."

"Regret! I am not regretting. But I have gone through such trials that I am unnerved. There, child! Forgive me for troubling you. And—and kiss me, will you, and say you wish me well!"

She moved nearer, as if driven by uncontrollable impulse. Constance, not prepared for such an outburst, was nevertheless deeply touched by this appeal for sympathy.

"I wish you all the joy and happiness which I am sure you deserve," she said, stooping to kiss the wan, shrinking face held up to her.

Mrs. Vansittart burst into a paroxysm of tears and tottered towards the door.

"No, no," she gasped, as Constance caught her by the arm. "Do not come with me. I am—shaken. It will pass. For God's sake, let me go alone!"

CHAPTER XII.

PREPARATIONS.

Pyne found Enid rosy-red and inclined to be tearful. The dying light of day was still strong enough in the service-room to permit these things to be seen.

"No bad news, I hope?" he inquired, though the sight of Stephen Brand seated at his desk and placidly writing, was reassuring.

The question steadied her to an extent.

"It is nothing of any consequence she said and darted past him.

Brand looked up from his journal. He smiled, though the American thought there was a hint of pain in his eyes.

"I am going to lose one of my girls," he said. "Oh, no, this is not a loss by death but by marriage. If I were a Frenchman, I would describe it as gaining a son. Enid has just received what is tantamount to a proposal."

"Be flag-wagging?" Pyne was naturally astounded.

"Yes. You would not expect one of the people from the Chinook to be so enterprising."

"I—don't—know," said Pyne, punctuating each word with a deliberate nod.

"Well, in any case, I would not have forwarded the application after an acquaintance of eighteen hours," observed Brand with equal deliberation.

"They're two powerful fine girls," said Pyne, steering clear of the point. "They have just been telling me how Miss Enid happened along. It reads like a fairy tale."

"She was given to me by the winds and waves, yet she is dear to me as my own child. I shall miss her greatly if all goes well here."

"I've cottoned on to both of them something wonderful. But, if I am not intruding into private affairs, how comes it that Miss Enid is being telegraphed for? Of course I can understand the gentleman being in a hurry. I would feel that way myself if the conditions were favourable."

Pyne could be as stolid as a red Indian when the occasion demanded it. Brand found no hint in his face of the hidden thought in his words.

"Have they said anything to you of a man named Stanhope?" inquired the lighthouse-keeper, resuming the entry in his diary after a sharp glance upwards.

"Y-yes. They pointed him out to me this morning. In the navy, I think. Fellow with a title, and that sort of thing."

"No. His mother is Lady Margaret Stanhope, being an earl's daughter, but his father was a knight. He has been paying attentions to Enid for a year and more, to my knowledge, and to his mother's exceeding indignation, I fancy."

"That is where we on the other side have the pull of you."

"Have you? I wonder. However, Lady Margaret's views have not troubled me. I will deal with her when the time comes. At present it looks fairly certain that Master Jack has settled matters on his own account. I may be mistaken, of course. How do you interpret this?"

He closed the journal and handed to Pyne a memorandum taken down down letter by letter by a sailor as Brand read the signal:

"Mother sends her love to Enid."

"Did mother ever convey her love to Enid before?" asked Pyne.

"No."

"Then I call that neat. I take off my hat to Stanhope. He and mamma have had a heart-to-heart talk."

Brand leaned his head on his hands with clenched fists covering his ears. There was a period of utter silence until the lighthouse keeper rose to light the lamp.

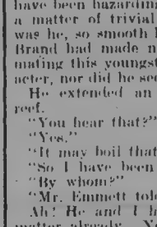
SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. EMMA CHATEL, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.



Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga. — "I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R.F.D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases.

Pyne watched him narrowly.

"I may be trespasing on delicate ground," he said at last. "If I am, you are not the sort of man to stand on ceremony. In the States, you know, when the authorities want to preserve a park section they don't say: 'Please do not walk on the grass.' They put up a board which reads: 'Keep off.' We never kick. We're used to it."

"My notice-board, if required, will be less curt, at any rate," replied Brand, and they faced each other. Though their words were light, no pleasant conceit lurked in their minds. There was a question to be asked and answered, and it held the issues of life and death.

"What did you mean just now by saying, 'if all goes well here?' Is there any special reason why things should not go well?"

The young Philadelphian might have been hazarding an inquiry about a matter of trivial interest, so calm was he, so smooth his utterance. But Brand had made no mistake in estimating this youngster's force of character, nor did he seek to temporize.

He extended an arm towards the roof.

"You hear that?" he said.

"Yes."

"It may boil that way for weeks."

"So I have been told."

"By whom?"

"Mr. Emmett told me."

Ah! He and I have discussed the matter already. Yet I imagine that neither he, nor any other man in the place save myself, grasps the true meaning of the fuel."

"I've been theorizing," said Pyne. "It occurred to me that this light isn't here for amusement."

He looked up at the lamp and smiled. The pillar, in those days, must have been a haunt of illusions, for Brand, like Constance and Pyne himself in the case of Mrs. Vansittart, thought he caught an expression familiar to his eyes long before he had seen that clear-cut, splendidly intelligent face.

But there was no time for idle speculation. He glanced into the well of the stairs to make sure that no one was ascending.

Then he approached nearer to Pyne and said in an intense whisper:

It is folly to waste words with you. I have reasoned this thing out and now I will tell you what I have decided. I will take the watch from eight until twelve. At twelve you will relieve me, and I will go below to secure provisions and water sufficient to maintain the lives of my daughters, you and myself for a few hours longer than the others. By right, if I followed the rules I have promised to obey, I alone should live. That is impossible. A Spartan might do it, but I cannot abandon my girls and yet retain my senses. I trust you because I must have a confederate. If the weather does not break before tomorrow night we must barricade the stairs—and fight—if necessary."

His face was drawn and haggard, his eyes blazing. He shook as one in the first throes of fever. He seemed to await his companion's verdict with an over-powering dread lest any attempt should be made to question the justice of his decree.

"Yes. I figured it out that way, too," said Pyne. "It's queer, isn't it, to be in such a fix when there's all sorts of help within call, so to speak. We might as well be in a mine closed up by an explosion. And I'll tell you what—I'm real sorry for you."

Brand, collapsing under the strain, sank into a chair.

"It is an awful thing," he moaned, "to condemn so many men, women, and children, to such a death."

A spasm of pain made Pyne's lips tremulous for an instant. e had forgotten Elsie and Mamie.

But his voice was fully under control when he spoke again.

"You can count on me in the deal in all but one thing," he said.

The older man looked up fiercely. What condition could be imposed in the fulfillment of a duty so terrible?

"I am here by chance," went on Pyne. "One of your daughters may have told you that Mrs. Vansittart came from New York to marry my uncle. Anyhow you would know she was dear to him by his message today. She is sort of in my charge, and I can't desert her. It's hard luck, as I don't care a cent for her. She's the kind of woman old men adore—fascinating, bird-like creatures — when the cage is gilded."

Brand sprang to his feet and raced up to the trimming-stage. When his hands were on the lamp he felt surer of himself. It gave him strength during the hurricane and it would strengthen him now.

"There can be no exceptions," he said harshly. Pyne waited until the lighthouse-keeper rejoined him.

"I ought to have put my proposition before you first and made a speech afterwards," he said. "Constance and Enid will join you here when you say the word, but I will be on the other side of the barricade."

"Nonsense!" cried Brand. "You have no right to thrust away the chance that is given you. You saved all these people once. Why should you die uselessly?"

"What! Supose it pans out that way. Suppose we live a couple of weeks and escape. Am I to face the old man and tell him—the truth? No, sir. You don't mean it. You would not do it yourself. What about that shark the girls told me of. I can guess just what happened. He wanted the light refreshment in the boat. Did you scoot back when you saw his fin? I'm a heap younger than you, Mr. Brand, but that bluff doesn't go."

"Thank Heaven, we have twenty-four hours yet!" murmured Brand.

"It will be all the same when we have only twenty-four seconds. Let us fix it that way right now. Don't you see, it will be easier to deceive the girls? And there's another reason. Barricade and shoot us you like, it will be a hard thing to keep three-score desperate men boxed up down below. When they begin to diet on colza there will be trouble. A few of us, ready to take chances, will be helpful. Some of them may have to die quick, you know."

Brand closed his eyes in sheer affright. In that way he tried to shut out a vision.

"Be it so," he gasped. "May the Lord help us."

It was the responsibility that mastered him. Judges on the bench often break down when they sentence a criminal to death, but what judge, humane, tender-hearted and God-fearing, ever pronounced the doom of seventy-eight people snatched from a merciful death to be steeped in horrors.

At last his iron will predominated. The knowledge that the path of duty lay straight before him cheered his tortured soul. No man could say he erred in trying to save his children. That was a trust as solemn as any conferred by the Elder Brethren of the Trinity.

He placed a hand on Pyne's shoulder, for this youngster had become dear to him.

"Had I a son," he said, "I should wish him to be like you. Let us strive to forget the evils that threaten us. Brooding is useless. If need be, you will take charge of the lower deck. There is starvation allowance for three more days at the worst. But I hate the thought of starting the new scale to-morrow."

"It may not be necessary."

"Candidly, I fear it will. I know the Cornish Coast too well. When bad weather sets in from the southwest at this season it holds for a week at the lowest computation."

"Is there no other way? Can nothing be done out there?"

"Able men, the best of sailors, the most experienced of engineers, have striven for half a century to devise some means of storm communication with a rock lighthouse placed as this is. They have failed. There is none."

"That's good," cried Pyne quite pleasantly. "Where is your pouch? I feel like a smoke. If I hadn't fired that question at you I should have wasted a lot of time in hard thinking."

Brand had to scheme that night to reach the store-room unobserved. The Falson, steaming valiantly to her observation post near the buoy, aided him considerably. He permitted the night watch to gather in the service-room whilse he supplied the men with tobacco, and stationed the officer on the gallery to observe the trawler in case she showed any signal lights.

Since the attempt on the lock Constance gave the key to her father after each visit. For the rest, the inmates of the pillar were sunk in the lethargy of unsatisfied hunger. Constance and Enid, utterly worn out with fatigue, were sound asleep in the kitchen, and the tears coursed down the man's face as he acted the part of a thief in securing the measured allowance of flour and bacon for one

The Skeleton

A Short Story.

The soul-racking tale poured into the ears of little Ethel Murray could result only in one thing a missive promptly penned to the profligate Emery Jarvis assuring him that she had learned all, and asking to be released from the engagement.

"I know of the skeleton in your closet," wrote Ethel there she applied a dainty bit of cambric to streaming eyes, ordinarily as sunshiny and blue as the sky of a June morning). "I am surprised at you! Had you come to me and told me all, I feel that I could have forgiven you but never, now that I find the truth through other people. I return herewith your ring."

The rest of the letter was a rambling plaint, save on one subject the engagement existing between these two must be considered post history. That was plain.

For more than a year the daughter of Burgess Murray (the biggest man politically in the community, and Emery Jarvis, a clerk in Glasson's drug store, had been making plans for a future that would embrace them both. Jarvis was an ambitious young fellow, well liked by every one, and seemingly having the best of habits.

Ethel had believed in him thoroughly until the gossiping tongue of old Mrs Pollet had disclosed certain things that no girl of spirit could tolerate in her fiance. Therefore the return of the handsome solitaire that she had so proudly worn and the letter to her betrothed asking for her release.

Jarvis read the lines in the seclusion of the little prescription room on the rear of the drug store and his dark eyes, clouded as he vainly strove to solve the cause of the maiden's anger.

"She shouldn't be cross about a little thing like this," he ruminated. "I wonder how she found it out, anyway?"

That evening Jarvis called up the girl. She was not at home. During the ensuing week he made several other fruitless attempts to see her.

It was after this that he (or he of the youth assumed significant proportions. "My dear Ethel," wrote Jarvis, "I have called several times, as you know, and you have no been at home. Patience has ceased to be the proverbial virtue, and I shall not try to see you again. I am done. I release you from the engagement, as you ask. I also acknowledge the skeleton in my closet, but why a normal-minded maid should take this amiss is beyond me. If anything, my dear, I am rather proud of it."

Ethel positively stormed when she read this communication. She clinched her fists until the nails bit cruelly into the tender flesh and angrily tossed her little blonde head.

"I shall never, never have anything more to do with men," she complained bitterly. "The very brazenness of that Emery Jarvis to say that a 'normal-minded' girl shouldn't take such things amiss. I'm sure no girl with common sense would allow her fiance to actin that scandalous manner. Anyway, I'm glad it's all over." To prove this, Ethel burst into convulsive sobs, and hid a flushed and tear-wet face in a convenient sofa pillow.

Weeks passed, but the two erstwhile lovers seemed hopelessly estranged. Ethel madeno attempt to salve the wound caused by her letter, nor did Jarvis try to explain away the misunderstanding.

Gradually the gossips in the little town and there were many grew accustomed to the new order of things, and everybody ceased to interest themselves in the affairs of the young couple.

It was a month after this that old Pollit (he was a portly butcher owning the meat shop next to the drug emporium) ventured to incorporate something in a remark that caught the youth's puzzled interest.

"What was that?" demanded Jarvis, ears metaphorically a-cock. "Just repeat that last sentence."

"I said," came from the butcher, "that that there book I've been reading 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' reminds me of your doings." He poked a pudgy forefinge playfully into the ribs of the youth.

"You'll have to be more explicit," snapped the drug clerk. "I can't understand. What are you driving at?"

"Can't understand, eh?" commented the other sourly. He was angry at the tone of the lad. "Well, I guess I can put it plainer, all right. I mean that you tried to play double just like that Jekyll-Hyde feller did. Every evening after you called on the girl you was engaged to, you went straight to old Doc Blyly to see his daughter. My wife she seen you do it time and again, she did."

The dull red stained the face of the angry butcher. "She's the one that put a crimp in you, too. Ethel Murray is too fine a girl to be galavanting around with a young fellow that she thinks thinks a heap of her, and all the while he don't, but is making her out a fool by sneaking away from her house to call on another girl."

"So it was your wife that caused this trouble between Ethel and me, was it? Pity she can't learn to attend to her own affairs, isn't it?"

The butcher, his mind relieved, stamped heavily out of the drug store, but he left a knowing youth behind him. Mrs. Pollit was a gossip monger of some notoriety in the community. She resided just opposite the Blyly home, and now that the irate meat man had given him his cue, Jarvis could understand many things.

That evening, his heavy jaws set firmly, and his broad shoulders thrown defiantly back, the drug clerk mounted the steps to the Murray home and rang the bell.

Ethel answered the summons. An angry flush dotted her cheeks when she saw who her visitor was ,but Emery ignored these trouble signs, and pushed by her and into the familiar parlor.

"I am here to explain," began Jarvis. "Mrs. Pollit's loquacious husband has just told things, and I think I understand."

"I don't care for explanations," interrupted little Miss Murray formally.

"Nevertheless," persisted Jarvis patiently, "you are about to receive them. Listen, dear. I have never called on Millie Blyly in my life let alone after I left here. When you referred to the skeleton in my closet, I took the phrase literally. There is a skeleton in my closet a six-foot skeleton of a man that Dr. Blyly loaned me to aid me in my studies, because well, I'm studying medicine with, him, you see. I don't want to be a drug clerk all my life, I

But here his late fiance, face a-smile, interrupted his sentence in a very pleasing way.

"Frank, dear!" cried the princess, and she waved her parasol at me, her pretty eyes round and eager. "Hurry!" she called again. "Oh!"

I came up breathless, m hat in my hand and my parasol back with the dowager, where I had forgotten it completely.

"Frank; do you see the back of a man's coat down there ein the ilex garden? No, you can't see his face, but I assure you it is even better looking than his back. Well, guess who it is? Eric Roscom!"

"The major's son?" I gasped weakly. "He's sure to be troublesome, just as mother and the major are afraid he will be." I told the princess suddenly. "A man with that back, Betty, is born to be troublesome. It is a good-looking back, though you're right there."

I sighed and Betty laughed. Betty has laughed all her life long, even after she married a Greek prince and came to Athens to live with the rheumatic old dowager. We have been chums all our life.

Eric Roscom turned, faced us and then catching sight of Betty, whom he knew, hurried forward.

Betty fumbled with the gate latch "I can't open it," she said sweetly. "Ah, thank you. Here is a young lady you should be particularly anxious to know—Frank Calhoun."

Eric Roscom stared at me with well-bred curiosity, and began to murmur polite nothings about the weather to the princess. He was a good-looking Englishman and Betty was certainly right when she said his face was as nice as his back. But Betty is a born matchmaker, and when I saw her smile and heard her coo my heart filled with rebellion.

"Come down into the ilex garden," she said, and she handed Eric Roscom her parasol and pushed her way deliberately in front of me, so that I was obliged to walk with him.

"Isn't it delicious here in 'violet-wreathed Athens!'"

Then Eric Roscom, who was walking with me and still saying pretty nothings about the weather managed to drop Betty's parasol and when he rescued it from the dust and we had spent five minutes in restoring its original color, lo, the wretch had disappeared!

"Er the princess—" he began, when he discovered our loss.

"Let's sit down on this bench for a moment," he suggested. "You know it is perfectly proper for me to sit here and talk to you. The princess saw we could do without a chaperon. And the major will certainly not miss you for five minutes."

"The major's a dear," I said, disposing my parasol into the violet-grown grass. "Yes, I guess he can spare me for five minutes to-day."

"Especially when one remembers that he will see so much of you in the future," he added.

"Oh, but you speak as if the wedding was to be to-morrow it isn't not for months!" I cried. "And what do you want to say to me, anyway? Give me a long lecture on the glories of the Roscom family now that a Calhoun has been asked to enter it?"

His eyes twinkled, but outwardly he was fearfully proper and dignified. "I hadn't thought of such a thing, but I will if you wish it," he told me gravely.

"Not in violet-wreathed Athens," I laughed. "Put it off until some day in the British Museum, when the fog has got the better of us and a wood-fire feels comfy. Then I could drop off to sleep beautifully, while now I should hate to miss this sunset."

"Do you always talk that way—like the heroine in 'Miss Giles' or 'Fair Haven?'" he asked. "Of course, I know the major is fond of literary folk, but it must be difficult to live with a person who keeps up that strain continuously."

"Oh, a book or two to one's credit," I returned airily. "So you've read 'Miss Giles' and 'Fair Haven?'"

"No," he shook his head. "I've read the reviews of them in the weeklies, so I could talk glibly of them to you," he confessed shamelessly. "By the way, what is Miss Giles all about, please?"

"I don't know," I returned truthfully. "I've a dim idea of having gone over the proof-sheets with mother, but that is all. I've never seen the inside of the book since it was made."

"How extraordinary!" he said. "I should think you would be proud of them."

"Why don't you be proud of them now that they are entering the Roscom family?" I asked. "The major has been reading them for the last month. I'll ask him to-night to let you have them next."

"I positively refuse to read those precious books," he declared.

He stopped and bowed most profoundly, and I clapped my hands and danced a little pas seul right there in the ilex garden. He showed his astonishment openly, but if he was shocked, no doubt he put it down as one of the family's Americanisms.

"Brave!" I cried. "Let's shake hands on that. They are horrid books—aren't they?—although I never have dared to say so before. We neither of us like 'Miss Giles' nor 'Fair Haven.' . . . Now what do you like?"

"I like rowing and shooting and polo," he said boyishly. "And you?"

"All of those and tennis and swimming and motors," I answered promptly.

Then his face changed and the smile faded.

"The major doesn't like motors, you know," he explained. "I do, but he is a bit old-fashioned not old in years, you know. Still, he doesn't like a motor."

"Neither does mother," I told him. "So you see they are splendidly matched."

He nodded, hesitated a moment, then: "I've never met your mother," he confessed. "When I got the major's letter last week, in Rome, saying he was going to marry an American lady, frankly I was a bit cast for Bedlam. You see, I had never dreamed of such a thing it was such a shock. Then some American friends told me Frank Calhoun was trembled and taught the reviews to read en route. Of course I knew I'd meet you here this afternoon at the princess's garden party, but I tried to put off the evil hour as long as I could. I was hiding when the princess found me here in the ilex garden. I had made up my mind from the moment I heard about 'Miss Giles' that we could never be friends. The major's a dear old boy, and I'd do a heap for him, but 'Miss Giles'—"

"Is a pretty bad old girl, I know," I nodded. "But what can we do? Since mother wrote it, and the major is marrying it—why—"

He caught my wrist and stood up towering so far above me that unconsciously I stood up, too and even then I only reached to his shoulder.

"Who are you, please?" he asked, with a queerlike break in his voice. "Didn't the princess say aren't you Frank Calhoun?"

"Yes. You think that's a funny name for a girl—another Americanism, maybe? Should have been a boy and I wasn't. But mother named me for daddy just the same, a little thing like that doesn't bother a literary parent, you know."

"Good heavens, if your mother literary too?" he gasped. "Two in one family? Has she ever written a 'Miss Giles' or a 'Fair Haven?' The major can't know that."

Perhaps it was the ruddy sunglow that came down from the china-blue sky, or perhaps it was the scent of the violets or the nearness of the ilex, but whatever it was I was all at sea for a moment. I couldn't get my bearings—just couldn't.

"Let me sit down for a minute, please," I begged. "There, that's better. Now what were you saying—something about two 'Miss Gileses' in one family? No, no; not even in America, Eric Roscom! I read the proof-sheets, but mother—"

"Look here, Stop, just for a moment," he cried. "Now, once and for all, who wrote those famous American novels, Miss—"

"Mother did," I gasped weakly. "She wrote them and she named me Frank, and she's going to marry the major. Don't look at me like that. I'm only Frank Calhoun. Mother is Mrs. Frank Calhoun, and she drops the Mrs. when she writes." I explained. "Oh, don't ask me anything more or I shall scream. But ask the major, ask the princess. I will take you and present you to mother. I have never written even a telegram in all my life, and I'm not going to marry anybody."

He wiped his brow, looked at me, and smiled. "You American girls are always so positive," he said "But I'm glad to hear there is not some one back home, just the same."

Just then the princess' voice came to us from the little gate-clicking gate. "Are you still there in the ilex garden, you folksies?" she called

Eric Roscom turned to me, a sudden light shining in his eyes. "Are we?" he asked, "or is this paradise?"

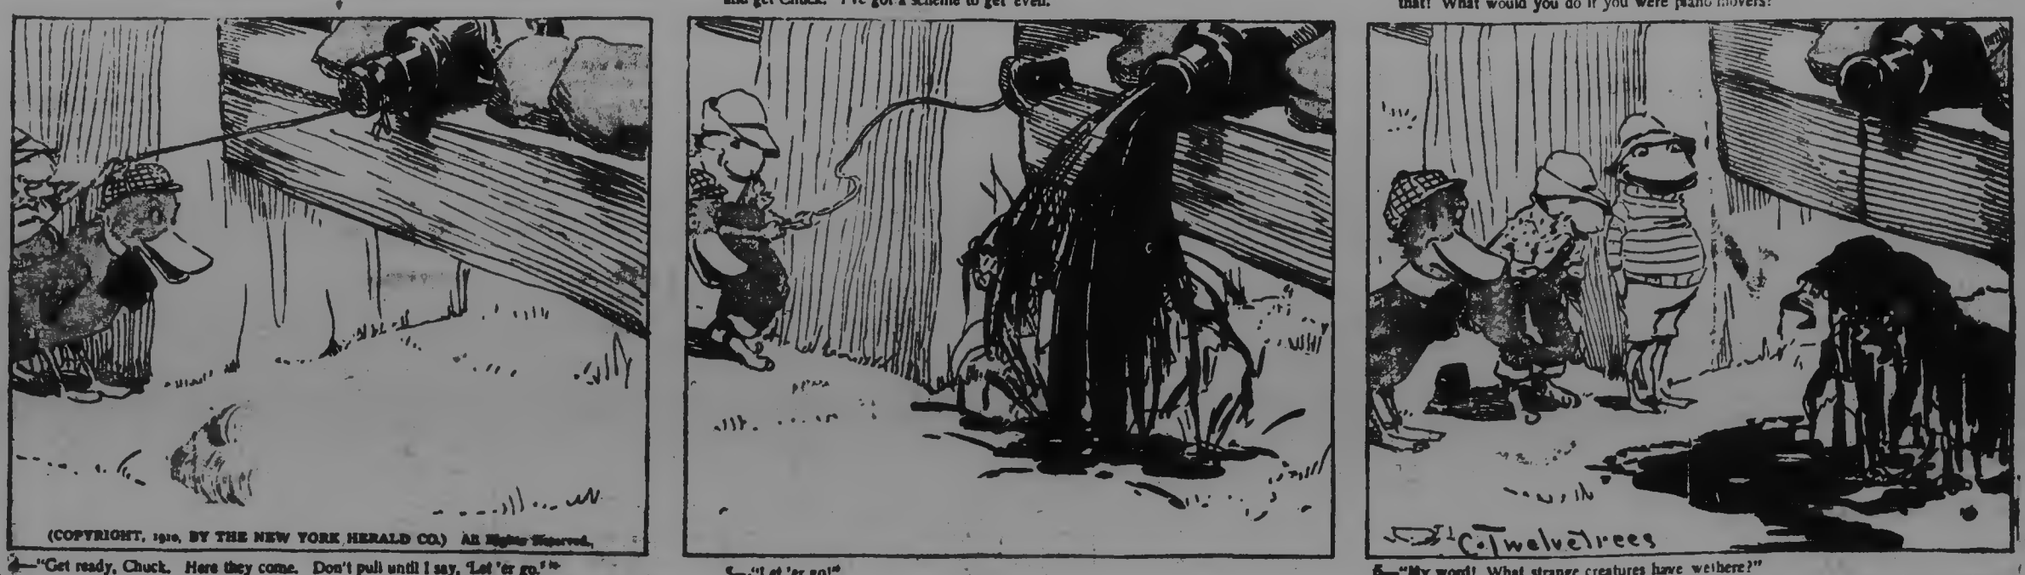
2—"Mad? I should say that I was mad. Why, I gave those Van Cluck twins half of my pie this morning and now they make insulting remarks about my friends. Let's go down and get Chuck. I've got a scheme to get even."

3—"Say, how much farther is it, Johnny? This thing is getting heavy."
"What's the matter with you fellows, anyway? Making a fuss over a little thing like that! What would you do if you were piano movers?"



4—"Get ready, Chuck. Here they come. Don't pull until I say, 'Let 'er go.'"

5—"Let 'er go!"

6—"My word! What strange creatures have we there?"
"Is that their natural shade, or is it dirt? The breed looks like a mixture of crow and catfish."
"Well, I don't like their looks. It's a breed I don't care to know anything about. Let's move away from here."

The Ilex Garden

A Short Story.

Anyway, they came bunched, and that was some comfort. Eh? Well, first off there was the lovers, then there was Harold; and it was only the combination that saved me from developin' an ingrowin' grouch.

You can guess who it was accumulated the lovers. Why, when Sadie comes back from Bar Harbor and begins tellin' me about 'em, you'd thought she'd been left something in a will, she's so pleased.

Seems there was these two young ladies, friends of some friends of hers, that was bein' just as miserable as they could be up there. One was visitin' the other, and, as I made out from Sadie's description, they must have been havin' an awful time, livin' in one of them eighteen-room cottages built on a point puttin' a mile or so out into the ocean, with nothin' but yachts and motor boats and saddle horses and tennis courts and so on to amuse themselves with.

I inspected some of them places when I was up that way not long ago. joints where they get their only information about hot waves by readin' the papers, and I can just imagine how I could suffer puttin' in a summer there. Say, some folks don't know when they're well off, do they?

And what do you suppose the trouble with 'em was? Why, Bobbie and Charlie was missin'. Honest, that's all the place lacked to make it a suburb Paradise. But that was enough for the young ladies; for each of 'em was sportin' a diamond ring on the proper finger, and, as they confides to Sadie, what was the use of havin summer at all, if one's fiance could be there?

Bobbie and Charlie, it appears, was slavin' away in the city, one tryin' to convince Papa that he'd be a real addition to Wall Street, and the other trainin' with Uncle for a job as vice-president of a life insurance company. So what did Helen and Marjorie care about sea breezes and picture postal scenery? Once a day they climbed out to separate perches on the rocks to read letters from Bobbie and Charlie, and the rest of the time they put in comparin' notes and helpin' each other be miserable.

"Ah, quit it, Sadie!" says I, interruptin' the sad tale. "Do you want to make me cry?"

"Well they were wretched, even if you don't believe it," says she; "so I just told them to come right down here for the rest of the season."

"What-a-!" says I. "Not here?"

"Why not?" says Sadie. "The boys can run up every afternoon and have dinner with us and stay over Sunday, and—and it will be just lovely. You know how much I like to have young people around. So do you too."

"Yes, that's all right," says I; "but—"

"Oh, I know," says she. "This isn't matchmaking, though. They're already engaged and it will be just delightful to have them with us. Now won't it?"

"Maybe it will," says I. "We ain't ever done this wholesale before; so I ain't sure."

Someway, I had a hunch that two pair of lovers knockin' around the premises at once might be most too much of a good thing; but, as long as I couldn't quote any authorities, I didn't feel like keepin' on with the debate.

I couldn't object any to the style of the young ladies when they shewed up; for they was both in the queen class, tall and willowy and sweet faced. One could tease opera airs out of the piano in great shape, and the other had quite some of a voice; so the prospects were fer a few weeks of lively and entertainin' evenin's at the McCabe mansion. I had the program all framed up too, me out on the veranda with my heels on the rail, the windows open, and inside the young folks strikin' up the melodies and makin' merry gen'rally.

Bobbie and Charles made more or less of a hit with me too when they first called, good, husky, clean built young gents that passed out the cordial grip and remarked real hearty how much they appreciated our great kindness askin' 'em up.

"Don't mention it," says I. "It's a fad of mine."

Anyway it looked like a good game to be in on, seein' there wa'n't any objections from any of the families. Made me feel bright and chirky, just to see 'em there, so that night at dinner I cut loose with some real cute poshes for the benefit of the young people. You know how easy it is to be humorous with some of the snappiest I had in stock, and I was watchin' for the girls to pick up and accuse me of bein' an awful kidder, when all of a sudden I tumbles to the fact that I ain't holdin my audience.

Say, they'd started up a couple of conversations on their own hook—kind of side issue, soft pedal dialogues—and they wa'n't takin' the slightest notice of my brilliant efforts. At the other end of the table Sadie is havin' more or less the same experience; for every time she tries to cut in with some cheerful observation she finds she's addressin' either Marjorie's left shoulder or Bobbie's right.

"Eh, Sadie?" says I across the centrepiece. "What was that last of yours?"

"It doesn't matter," says she. "Shall we have coffee in the library, girls, or outside? I say Helen, shall we have—I beg pardon, Helen, but would you prefer—"

"What we seem to need most, Sadie," says I as she gives it up, "is a table megaphone."

Nobody hears this suggestion, though, not even Sadie. I was lookin' fer the fun to begin after dinner,—the duets and the solos and the quartets—but the first thing Sadie and I know we are occupyin' the libr'y all by ourselves, with nothing doing in the merry music line.

"Of course," says she, "they want a little time by themselves."

"Sure!" says I. "Half-hour out for the reunion."

It lasts some longer, though. At the end of an hour I thinks I'll put in the rest of the wait watchin' the moon come up ort of Long Island Sound from my fav'rite corner of the veranda; but when I gets there I finds it's occupied.

"Excuse me," says I, and beats it around to the other side, where there's a double rocker that I can generally be comfortable in. Hanged if I didn't come near sittin' slam down on the second pair, that was snuggled up close there in the dark!

"Aha!" says I in my best comic vein. "So here's where you are, eh? Fine night, ain't it?"

There's a snicker from the young lady, a grunt from the young gent; but nothing else happens in the way of a glad response. So I chases back into the house.

"It's lovely out, isn't it?" says Sadie.

"Yes," says I; "but more or less mushy in spots."

With that we starts in to sit up for 'em. Sadie says we got to because we're doin' the chaperon act. And, say, I've seen more excitin' games. I read three evenin' papers clear through, from the weather forecast to the bond quotations, and I finished by goin' sound asleep in my chair. I don't know whether Bobbie and Charlie caught the milk train back to town or not; but they got away sometime before breakfast.

"Oh, well" says Sadie, chokin' off a yawn as she pours the coffee, "this was their first evening together, you know. I suppose they had a lot to say to each other."

"Must have had," says I. "I shouldn't think they'd have to repeat that performance for a month."

Next night, though, it's the same thing, and the next, and the next. "Poor things!" thinks I. "I expect they're afraid of being guyed." So, just to show how sociable and friendly I could be, I tries buttin' in on these lonely teeter-tates. First I'd hunt up one couple and submit some samples of my best chatter—gettin about as much reply as if I was ringin' Central with the wire down. Then I locates the other pair, drags a rocker over near 'em, and tries to make the dialogue three handed. They stands it for a minute or so before decidin' to move to another spot.

Honest, I never expected to feel lonesome right at home entertainin' guests; but I was gettin' acquainted with the sensation. There's no musical doings, no happy groups and gay laughter about the house; nothing but now and then a whisper from dark corners, or the creak of the porch swings.

"Gee! but they're takin' their spoonin' serious, ain't they?" says I to Sadie. "And how popular we are with 'em! Makes me feel almost like I ought to put on a gag and sit down cellar in the coalbin."

"Pooh!" says Sadie, makin' a bluff she didn't mind. "Do let them enjoy themselves in their own way."

"Sure I will," says I. "Only this chaperon business is gettin' on my nerves. I don't feel like a host here; I feel more like a second story man dodgin' the night watchman."

There wa'n't any signs of a change, either. When they had to be around where we was they had hardly a word to say and acted bored to death; and it must have taxed their brains, workin' up all them cute little schemes for leaving us on a siding so they could pair off. Course, I've seen engaged couples before; but I have never met any that had the disease so hard. And this bein' shunned like I had somethin' catchin' was new to me. I begun to feel like I was ninety years old and in the way.

Sunday afternoon was the limit, though. Sadie had planned to take them all for a motor trip; but they declines with thanks. Would they rather go out on the water? No, they didn't care for that either. All they seems to want is to wander around two by two, where we ain't. And at that Sadie loses some of her enthusiasm for havin' bunches of lovers a-round.

"Humph!" I hears her remark as she watches Bobbie and Marjorie sidestep her and go meanderin' off down a path to the rocks.

A little while later I happens to stroll down to the summerhouse with the Sunday paper, and as I steps in one door Charlie and Helen slip out by the other. They'd seen me first. "Well, well!" says I. "I never knew before how unentertainin' I could be."

And I was just wonderin' how I could relieve my feelin's without eatin' a fuzzy worm, like the boy that nobody loved, when I hears footsteps approachin' through the shrubb'ry. I looks up, to find myself bein' inspected by a weedy, long legged youth. He's an odd lookin' kid, with dull reddish hair, so many freckles that his face looks rusty, and a pair of big blue black eyes that gazes at me serious.

"Well, son," says I, "where did you drop from?"

"My name is Harold Burbank Fitzmorris," says he, "and I am visiting with my mother on the adjoining estate."

"That sounds like a full description Harold," says I. "Did you stray off or was you sent?"

"I trust you don't mind," says he, "but I am exploring."

"Explore away then," says I, "so long as you don't tramp through the flower beds."

"Oh, I wouldn't think of injuring them," says he. "I am passionately fond of flowers."

"You don't say!" says I.

"Yes," says Harold, droppin' down easy on the bench alongside of me. "I love Nature in all her moods. I am a poet, you know."

"Eh?" says I. "Ain't you beginnin' sort of young?"

"Nearly all the great men of literature," comes back Harold as prompt as if he was speakin' a piece, "have begun their careers by writing verse. I presume mine might be considered somewhat immature; but I am impelled from within to do it. All that will pass however, when I enter on my serious work."

"Oh, then you've got a job on the hook, have you?" says I.

"I expect," says Harold, smilin' sort of indulgent and runnin' his fingers careless through his thick coppery hair, "to produce my first novel when I am twenty. It will have a sombre theme, something after the manner of Turgenieff. Do you find Turgenieff very stimulatin?"

"Harold," says I, "all them Hungarian wines are more or less heady, and a kid like you shouldn't monkey with any of 'em."

He looked almost pained at that. "You're chaffing me now, I suppose," says he. "That sort of thing, though, I never indulge in. Humour, you know, is but froth on the deep sea of thought. It has never seemed to me quite worth one's while. You will pardon my frankness I know."

"Harold," says I, "you're a wizard: So it's nix on the josh, eh?"

"What singular metaphors you employ!" says he. "Do you know I can scarcely follow you. However, colloquial language does not offend my ear. It is only when I see it in print that I shudder."

"Me too," says I. "I'm just as sore on these foreign languages as anyone. So you're visitin' next door eh? Enjoyin' yourself?"

That was a plain cue for Harold Burbank to launch out on the story of his life; but, say, he didn't need any such encouragement. He was a willin' and ready converser, Harold was; and—my!—what a lot of classy words he did have on tap! First off I wondered how it was a youngster like him could dig up so many; but when I'd heard a little more about him I could account for it all.

He'd cut his teeth, as you might say, on the encyclopedia. Harold's father had been a professor of dead languages, and I guess he must have died of it. Anyway, Mother was a widow, and from things Harold dropped I judged she was more or less frisky, spendin' her time at bridge and chasin' teas and dinner parties. It was clear she wa'n't any highbrow, such as Father must have been. All old. He made no bones of sayin' so.

"Why pretend to approve of one's parent," says he, "when approval is undeserved?"

There was a lot of other folks that Harold disapproved of too. In fact, he was a mighty critical youth, only bein' able to entertain a good opinion of but one certain party. At any other time I expect he'd have given me an earache; but I'd been handed so much silence by our double Romeo-Juliet bunch that most any kind of conversation was welcome just then. So I lets him spiel away.

And, say, he acts like he was hungry for the heance. Why, he gives me his ideas on every subject you could think of, from the way Napoleon got himself started on the toboggan, to the folly of eatin' fried ham for breakfast. He sure was a wonder, that kid! Two solid hours we chinned there in the summerhouse, and it was almost by main strength I broke away for a one o'clock dinner.

Then, just as I'd settled comf'table on the veranda in the afternoon, he shows up and begins again. There was nothin' diffident or backward about Harold. He didn't have any doubts about whether he was welcome or not, and his confidence about bein' able to entertain was amazin'.

It didn't do any good to throw out hints that perhaps he was bein' missed at home, or to yawn and pretend you was sleepy. He was as persistent as a mosquito singin' its even' song and most as irritatin'. Twice I gets up and pikes off, tryin' to shake him; but Harold trails right along too. Maybe I'd yearned for conversation. Well, I was gettin' it.

At last I grows desp'rate, and in about two minutes more he would have been led home to Mother with the request that she tether him on her side of he fence, when I sees two of the lovers strollin off to find a nook that wa'n't preempted by the other pair. And all of a sudden I has this rosy thought.

"Harold," says I, "it's most too bad, your wastin' all this flessy time on me, who can't appreciate its fine points as I should, when there go some young people who might be tickled to death to have you join 'em. Suppose you try cheerin' 'em up?"

"Why," says Harold, "I had not observed them before. Thank you for the suggestion. I will join them at once."

Does he? Say, for the next couple of hours I had the timeof my life watchin' the maneuvers. First off I expect they must have thought him kind of cute, same as I did; but it wa'n't long before they begun tryin' to lose him. If they shifted positions once, they did a dozen times, from the summerhouse to the rocks then up to the veranda and back again, with Harold Burbank taggin right along and spoutin' his best. He tackles first one pair, and then the other, until finally they all retreats into the house. Harold hesitates a little about follerin' through the door after 'em, until I waves my hand cordial.

"Make yourself right to home, Harold," says I. "Keep them cheered up."

Not until he drives the girls off to their rooms and has Bobbie and Charlie glarin' murderous at him, does he quit the sport and retire for supper.

"Come over again this evenin,' says I. "You're makin' a hit."

Harold thanks me some more and says he will. He's a great one to keep his word too. Bobbie and Marjorie have hardly snuggled up in one end of a hammock to watch the moon do things to the waveleta before here is Harold, with a fresh line of talk that he's been on deliverin' while the mood is on.

Gettin' no answer from his audience didn't bother him a bit; fer passin' out the monologue is his strong suit. Not to seem partial, he trails down Charlie and Helen and converses with them too. Course, all this occurrin' outside, I couldn't watch everything that took place; but I sits in the libr'y with Sadie a lot more contented than I'd been before that week.

And when Marjorie drifts in alone, along about nine o'clock, and goes to drummin' on the piano, I smiles. Ten minutes later Helen appears too; and it's only when neither of the boys show up that I begins wonderin'. I asks no questions; but goes out on a scoutin trip. There's nobody on the veranda at all. Down by the waterfront, though, I could hear voices, and I goes sleuthin, in that direction.

"Yes," I could hear Harold sayin' as I got most to the boat landin', "the phosphorescence that ignorant sailors attribute to electricity in the air is really a minute marine animal which—"

I expect I'll never know the rest; for just then there's a break in the lecture.,

"One, two, three—now!" comes from Bobbie, and before Harold can let out a single squeal they've grabbed him firm and secure, one by the heels and the other by the collar, and they've begun sousin' him up and down off the edge of the float. It was high tide too.

"Eggle-guggle! Wow!" remarks Harold between splashes.

"That's right," observes Charles through his teeth. "Swallow a lot of it, you windbag! It'll do you good."

Course, these young guests was guests of mine, and I hadn't interfered before with their particular way of enjoyin' themselves, so I couldn't begin now. But after they was through, and a draggled, chokin', splutterin' youth had gone beatin' it up the path and over towards the next place, I strolls down to meet 'em as they are comin' up to the house.

"Hope you didn't see what happened down there just now, Professor," says Bobbie.

"Me?" says I. "Well, if I did I can forget it quick."

"Thanks, old man!" says both of 'em, pattin' me friendly on the shoulder.

"The little beast!" adds Charles. "He had the nerve to say you had put him up to it. That's what finally earned him his ducking, you know."

"Well, well!" says I. Such a nice spoken youngster too!"

"Huh!" says Bobbie. "I suppose there' be no end of a row about this when he gets home with his tale; but we'll stand for it. Meanwhile let's go up and get the girls to give us some music."

Say, I don't believe Harold ever mentioned it to a soul. It's a funny thing too, but he hasn't been over here since. And someway, gettin' better acquainted with the boys in that fashion, made it pleasanter all round.

But no more entertainin' lovers for us! Harolds aint common enough.

Clean Within!

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Purify the Blood and Prolong Life

Vigorous health at 70 due to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

If as much intelligent care were given to keeping the body clean and pure within as well as without we would see more healthy, vigorous old men and women. The daily bath does its part by keeping the pores of the skin open so that they throw off much of the body's impurities, but it is even more important that the bowels and kidneys should be kept regular and active.

If the bowels fail, as they often do late in life, to move regularly at least once a day, the waste matter from the food accumulates, decays, poisons the system and upsets the stomach.

If the kidneys are sluggish the impurities which they should filter from the blood remain and cause rheumatism.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills regulate the bowels, stimulate the kidneys and open up the pores of the skin. The result is a body clean within—pure, red blood—good digestion—and a hale and hearty old age.

Three generations have proved the value of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, and their sale is steadily increasing all over the world.

NIP IT IN THE BUD.

First Appearance of Dandruff a Forerunner of Future Baldness.

That such is the case has been conclusively proven by scientific research. Prof. Unna, the noted European skin specialist, declares that dandruff is the burrowed up cuticle of the scalp, caused by parasites destroying the vitality in the hair bulb. The hair becomes lifeless, and, in time, falls out. This can be prevented.

Newbro's Herpicide kills this dandruff germ, and restores the hair to its natural softness and abundance.

Herpicide is now used by thousands of people—all satisfied that it is the most wonderful hair preparation on the market to-day.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

For sale by McDermid and Jury, druggists; also Payne's drug store. $1 bottles guaranteed.

Iron Pens.

The iron pen mentioned by Job in the book of that name in the Bible is supposed to have been a steel graver used for cutting inscriptions on stone.

Rainwater.

Pliny said that thunder is rarely heard in winter and that the great fertility of the soil is due to the frequency of thunder rain in spring. Science has discovered the cause of the nourishment in rainwater to be the presence of great quantities of nitrogen and ammonia in the thunder rain and in hail.

Heat and Cold.

Man is able to stand extreme cold better than extreme heat, more persons being killed by sunstroke than by freezing.

A Fierce Flame.

The oxygen acetylene blowpipe produces the highest temperature of any flame known as a product of combustion, 6,300 degrees, 1,200 degrees higher than the oxyhydrogen flame and almost as hot as the electric arc.

A Long Wharf.

One of the longest wharves in the world, almost a mile in length, or, to be exact, 4,700 feet, is at Port Los Angeles, Cal. It extends into the Pacific in a long serpentine curve.

Big Merger of Power.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The advance of Montreal Power to 150 and over, and the calling of a meeting to-day by that company, leads to the belief that there is a grand merger of the Montreal Street Railway, Montreal Power and Shawinigan Power Companies on the tapis.

It is stated "on the street" that the Street Railway will go in at 250, Power at 170 and Shawinigan at 125, with a working understanding with Canadian Power, whose friends have captured, perhaps, the absolute control of Street Railway.

Conference of Catholic Charities.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Everything is in readiness at the Catholic University of America for the first national conference of Catholic Charities, which will begin a four days' session next Sunday. ## FISHING ON SUNDAY.

Lords' Day Alliance Making It Hot For Toronto Party.

Whitby, Sept. 20.—The Lord's Day Alliance is actively responsible for a large party from Toronto being arrested in Frenchman's Bay Sunday afternoon.

The party were in half a dozen boats busily engaged hauling in bass and perch, with plenty of bait on board, when the officers appeared during the afternoon in another boat. One boatload containing two young ladies and a male escort escaped by landing on shore. The fair ones waved their handkerchiefs in a farewell to the constables and disappeared amongst the shrubbery.

Those arrested will be tried here on Friday before the police magistrate, and are: R. W. Fraser, Alf. Vigo, G. A. McDonald, Mrs. Fitter, Pat Hare, Mrs. Johnson, Wm. Fox, Geo. Sheppard W. London, C. Swinson and James Corbett.

Hope for Obligatory Arbitration.

Boston, Sept. 20.—An unlimited treaty of obligatory arbitration between the United States and Great Britain is the hope of the American Peace Society, as a result of the proposal that the two countries join in 1914 in a celebration to observe the completion of 100 years of peace between them.

The plans for a celebration commensurate with the position among nations of the countries directly interested, and with the occasion, have not yet approached the point, it is said, where details have been definitely discussed, but it is proposed that the observance of the centenary be exclusively along the lines of peace without military forms of demonstration, and that it include a parade of the merchant marine of both nations, as well as features to commemorate the growth and mutual assistance of educational institutions of Canada and the United States.

Murdered Father.

Gull Lake, Sask., Sept. 20.—Lewis McBride murdered his father Friday evening in a drunken frenzy. Both occupied a homestead ten miles from the city.

McBride and his son had been in town drinking freely. They returned to their homestead shack and engaged in a drunken brawl during which Lewis grabbed a double-barrelled shot gun, and discharged the contents of one barrel into his father's stomach.

The shot brought the younger man to his senses, and, realizing what he had done, he immediately set out to town for medical aid, but it was too late. Upon explaining what had occurred at the homestead, he was arrested by Constable Fisher of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

TELLS OF SEEING BODY OF THE LATE MRS. DELINE SHORTLY BEFORE THE POST MORTEM

Neck Was Badly Swollen and Bore Marks Like Would Be Inflicted by Man in the Act of Choking a Person ---Mr. John Cochrane, of Belmont Township Believes Woman Was Murdered.

Mr. John Cochrane, of the township of Belmont, was in the city this morning and in conversation with the Examiner, stated thta the country around there was greatly worked up over the recent sensation, namely, the finding of the dead body of Mrs. Hugh Deline on Thursday night last. He stated that he had seen the body of the deceased a short while before the post mortem. He said the neck was badly swollen and bore marks, such as made by a man's hands, in the act of choking. Mr. Cochrane was of the opinion thta Mrs. Deline had been murdered. He certainly did not think she had died from natural causes. Mr. Cochrane has lived in the township of Belmont for the past forty years. His home is about two miles and a half from the Delines, but he said he had never seen them until after the discovery of the body.

BARN AND CONTENTS WERE COMPLETELY DESTROYED

Another large fire carried destruction in its path in the suburbs of the city last night when Dr. Rogers' V. S. S. barn was completely destroyed by fire. The barn is situated on Charlotte street near Mr. G. W. Hatton's home and within fifty feet of it. is the doctor's new house, which was completed only recently. Dr. and Mrs. Rogers have been living in a tent all summer while their new house was being built and only moved into their home a week or so ago. Unfortunately they had moved only enough of their household effects to furnish the kitchen and two bedrooms, the remainder being in the barn and meeting the fate of the numerous other articles of value. All of the doctor's surgical appliances, including throwing and lifting harness and instruments, as well as a large stock of drugs, were destroyed. A large number of valuable poultry, a buggy and two cutters, a fur overcoat, some robes and many other such articles were consumed by the flames.

Good luck is all that can be attributed to the escape of the horse. The doctor had been in the habit of tying it outside the barn in a little shed, and last night, although tied in the usual place, it managed to get loose, and thus saved its life. A new buggy which Dr. Rogers usually puts inside the barn, was left out, so it also was saved from the fire.

The conflagration started about 3 o'clock this morning, and the cause is supposed to be due to the electric wiring.

The total loss will reach over $1,600. Very little insurance was carried. The bricade was on the scene of the blaze in good time but no water was obtainable and the fire had gained too great a headway for chemicals to be of any use. The men kept watch on the surrounding buildings to see the fire did not spread. Chief Howard and one of the firemen remained at the scene until 5.30 this morning. They had two chemicals, to be used in case the fire should break out any place else. The building was a large one ,and this morning large cinders and sparks were scattered all over, even to Charlotte street, and where the barn stood there was nothing but a heap of smouldering ruins.

YOUNG GIRL SAW MURDER

Chicago Patent Medicine Man Shoots His Business Rival—"It Was a Case of My Life or His and I Was the Quicker."

Examiner Special.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—A long standing business rivalry between two men was brought to a climax yesterday when Dr. James M. Rainey, a patent medicine manufacturer, shot and killed Lauen V. Aikins, the President of the Dr. Rainey Medicine Company, in his office, 454 Lake Street.

The principal witness to the tragedy is Miss Celia Heffelinger, 22 years old, bookkeeper for the medicine company headed by Atkins. Dr. Rainey's story of self-defence must stand or fall.

As soon as he had shot Atkins, Dr. Rainey telephoned the police and said he had just killed a man and wanted to give himself up. He was arrested in the medicine company's office.

Atkins was removed to the County Hospital and died while being carried to the operating table. The bullet entered the forehead and penetrated his brain. He was unconscious from the time hewas shot, and the police were unable to get a story of the shooting fromhim.

The shooting, according to the police, was a result o fa controversy over mail which Rainey alleged belonged to him. Atkins and Rainey were formerly business partners in the Dr. Rainey Medicine Company, which was organized about four years ago. About a month ago, after much dissension, Atkins, it is said, obtained control of the stock of the medicine company and Dr. Rainey resigned his office as secretary and quit the company.

On the floor below the Dr. Rainey Medicine Company Dr. Rainey started to manufacture, it is said, medicine under the name of Dr. James M. Rainey, Inc. In this way, the police say, the mail to the two concerns of almost similar names at the sameaddress was often delivered to the wrong firm, with the result that Dr. Rainey's orders for medicine, it is said, were sometimes filled by the other firm and vice versa.

It was this trouble over the mail, Dr Rainey told the police, that caused him to go to Atkins' office yesterday afternoon. The mail, he is said to have told the police, was in the possession of Atkins' assistants, and that he went to Atkins and demanded that it be turned over to him. To this, he said, Atkins refusing to comply, and an argument ensued, in which Atkins, Dr. Rainey declared, reached for a revolver which he knew Atkins kept in his desk drawer.

"It was a case of my life or his, and I was the quicker," said Dr Rainey.

READY FOR CAMPAIGN

The First Gun in Y.M.C.A. Membership Contest Will be Fired To-night---Fight Begins To-morrow—500 Members in 10 Days the Aim

BANQUET TO-NIGHT

All is excitement around the Y.M.C.A. building to-day, for there will be a banquet to-night, which will inaugurate the biggest membership campaign ever held in connection with the Association.

The task the young men have set themselves to is a huge one to secure 500 new members in ten days. This is easily written but it remains to be seen if it will be easily done. However, the young men feel confident that there are sufficient sensible young men in this city to make it possible to get at least that number.

At the banquet to-night the address of the evening will be delivered by Mr. George A. Warburton, of Toronto, a man who is well worth hearing, and he will have an audience of 100 men to speak to. There will be a good musical programme, both vocal and instrumental, and a splendid spread is assured.

Committees are now distributed over the whole city, and each canvasser will make a definite report of the result of each man seen. Thus, the whole city yill be covered. Tomorrow the men will get their coats off and get busy. The men feel that they will yield them plenty of returns for the money they invest, and they are not afraid to go after the best men in this city to secure their fee.

A DANCE OF DEATH

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—While a score of children were playing "Ring Around a Rosey" and tag in the rear of the chanoof Isaac Goldberg, at No. 150 Smith Street, Corona, L.I., last evening, two little girls attempted a fancy dance on the cover of a cistern. The wood broke and they drowned in fifteen feet of water.

They were Rebecca Goldberg, four and one-half years old, daughter of Mrs. Isaac Goldberg, and Tessie Sutriani, ten years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sutriani, of No. 14 6Smith Street.

The other children ran in all directions crying for help. More than two hundred men, women and children hurried to the rear of the Goldberg home.

Policeman Louis Settiz found it difficult to restrain relatives of the children from jumping into the cistern. He procured a rake and soon brought the bodies to the surface of the ground.

LITTLE DAMAGE DONE

Considerable excitement was caused at the corner of Brock and George street this morning when the delivery wagon of J. W. Boorman, baker and confectioner, was struck by a street car and upset. Fortunately, however, the damage was slight and no one was hurt. A Park street car, south bound was approaching the crossing at a slow rate of speed when the driver of the bakery waggon drove up Brock street and attempted to cross in front of the car. The horse got across all right, but the fender of the car struck the front wheel of the waggon overturning the vehicle and upsetting the driver who escaped unhurt. The rig was little damanged and the chief injury was to the contents. A crowd quickly gathered and a score of willing hands helped to right the vehicle.

A very serious accident was averted by a mere inch, on Charlotte street at 12 o'clock to-day, when two young men were riding along on their bicycles, going west. It happened just in front of the Snowden House. The young men in question were wheeling along side by side, when an auto loomed up in view, going at a pretty rapid rate of speed; just when it was about ten yards in front of them it swerved towards them and they turned out to avoid a collision. In the action of turning, the wheels got caught, and both of the young men were thrown violently to the ground, the auto just missing them. They picked themselves up, neither appearing to having sustained very serious injuries, and soon got out of sight.

MISUNDERSTANDING OVER THE AGREEMENT WAS CONSIDERED REQUEST NOT MET BY CITY

Resolution of Manufacturers' Committee Did Not Include All that the Peterborough Canoe Company Had Requested---A Second Meeting Had to be Called---Looked Over Property---The Agreement Now.

A misunderstanding arose over the agreement between the city and the Peterborough Canoe Company as to the transfer of a certain piece of property to the company, in exchange for fifty feet of a right of way, given the city by the Canoe Company, and a meeting of the Manufacturers' committee had to be held last evening to again go over the matter. Those present were Ald. Gillespie, chairman, Mayor Morrow, Ald. Bradburn, Turner and Duffus. The committee at their last meeting, recommended that the city give the company 111 by 21 feet on King street, immediately south of their premises, in order to make certain extensions to the factory. However, it appears that Mr. Rogers had in his letter and had marked in a blue print, sent to the Council, a request for 212 feet, six inches of land in depth, to the water front, in for which he offered the city 50 feet south along the water front across his property, which could be converted into a roadway, connected with King and Sherbrooke streets, when it was filled in. This property offered by Mr. Rogers is mainly a strip of water at present running south from King street to the city's property at Sherbrooke, west of C.P.R. spur line.

The Misunderstanding.

At the meeting of September 14th, the committee adopted a resolution as they thought, meeting the Canoe Company's requirements, and which was read in Mr. Roger's absence, this resolution offered the company 111x21 feet of King street in return for 165x50 feet of water-covered property southward from King along the water front.

This was thought to be satisfactory by all parties concerned, but when the City Solicitor started to put the matter into legal shape, he discovered that the resolution did not cover what was asked for by Mr. Rogers in his letter to the committee and as shown on the accompanying blue print. On Mr. Roger's attention being drawn to this fact, he appended to the Mayor and Chairman, Ald. Gillespie, and asked for another meeting to open up the question again, which was called for last night.

In rediscussing the oversight, all the committee contended that they had understood the resolution to be satisfactory to Mr. Rogers, but Ald. Turner stated that while he did not go into measurements, still he thought the city was deeding the company a strip of land 21 feet wide extending west to the water's edge.

Mr. Rogers replied that his letter was plain enough, as also the blue-print ,in evidence of which the solicitor readily saw that a mistake had occurred in the wording of the resolution in question according to the letter and plan submitted him from which to draw up the legal agreement. Mr. Rogers said he had already spent $3,000 on the extension of premises for which he required the land, and were there any doubt of his getting the additional 101 feet necessary he would stop operations at once.

At this juncture the committee were dubious as to the wisdom of exchanging the additional 101 feet 212 feet 6 inches in all or a total of 3000 cubic feet in return for the 50 feet roadway above mentioned. Then, as King street narrows down at an angle from Water street to the river, there was considerable doubt if, after subtracting 61 feet in width of land for Mr. Rogers, there would remain the regulation roadway of 66 feet below the 111 feet previously granted.

At this juncture the committee decided to go down and have a look over the property under dispute. The moon was very bright and afforded a good opportunity for the committee to go over it.

The committee took a pretty thorough survey of the conditions on King street alongside the Canoe Company's premises and down to the river. The lane between the Canoe Company's premises and Mrs. English's property was looked over. It must be understood that this laneway is directly paralleled on each side by the C.P.R. property. Ald. Bradburn thought of a possible deal in the near future that he would like the city to have a fair share in when deeding away some 3,000 feet of its land. In fact he could not see any doubt but that this laneway would be subsequently acquired by the railway in question.

The Agreement.

On returning to the City Hall Ald. Bradburn asked Mr. Rogers if he would in return for the additional 101 feet he needed, give up the right he had to this lane, but the latter refused point blank. He needed it for access to his drying kiln.

Mr. Rogers said the company was making extensive additions to their premises that were but the start of a steam launch factory. This winter they would employ 15 additional hands. They were not asking for fixed assessment, a bonus or any assistance of that nature, and he thought the least they were entitled to was an exchange of the land in question as a legitimate encouragement to local manufacturing enterprise.

Ald. Duffus did not think King street at this point would ever be of sufficient importance to suffer from its width being a trifle less than 66 feet.

Ald. Turner moved, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the resolution of September 14th be rescinded, and the Peterboorugh Canoe Company be granted the 212 feet 6 inches by 21 feet of King street asked for, providing the same is used for manufacturing purposes only. Also manufactured land is sold to the C. P. R. Co. or any other concern, the same shall revert to the city.

Ald Bradburn moved in amendment, that the 111 feet east of what was arranged for on September 14th, be given in return for the company's rights over the lane between their property and Mrs. English's premises.

Ald. Bradburn could get no seconder to his amendment, all the remainder of the committee voting for Ald. Turner's motion.

BELLIGHAM, SEPT. 19.—Pending identification by the provincial police of British Columbia, the man captured by two fire fighters near Ferndale Monday and claimed to be George Reid, the Chayburn, B.C., wife murederer, then William Berrill, of Bay City, Mich., will be held by the local authorities.

Yesterday the British Columbia authorities were notified by wire that Reid, or Berrill, was being held here, asking that an officer acquainted with the murderer be sent here for identification. Reid was caught as he emerged from smoke and flames of the forest fires raging near Ferndale. He was exhausted and nearly overcome from smoke, heat, and starvation.

"Yes, the jig's up. I'm the man" was the manner in which the prisoner answered Clark and Roper, his captors, in reply to a question whether or not he was the man who murdered his wife, and known as Reid.

Employees of the Sheriff's office deny the man is Reid.

Madame Rea Calls The Athletics To Cop Series

Philadelphia to win the world's series.

That is the dope that Rea, the fortune teller( who is filling a three days' engagement at the Royal Theatre handed out yesterday in reply to a question from a newspaperman as to who would win the world's championship. She advised the inquirer to bet on the Athletics if he wished to save his bank roll. Whatever Madame Rea may know about baseball, at least she is entertaining and provided the audiences yesterday with plenty of amusement. A girl asked when she would see her future husband and was told that there were two coming to her, while a young man who inquired about his sweetheart was asked which one he meant. In addition to answering questions, Madame Rea reads palms from the stage by means of a mirror.

"For two years I suffered with Indigestion, and obtained no relief from anything I took, including several prescriptions from prominent physicians. Every meal was followed by acute pain until I feared to eat, consequently became run down for lack of nourishment. "Little Digesters" were recommended to me by a friend and I tried them with remarkable results, two boxes completely curing me. It is three months since I took any, and I have not suffered a pain, no matter how heartily I eat. I would certainly recommend them to anybody suffering with Indigestion." (Signed) E. ## STRIKE AT THE ROOT.

Repressive measures that do not get at the root of an evil are a good deal like—in result—the city way of destroying burdocks, by cutting off the tops. This top pruning only seems to incite a more lusty growth, to cause the plants to throw out more seed-bearing shoots, so that it comes to pass that, like the man in the Scriptures, the last state is worse than the first. The only way to destroy a burdock is to destroy it at the root. We have had sermons and moral preachments by the million directed against cigarette burning; we have had the doctors denouncing it as the smudgy way to death; we have had moral undertakers utilizing cigarettes as coffin nails; we have had members of parliament burning eloquence at a cost to the country of 49 cents odd per minute. And with what result? Simply to stimulate the use of cigarettes. Last year there were manufactured in Canada and entered into consumption the fabulous total of nearly four hundred and seventy million (469,711,091) cigarettes. This is one hundred million more than the number of cigarettes made and smoked in Canada the previous year. The consumption of cigarettes the past fiscal year, ending March 31st, 1910, represents a consumption of 62.6 cigarettes for every man, woman and child in the Dominion, taking the population at 7½ millions. The foregoing figures do not show the total consumption of cigarettes. Millions are made by the smokers themselves as they are needed, by the help of a book of rice paper and a package of nicotinized chaff of some kind, or ordinary cut smoking tobacco, the latter, perhaps, the least harmful form of the vice. With all the denunciation of cigarette smoking: with knowledge of the baneful effects of this flabby vice upon, especially, growing boys; in spite of the anti-cigarette law of 1908, the habit is on the increase at the rate of a hundred million a year. The only way appears to be to curtail the habit, is to make the manufacture and importation of cigarettes unlawful and see that the law is enforced; or to so instruct the public mind and conscience that on conviction and principle the habit will decay from lack of devotees. While repressive measures may mitigate the evils of the intemperate use of strong drink as they have done to a very considerable extent, such measures appeared to have been valueless in case of minimizing the evils of cigarette smoking. In either case the only effective remedy will be to put an end to manufacture and importation, and this will not be a perfect cure. Medical men tell us and we can see for ourselves that there is an innate human craving for stimulants; if this appetite is not gratified in one form it will be done in another. The drink habit is likely to be replaced by the drug habit. It then comes to this that the only radical cure is making the man right in sentiment and principle; but it seems that the wait for the millenium will be a long one.

THRIFT.

Thrift is the faculty of making the proper use of the means that comes into our possession or control. The fibre of national character in relation to material matters, depends upon the extent to which thrift becomes a national characteristic, and upon the same cause depend the highest form of national prosperity, and the progress and national solidity of the country. One of the evils of prosperity is the tendency it creates to lavish expenditure of salaries, wages, or other forms of income; extravagant habits are acquired, and unhealthy rivalry incited between people of unequal means with generally disastrous results.

To correct the national bad habit of unthrift, on the initiative of Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, an Act was passed in 1908, establishing a system of Government annuities, the object being to encourage and assist persons of limited earnings to provide for their old age. By the periodic payment of small stated sums, the Government guarantees the payment of an annuity at a given age—an age when the earning powers cease or become lessened. A concrete example will show the benefits of the Dominion Government Annuity system.

If, for example, a man will pay into the Government 50 cents a week, from the age of 20 to the age of 60, (when his payments would cease), a total of only $26 a year, or a grand total of only $1,040, the Government will pay him, beginning at 60, and continuing for the remained of his life (if he lives to 100) a yearly income of $259.82, an amount equal every year to one-quarter of the money paid in. In other words, the investor in a Government annuity will draw interest at more than 25 per cent. on what he pays in, or the annuity represents the payment of an income, equal, less 18 cents, to the amount of interest at 5 per cent. on a sum of $5,200.

It is not necessary to point out that the annual income will increase in proportion to the payments, or to point out what an inestimable boon the government system is to the people of Canada. With it in general operation, with the people generally taking advantage of it, in another generation, we should have little, or few, or no claimants, upon public or private charity; old age would be made comfortable and happy, and without any sacrifice. The trifling weekly amount saved and paid in to the Government is now, in the vast majority of cases, wasted in the gratification of evil habits that only injure the man, or wasted on frivolous amusements that bring no lasting pleasure.

To reap the greatest national benefit from the government annuities system, it is necessary to induce the people to take advantage of it, to induce the acquirement and practice of habits of thrift. The most effective way to accomplish this—perhaps the only practicable way—is to train our children to habits of thrift, which will become a part of the character of their manhood and womanhood. This should be done in the home. We know, however, that, in the vast majority of cases, it will not be done there. Then the school, where we have the authority over and charge of the child, is the best place. The medium of teaching thrift habits and at the same time amassing a little fund that would be a big boon to many a family in time of stress, from sickness, or rather cause, is the School Savings Bank. The principle of this needs no defence; all that is needed is for school boards to put the system into operation. Our School Boards, for the support of Public, Separate, and High Schools—current expenses, sinking fund, and interest on debentures—took, this year, the large amount of $83,102.19 from the ratepayers. This is necessary in the interests of education. Our school boards, however, can give us better and greater educational value than they do for the money we pay, and without additional expenditure. By the establishment of school savings banks, they can divert from frivolous expenditure upon unnecessary or unworthy objects, a sum equal to no small percentage of the school taxes we pay. But they can do more than that; they can, at the same time, train our rising generation in habits of thrift and saving that will make them better citizens in every way when they reach maturity—make them better husbands and wives, better domestic providers and better domestic spenders and make a body of citizenship that will be the national strength of Canada a contribution to its greatest material prosperity. In this connection, attention is called to an article on this page, which, though it by no means tells all that can be told in favour of Savings Banks in our schools, tells enough to encourage and justify our School Board in taking some steps to do practical work in this direction.

ADVANTAGES AND BENEFITS OF SCHOOL SAVINGS BANKS

The following letter, with its essential value, the article quoted was written by Mr. A. W Beale, to the Whitby Gazette, and can be perused with profit by the Peterborough Board of Education:

Editor Gazette,—Visiting scores of schools, as I do every year, in various parts of the Province, I come across many interesting developments in connection with the educational system of the Province. One of the most important was that which I met with last spring in Simcoe, Ont. The chairman of the Board of Education, Dr. McIntosh, chatted with me quite freely on the matter. I hereby incorporate some of his thoughts on the subject of "Thrift," prepared by him for the Simcoe Reformer:

Carlyle says: "He who has sixpence is sovereign (to the length of sixpence) over all men; commands cooks to feed him, philosophers to teach him, kings to mount guard over him—to the length of sixpence."

One day Julius Caesar and Mark Antony were walking along one of the back streets of Rome, when they were accosted by a mendicant: "Will you please give something to a poor cripple?" Mark Antony, who always had something to offer, immediately handed the man some coin of the realm. But Caesar, who was of an inquiring as well as an acquiring turn of mind, scrutinized him closely, and said: "How are you crippled, my man?" After pocketing the legal tender the beggar replied: "Financially, sir" and disappeared along the acqueduct.
